I see men all around me in the love of what God hates, and hate of what God loves. Whosoever lives in rebellion to God is lost, whether he has heard of Christianity or not. Men without the light of God are crystallizing, and the heathen are losing their souls. I have made, said he, one missionary trip around the world, and if I could leave this country, I would go on another. I think I would go into these countries that I might not build on another man's foundation. I wish to wear out my life in maintaining Christ, the atonement, and such doctrines. They are the foundations for a universal religion. He charged his hearers to stand firm on this foundation, and not destroy the hopes of the missions. Every soul ends in paradise or perdition, and if they do not leave the world in harmony with God, they must go to perdition. Character hardens as the clay, and this life is but a probation.

In view of the fact that before the next number of this paper is issued our whole communion will have entered upon the "week of prayer and self-denial" for the purpose of raising funds for our Mission Board, the following eloquent sentences from President Young ought to make a deep impression upon everyone who reads them:

There is no truth, the realization of which is so essential to the church life of to-day, as that which is implied in the session of the Divine Head of the church at the right hand of God—"expecting until his enemies be made his footstool." It is only under the inspiration of this truth that the church can rise to that high level of faith which the exigencies of these times demand. Never since the great commission was given by the ascending Lord have the openings for evangelistic enterprise been so numerous and so inviting. To Christ, "the Desire of all nations," all nations are throwing open their gates. It would be difficult to find a solitary human tribe in the heart of which we might not plant the standard of the cross. Grave, indeed, are the responsibilities of that church which, in the clearly supernatural crisis of these times, opposes on its evangelistic and missionary executive a policy of retrenchment. Counsels of prudence are counsels of providence—the measures even of divinely inspired toil must be moulded by wisdom and moderation. No Scripture can be cited in defence of recklessness, even in the holiest enterprises; but prudence may degenerate into cowardice, a craven economy may paralyze the heroism of Christian consecration, and doors opened by the forces of prayer may be closed by unbelief. The eras of true revival have been eras of a bold and daring faith: a faith which has gallantly accepted the challenge of the Lord of Hosts—"Prove me, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." And would to God that, with prospects before us of which our fathers never dreamed, with claims upon us multiplying in pathos and power from all quarters of the globe, and with the conviction deepening within us that he on whom we trust, and for whom we work, is in all, and over all, we, as a church, could cast off the diffidence and faint-heartedness that have too easily beset us, repudiate for ever a policy of retrenchment, and resolutely, and with Christian hardihood, set ourselves, at any cost, to bring about the conversion of the world!

Busy lives, like busy waters, are generally pure. Stagnant lives, like stagnant pools, breed corruption.—W. D. Nicholas.

Dollars for Self—Dimes for God.

BY REV. J. J. HILLINGSLEY.

TEXT: Luke xii. 21.

Read the verses 13-35 inclusive. It is a description of worldliness: one who is dominated by the visible, the material, the temporal. Description of covetousness: one who lays up treasure for selfish purposes, for that self that is to be denied, for himself, as being an all-important personage, far himself, without a thought of, and in violent opposition to, the just claims of God upon his money. And last, a description of sinful folly, shown fully, and for various reasons. The description is general. The man is representative. One of a large class found in all lands and in all ages. In the government of God he is regarded as a criminal. The indictment is short, specific, but full. He is charged with being rich toward himself, poor toward God. Note closely. God is not entirely ignored by the man. Perhaps, as a Jew, he paid a part of his tithes. He gave something, enough, it may be, to satisfy a decayed conscience, to meet in part the demands of a degenerate public sentiment, and maintain a semi-respectability in matters of benevolence. But this was all. At heart, he was close, penurious, and avaricious; in life rich toward that self and poor towards God. This is the charge. It is so now.

1. Men are rich toward themselves, poor towards God. That is, men are thoughtful, careful, anxious about themselves. It is the one, prime and all-important business of life, to provide for, take care of, and put themselves on an independent footing, as regards both man and God. To attain this, men must have gold. They think they must, and so gold becomes the all-absorbing aim of life. It becomes a god. In Queen Mab, Shelley puts it thus:

"Commerce has set the mark of selfishness,
The signet of its all-enslaving power
Upon a shining ore, and called it gold.
Before this image how the vulgar great,
The vainly rich, the miserable proud,
The mob of peasants, nobles, priests and kings,
And, with blind feelings, reverence the power
That guides them to the dust of misery."

The truthfulness of the proposition advanced, one of the main thoughts of the text, may be briefly shown thus:

(1) Apply it to the governments of the world, and you find it so. Take the salaries of European monarchs. A few years since they stood as follows: The Emperor of Russia, $8,250,000; the Sultan of Turkey, $6,000,000; Napoleon III., $5,000,000; Emperor of Austria, $4,000,000; King of Prussia, $3,000,000; Victor Emmanuel, $2,400,000; Isabella of Spain, $1,800,000; Leopold of Belgium, $500,000. President Grant, of the United States, received $25,000, or a salary of $68.50 per day. The salaries of the judiciary, and of nearly all our offices of trust, are lavishly maintained by the government. We can not enumerate for want of space.

Take the cost of war. Three wars in India, for only twenty years, cost Great Britain $195,000,000, besides an equal amount spent at the same time in their wars with Burmah and China. The Crimean War cost the allies (England, France and Turkey) $400,000,000, while it is said that the same war cost Russia two millions more. An eminent French statistician said, after much study, that this war cost all the parties more than a million dollars a day, not to mention the actual waste of property, and the financial loss involved in the sacrifice of seven hundred and fifty thousand men. In blood and money his estimate is, one billion, seven hundred million dollars. The Revolutionary War cost America $350,000,000; the war with Great Britain in 1812, $120,000,000; the Florida War sent in its bill for $40,000,000; the Mexican War for $300,000,000. From January 1, 1839, to March 3, 1843, the war expenses of this government were $153,954,881, or five millions more than all the civil expenses of the government from 1789 to 1843. The enormous debt which accumulated during the late Civil War is safely put down at two billion five hundred million dollars, while the sums paid to soldiers and their families, together with other incidentals, according to Horace Greeley's estimate, amounts to three billion dollars in the sum total. I can not here go into the details of our Indian Wars. Suffice it to say that during the first half of this century they cost us $400,000,001, while we paid for the same time only $8,000,000 to educate them—one-fiftieth of the war expense. One dollar to bless, fifty dollars to curse. Up to date, so it is stated, our government has paid $500 for every Indian killed, and yet probably the bottle has killed more than the bullet. The dreadful war, the Franco-Prussian, of a few years since, cost Prussia one billion dollars, and France four billion dollars, while the destruction in Paris alone, when the final catastrophe came, amounted to $280,000,000. A single ship-of-war may cost a nation $500,000 a year, and we pay thousands of dollars for a single gun that costs from ten to three hundred dollars every time it is fired. Surely the world is rich towards itself, and the kingdom of Satan can find money enough to carry on its mission of ruin and death. Says one: "Give me the money that has been spent for war, and I will purchase every foot of land on the face of the globe. I will clothe every man in an attire that kings and queens might be proud of. I will build a school-house on every hillside, and in every valley over the whole earth. I will supply that school with competent teachers. I will build an academy in every town, and endow it; a college in every State, and fill it with professors. I will cover every hill with a church consecrated to the promulgation of the gospel, and support in its pulpit an able preacher of righteousness; so that on every Sabbath morning the chime on one hill shall answer to the chime on another around earth's broad circumference, and the voice and the song of praise shall ascend as one universal offering to heaven."

(2) Second verification. Notice what men pay for the single item of vicious and demoralizing amusements. All amusements are not sinful. The popular amusements of the age usually are; and yet they are patronized and sustained in a most extravagant way by men and women who not unfrequently, in the course of a decade, squander thousands of dollars in this direction, while, at the same time, a thousand pressing claims from the church, from God and humanity, are ignored and repudiated. At this time there are in the city of New York a half-dozen theatres, with a seating capacity of 14,000, which furnish facilities for licentiousness by "providing prostitutes with accommodations in their third tier. Take away this third tier from a theatre, and one of the chief sources of revenue is dried up. These theatres receive in the aggregate about $5,000 a night, after the season is fairly open. The saloons of the late Broadway Theatre, when first opened, were rented at $5,000 per annum, and the receipts at the office were nearly $2,000 nightly. One of the old theatres, now extinct, received $800,000 in seven years. This shows that time and money and character are not squandered in brothels, gambling hells and lottery offices alone." "In six of the many theatres in New York City, and in two places of occasional theatricals, and in one circus, there are from one to two hundred persons employed in each. The Bowery pays $1,000 to one paper for advertising, besides hand-bills, cards and posters, amounting to several thousand more. 'Hard times, indeed,' writes a correspondent; 'the theatres were full last night to overflowing, and it is reliably stated that their receipts averaged about $4,500.' These four theatres received, doubtless, not less than $1,000,000 annually, and all the theatres in New York not less than two million. This is the princely income required to meet the correspondingly profuse expenditures of these places, and gives some idea, at least, of the expensiveness of amusements. The noted actor, Kean, used to be paid $250 a night at the Drury Lane Theatre. The actors at the Park Theatre were paid from $80 to $100 a week. Prof. Bronson was offered $1,000 a week. He agreed to accept if the dissipation and the profanity of the stage could be removed, and the nuisances could be taken away. But, as that could not be done, he refused."

Furthermore, to show how willing the world is to pay for fun—for selfish, sinful, and most frequently for immoral fun—it is reliably stated that an Italian singer received $70,000 for a single season, and a nobleman has been known to pay $1,500 a year for a single box in an opera. Jenny Lind, the Swedish singer, was offered a thousand dollars a night to sing for 200 nights, and all the expenses of herself and her father paid, and a carriage always at her command. Another writer gives an aggregate of the annual cost of public amusements in New York City at $8,000,000, and the amount of intoxicating liquor sold at 10,000 drinking-places at $20,000,000, or, including time and labor wasted, and capital involved in the traffic, not less than $50,000,000.

You can see, at a glance, that I am merely touching the surface of this great evil. What I have said pertains chiefly to a single amusement, confined to a single city. I have touched but a single note in the gamut of this scale of death, and the sound produced is alarming. Were I to go into extended and exhaustive details of the cost of all the amusements in the land, from the fascinating opera houses down through a long gradation to the indecent exhibitions of the vile assemblies seen at "the Points," and in the beer gardens of Royal street; if I were to take in the bowling alleys, the billiard saloons, the ale houses, the shooting galleries, the fashionable and attractive restaurants, together with all the low-lung theatres, circuses, museums, minstrels, menageries of the lowest order, and the lascivious performances of fashionable ball-rooms and dance-houses, that curse and blast the morals of the brightest youth in the land, we would then begin to form some sort of idea as to the enormous tax which is levied by this insidious foe upon the purses of the individual and of the nation. Surely, the godless worldling is rich toward himself, nor refuses his purse to the claims of hell, and the demands of his satanic lord.

Missions—Self-Denial.

Unquestionably the day is past for lofty rhetoric, in either oral or written composition, in support of the doctrine of missions. If the age is not too advanced to admit of such speech in support of some causes, it certainly is in support of this. Our commitment to this cause is already among the traditions of the past. The consent of Christendom has long since been obtained. To reopen the debate would be going back to first principles, whereas now we should be going on to perfection. The trouble is not now that the church does not believe in foreign missions, but that it lacks enthusiasm in the cause. If we had been giving ourselves to the study and advocacy of missions as we have the past ten years to the question of the prohibition of the liquor traffic, the pulse of the church would now be beating almost at fever excitement, and our missionary treasury would be running over with money. We need not be surprised that almost the only ones now vitally concerned for missions are the missionaries themselves, and those in closest sympathy with their work. The church still has life and zeal, but they have been turned in other channels. Evangelization at home was hardly ever so much stressed as during the past few years, as witness the 75,000 recruits to Southern Methodism last year. Temperance work never made such strides anywhere as in the South the past year or two, and largely through the instrumentality of Southern Methodism. These two movements, not to mention other interests occupying our care at the same time, have absorbed the energies of the church.

But now we are about to have to pause and consider if something has not been going wrong. Whatever else we may have gained, undoubtedly we have lost missionary zeal. That explains the existence of the debt and the shortage in the collections. It is not that the church is getting poorer, nor that missions are less successful, nor that men and women are not more ready than ever to go into the foreign fields; but it is that our hands and hearts have been otherwise occupied. Let any live pastor answer the question, if he does not find it very hard to feel an intelligent and free zeal for missions, and, at the same time, keep abreast with other popular and necessary movements.

Under the exigency a remedy is proposed—the week of self-denial and prayer. It is easier to prescribe a remedy than persuade the patient to take it. But this article is not written to criticise the remedy. It is believed to be a good one. Nothing would so surely and so speedily rescue the church from its present embarrassment as the fact that a million Southern Methodists are praying and practicing self-denial for a week for missions. Not even one earnest thought and fervent prayer but would yield fruit for this cause. Let us pray, and not only pray, but give up something for the spread of the gospel. What a baptism of spiritual power the church may receive in such an attitude! What renewed consecration to the cause of missions! And, then, what we may lose if we fail of this opportunity!

Our Offerings.

MR. EDITOR: If I may be allowed a line or two in the ADVOCATE, I want to endorse Bro. Rayner's suggestions, in last week's issue, in regard to the observance of the week of "self-denial and prayer," in behalf of missions. While I believe in abstinence, or fasting, still this can not be expected of all for the entire week. "Offerings" are a part of the programme, and the systematic, specific mode he suggests strikes me favorably. Let's all try it. Some may be able to do more than he proposes for his household, and ought to do more. Others may not be able to lay aside so much; but each and everyone according to his ability lay aside, deny themselves money to help the missionary cause. Thus immediate relief will come to the church, and, doubtless, more abundant than by any other plan.

To the Methodists of New Orleans:

On Sunday night, August 7, 1887, at 7:30, o'clock, at Carondelet Street Church, a missionary mass meeting is to be held. All of our churches will be closed on that night so as to enable all our people to attend. An interesting program has been prepared. There will be no collection, as the meeting is preparatory to the week of prayer and self-denial. Let us have a grand Methodist rally at old Carondelet.

TWILIGHT.

BY IRENE HUNT.

Far away the misty hill-tops
On the edge of vision lie,
And, amid the sunset flushes,
A throbbing planet burns on high.

Listen, while the deepening twilight
Makes the stillness solemn seem,
And the stars come out above us,
With a tender, silvery gleam.

Through the dusk there comes a murmur,
Low and deep and never ending,
Growing loud, then fainter heard,
With the rising night-wind blending.

Is it the voice of earth's sad millions
Going up from every land?
Nay; 'tis the pulse of ocean, resting
In the hollow of God's hand.

Fathom deep there lies the stillness
Of a calm, peaceful calm,
And the mighty heart beats ever
Undisturbed and free from harm.

Cease thy grieving, weary hearted,
A lesson learn of deep content—
'Tis the ocean's surface only
That with fierce, wild storms is rent.

Rest thou, also, in God's keeping,
Ask not that thy trials cease,
But beneath the storm-beat surface
Let thy heart repose in peace.

The Sunday-School Lesson for August 14, 1887.

BY T. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

THE BEATITUDES.

Matthew v. 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Grace and truth came by Jesus Christ."—John i. 17.

Matthew (in chapters v. vi. and vii.) contains the longest connected discourse spoken by the Savior. It is called the Sermon on the Mount, because of the place of its delivery; a small elevation standing by itself not far to the north of Tabor. Luke contains a discourse in which many of the same sentiments are uttered, but it is not supposed to be the sermon delivered at this time and place. Luke places his sermon after the call of the apostles, and Matthew locates his long before. Luke does not give all that is contained in Matthew, and he gives some things that Matthew does not. Doubtless, the Savior was in the habit of repeating many of his blessed utterances, which accounts for the similarity between Matthew and Luke. It is scarcely proper to prefer one Scripture to another, as it is all given by inspiration of God. But it does seem that this sermon comes as near covering the whole ground of revelation. The Ten Commandments contain an epitome of the whole law, and much of the Sermon on the Mount is based upon the Decalogue as a text.

Verse 1. "Seeing the multitudes." The same multitudes who, in the last lesson, had followed him from Decapolis and the regions round about. "Seeing multitudes" constitutes the preface for the delivery of the Savior's greatest sermons, and the performance of his deeds of mercy and charity. His heart ever moved towards the people. "When he was set." The usual posture for a teacher of those days was sitting. "His disciples came unto him." His scholars, or pupils, as well as the multitudes.

2. "He opened his mouth, and taught them." An emphatic expression indicating the delivery of weighty sentences. "Philip opened his mouth" (Acts viii, 35) in his address to the eunuch, and Peter is thus spoken of when he addressed Cornelius.

3. "Blessed are the poor in spirit." The word is sometimes rendered "happy" in the Scripture, but "blessed" seems to be the best. The corresponding Latin word is in the plural beati; hence these eight sentences of our Lord are called "beatitudes," and the place where the sermon was delivered is still called the "Mount of Beatitudes." Poverty of spirit is very properly placed first, as that is the initial step towards the realization of any spiritual blessings. Luke says, "Blessed be ye poor;" but neither he nor Matthew means poverty as to outward circumstances, as some of these may be very far from happiness, while, on the contrary, it is possible for those possessed of wealth likewise to be possessed of Christian humility. "Theirs is the kingdom of Heaven." This state of mind brings peace and joy in this world, and fits its possessor for an entrance upon the heavenly kingdom.

4. "They that mourn." Not that mourning which comes because of earthly sorrow, but rather that which exists because of sin, and because of a lack of conformity to the will of God. Luke says, "Ye that weep now." Such persons shall be comforted. Moses said to Dives: "Thou in thy lifetime received thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented."

5. "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth." The amiable and gentle in contrast with the haughty and unscrupulous. Doubtless, reference is made to Psalm xxxvii: "The meek shall inherit the earth." Not the actual possession shall be inherited; but a heart in meek submission to the will of God naturally appropriates and makes its own all that is desirable and valuable in earth.

6. "That do hunger and thirst after righteousness." No words can more emphatically express desire. To a hungry or thirsty man nothing would be satisfactory but food and drink; all the gold of Ophir would be but mockery. So naught can satisfy the soul awakened to a sense of its sinfulness but the consciousness of a present Savior producing pardon and imparting righteousness. Where this intense desire exists, "they shall be filled." There is no limit to this promise save the capacity of the hungerer. Whatever may be the breadth and length and depth for the reception and assimilation of the divine character, the promise is, all shall be filled. John Fletcher, under the oppressive sense of the divine blessing, once prayed the Lord to stay his hand. He learned better afterwards, and prayed for the enlargement of the vessel.

7. "Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy." David has a kindred sentiment: "With the merciful thou wilt show thyself merciful." Alexander Pope caught the idea: "That mercy I to others show, that mercy show to me." Observation and experience combine with Holy Writ in teaching that a gentle, kindly disposition begets the like in others, and that the best way to provoke good treatment from others is to be sympathetic and compassionate to them.

8. "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." It is only those whose hearts have been relieved from the dross and materiality of this world who can see God. The sensualist sees only sensual gratification in the values and beauties of the world; "the pure in heart" looks up from nature to nature's God. The worldly see in afflictions only the vehicle of sorrow; the spiritually minded recognize them as the purifying messengers of God.

9. "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God." Persons who prevent their fellows from engaging in strife are, of all others, entitled to be called God's children, because his only begotten Son was the Prince of Peace, and thus they become like their elder brother.

10. "They which are persecuted for righteousness' sake." It seems strange that men should ever be persecuted for being upright; but so it has ever been. Socrates was poisoned for being true, Aristides was banished for being just, and our blessed Master was crucified, although man found no fault in him. But all who thus suffer for righteousness' sake shall inherit the eternal kingdom.

11. "When men shall revile you, and persecute you." This verse is but an enlargement and an emphasis upon the last. "Revile, persecute and say all manner of evil falsely, for my sake," seems to comprehend all that may possibly happen to a servant of God from all the hosts of the ungodly.

12. "Rejoice, and be exceeding glad." These expressions seem to mean about the same thing in English, but in the original the second word expresses an excess. The parallel passage in Luke more nearly gives the sense, "leap for joy." Two reasons for the exceeding joy are given: (1) a great reward in heaven; (2) a likeness to the holy ones gone before.

13. "Ye are the salt of the earth." To save it from putrefaction, to sweeten its insipidity, to redeem it from the curse of its Maker. "If the salt have lost its savor." A professing Christian, who has only the form, but none of the saving properties of discipleship, is, of all characters in the world, the most inconsistent and the most cruelly deceptive. With what a bitter disappointment a man would awaken to the absence of saving qualities in what he deemed to be salt! Far more cruel and more deceiving are graceless Christians in times which try men's souls.

14. "Ye are the light of the world." This is the distinctive title which Christ gives to himself, and his disciples shine with borrowed light. He is the great Sun: they become luminous by his rays. "A city set on a hill can not be hid." No matter whether any particular city be referred to or not, the principle stands good with reference to all so situated. In like manner he who is called by the name of Christ, and professes to be governed by his high standard, can not but be observed.

16. "Let your light so shine." So reflect the image of the blessed Savior. Two motives, the highest of all motives, prompt to this: (1) the glory of God; (2) the good of men. Inspiring thought that God permits himself to be glorified by the conduct of poor, perishing mortals! Encouraging and stimulating thought that men may be saved by our good works!

Woman's Work.

ANNUAL MEETING OF WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: The annual session of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference was this year a gracious event to all who witnessed its proceedings. The officers were all in their places, except some of the district secretaries. There was a strong working force of delegates present, most of the auxiliaries being represented. Very few of the preachers attended. A hearty hospitality was served to all by the good people of Grenada, and a genuine appreciation returned by the guests. The pleasure was mutual. Some of these homes were specially favored with the company of long-time and precious friends. Such a joy came to the parsonage.

A preparatory prayer meeting was held in the afternoon of Thursday, June 30. The first official meeting was held that evening. Mrs. E. G. Payne, of Grenada, read an appropriate address of welcome, to which Miss Mollie Duvall, of Sardis, made an impressive reply. The annual address by the president, Mrs. C. N. Terry, was an earnest appeal for prompt, liberal activity in woman's work for missions. The spirit and matter of these papers gave a high caste to the business of the meeting, and showed an earnest grasp of the work in hand. This first meeting was marked by the presence of a spiritual power, which remained to the end with increasing influence.

Business was carefully and wisely dispatched in detail during Friday and Saturday. The report of auxiliaries revealed the usual experience of difficulty, struggle and triumph. Some auxiliaries have ceased to live—more have sprung into existence—since the last meeting. The workers are moving with more system, energy and confidence, and are widening the sphere of their enterprise. Inquiries and discussions set out more plainly some constitutional principles and practical methods. Increased concert of action will result, and the ensuing year will bring a yet richer return. The financial feature of the year's work is encouraging. Provision is secured for the outfit of the two young ladies who are to go out this fall from this Conference to China. The society proposes to raise that sum—$1,200; seven hundred of which is already paid or pledged. The treasurer, Miss Mollie Clark, of Pickens, read an admirable report of her work. It was delightfully clear, and had the form and expression of a practical business mind. Another report of superior clearness and effect was that of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. B. Stone. She gave an interesting and encouraging account of the recent session of the General Board.

The society took strong action in favor of the Woman's Missionary Advocate as an especial aid in the great work. That valuable monthly will certainly have a much larger patronage in our Conference.

The incumbent officers were chosen to fill the same places for another year by votes made unanimous.

Great interest and effect was given to the meeting by the presence of Miss Eula Lipscomb and Miss Addie Gordon, the two young lady missionaries-elect. They were introduced to the audience at a special service on Friday night, when each of them spoke of the circumstances decisive of her duty to become a laborer in a foreign field to save souls. They won all hearts by the genuine womanliness of their bearing, the ease and force of expression, and the devout earnestness of their consecration to the chosen work. Nothing in heroism can equal this simple consecration to the divine Master's call. On Sunday afternoon these young ladies met the children of the Sunday-school. Old and young were present. The Spirit of the Lord was there. All hearts were melted. The children will never forget that interview. They will follow these dear missionaries with their prayers and their money into the distant field of labor.

On Saturday night there was a service memorial of the sainted Miss Dora Rankin. An account of her death was read, and descriptions of her noble character and the marvelous work she wrought. This was followed by the part assigned to Bro. J. D. Cameron. There was a liberal response to his appeal for contribution to fund for the outfit.

The children, aided by their elders, gave a thank-offering to be used for the personal needs of the missionaries as they may choose.

On Sunday morning the annual sermon was preached by the Rev. E. B. Ramsey to a large and interested congregation. The preacher magnified his office, and delivered an effective message, which prepared us to commune together around the table of our Lord. The love-feast at night was a fitting conclusion to an occasion so marked by its spiritual power, and which brought together so many of our consecrated Christian women, not only for counsel in their missionary enterprise, but also in the encouraging conferences of their spiritual experiences.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

A District High School.

MR. EDITOR: Thanking you for your kindness in publishing my former letter, I ask permission to write again.

The more I think of establishing a male high school at Brandon, the more I realize its necessity and practicability. In fact, I am truly surprised that the subject has not been agitated and the work consummated before now.

But so it is. The work has not been done, and the boys have not the facilities for education that they should have. It is our duty, as a church, to begin and complete this work without delay. It will not do to procrastinate when so much depends upon prompt and energetic action. The benefits that would accrue to the cause of Methodism from the establishment of such an institution in this part of the State can not be over-estimated.

So let us not plead inability when the land is blooming with prosperity, nor wait for "a more convenient season;" for "behold now is the accepted time." If you hear the voice, and see the opportunity, do not conjure up difficulties as did the ten wicked spies who were sent to spy out the promised land, but rather let us adopt the language of Caleb: "Let us go over and possess it, for we are fully able."

The response to my former letter strengthens my hope that we will yet have this school, for if one man will donate the necessary grounds, surely the rest of the Brandon district can put up and sufficiently advance buildings to secure the appointment of a president by our next Annual Conference, and be ready to open the school in the spring. But we must have some system, a starting-point, and a leader.

How would it do for Dr. Featherstun to try to find out what further inducements the people of Brandon will offer to secure the location of such a school there?

I would suggest that all be requested to help—Methodists and also the members of other churches, and, indeed, those who are not members of any church—as all will enjoy the benefits growing out of it.

Several other denominations have good churches in Brandon, served by some of their best preachers. So, as their boys will have church facilities and pastoral oversight, I hope they will assist us in this enterprise.

It might be well, too, for Dr. Featherstun to call a meeting of our ministers and leading laymen throughout the district to consult about this matter generally; and, while we are waiting propositions and donations are in order, "Don't all speak at once."

I hope that some of our laymen will come to the front with liberal contributions; and may God bless all who aid in this work!

A. D. MILLER.

To the Pastors.

BRETHREN: The church is now fully aroused to the necessity of building parsonages; and the watchword of the Woman's Department of Church Extension is, "A Parsonage in Every Charge." This work has received the sanction of the General Conference—the vote for it being almost unanimous. The Bishops are warm in their approbation of it. The wonder of everyone is that a work so needed was never undertaken before. All now depends upon you, the pastors, to make it a success by organizing in your charges parsonage societies upon this plan. We would relieve you of the care, the suffering, the burden of debt, and the loss in time, strength, and thought—that should be given to God's work—entailed upon you by the lack of parsonages. Do not let this effort fail from indifference on your part; but those of you who have fared well remember your less fortunate brethren, working on hard circuits or on the frontier, where the evils resulting from the need of parsonages are greatly aggravated. Let all seize the opportunity, while it offers, to rid the church of this obstacle to her progress, this hinderance to the advancement of Christ's cause. Your friend,

LUCINDA B. HELM,
Gen. Sec. Woman's Dep't.

Kavanaugh College.

When, in the course of his itinerant work in Pike county, Miss., the Rev. H. Walter Featherstun conceived the idea of organizing a college at Holmesville, ten miles from the railroad, many of his friends thought the enterprise was of very doubtful expediency, and even among those in whose neighborhood the proposed institution was to be located there were many who felt that the effort could not but result in failure. But those who have watched the college from the beginning have seen it grow stronger month by month, overcoming difficulties that were deemed insuperable, and gaining in patronage as it gained in the confidence and respect of the people, until, when it closed its third session with its recent brilliant commencement, they felt that the college was no longer an experiment, and that success was assured.

Kavanaugh College is located in a picturesque little village on the banks of a beautiful stream, and is easy of access from Summit, McComb City and Magnolia. The location is said to be as healthful as it is beautiful, and, if this be true, there need be no fears on this point. The faculty consists of five professors and two assistants, and, as far as one could judge from the evidences of the work done, all of these are competent and faithful. The visitors were especially impressed with the charming display made in music and art under the instruction of Mrs. Emily Featherstun, the amiable and accomplished wife of the president; while the literary exercises generally gave evidence of the thorough work done in the other departments.

On Sunday, June 12, at eleven o'clock A. M., the Rev. F. M. Featherstun, D. D., of Brandon, preached the commencement sermon, and at eight o'clock P. M. the Rev. I. H. Anding, of Gallman, addressed the Christian Association.

Monday was "class day," and in the forenoon a large audience listened with evident appreciation to the essays and orations of representatives of the Freshman, Sophomore and Junior classes. On Monday night a most delightful entertainment was given by the children of the preparatory department.

Tuesday was "commencement day;" and long before the hour appointed for the opening of the exercises of the day the spacious hall was filled to overflowing. Miss Mabel Craven, of Summit, the first of the graduates introduced, completely captured the audience by her modest, womanly manner, and clear, musical voice, and prepared them the more fully to enjoy her charming essay. Mr. W. T. Sparkman, of Magnolia, the other graduate, spoke extemporaneously for three-quarters of an hour, and held the undivided attention of the audience. His oration was thoughtful, original, excellent. The orator of the day, Rev. W. W. DeHart, of Hazlehurst, being absent, the Rev. R. W. Merrill, of Magnolia, and this writer were pressed into service, after which President Featherstun delivered the diplomas. The exercises closed Tuesday night with an entertainment given by the Literary Societies.

One visiting this institution can not but notice the religious tone that finds expression in the private lives and public utterances of officers and students.

The attendance last year is said to have numbered one hundred and twenty-nine pupils, and the prospects are good for a largely increased patronage next session.

I left Holmesville, Wednesday morning, appreciative of the hospitality of its people, and convinced that Kavanaugh College has before it a career of usefulness and honor.

From the Work.

RIPLEY, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Our work consists of Ripley and New Albany.

Our District Conference met July 1, in New Albany (which is the Corinth district), and, notwithstanding the mud and rain, our Conference was the best attended and the most spiritual I ever attended.

Our preachers all seemed to be ready for every good word and work, and those who preached, preached old-fashioned gospel sermons, which were attended with power. So a revival broke out at once, and Bros. G. S. Inge and J. W. Beville remained over with us five days—the first doing the preaching, and the other leading in singing and doing effective altar service and out-door service, until our little town was in a religious enthusiasm, which resulted in sixty-six conversions, and thirty-six additions to our church, and a number to the Baptist Church, and others to follow in both.

We now have four organized prayer meetings—one for the young men; one for the women; one for the children—in addition to our regular weekly prayer meeting.

We think religion and prohibition are far in the ascendancy, and that New Albany is for God and heaven.

Our new church at Ripley is rapidly advancing toward completion, which will be a gem when completed.

Our collections are well up.

To God be all the glory! Pray for us. Yours fraternally,

D. W. HABB.

FLOYD, LA.

MR. EDITOR: According to previous appointment with our local brethren, Rev. T. B. Reneau and J. E. Riddle, who were to commence a protracted meeting, eight miles north of Floyd, and continue until I could get to them, I reached them about four o'clock Sunday evening, just as Bro. Riddle was closing an able sermon. God honored the Word; many were pricked to the heart, and asked for the prayers of God's people. The good work had already commenced when I reached the ground. I had but little to do, only to reap where they had sown. The Lord was with us in spirit and power. Mr. Editor, here in the swamp-country souls were made to shout praises to God; some old troubles were settled, and peace was made where before there had been hatred. The church was wonderfully revived, and some of the most ungodly in the community were converted to God.

The results of this meeting, commencing on July 15 and closing July 19, was eighteen accessions to the church, and about twenty conversions, which gives us up to date, since Conference, thirty-one accessions to the church; for which we give God the glory.

We expect to bring up to Conference a passable report.

C. T. MUNHOLLAND.

JULY 21, 1887.

DOWNSVILLE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Please say, for the encouragement of our brethren and Christians friends, and to the praise of our dear Lord, we have had a most wonderful and powerful revival at the Mars Hill Church, on Downsville circuit.

The most remarkable feature of the meeting was its being the legitimate outgrowth and result of persistent use of the ordinary means of grace. It came in the use of these.

Praise the Master! Pray for us.

Come to our camp meeting.

Money Wasted on Church Edifices.

MR. EDITOR: While the Catholics are putting their brand on large numbers of children, and then turning them loose to grow up in sin, are not the Protestants vying with each other to attract the largest number of followers by showy and costly churches, and the most fashionable and operatic music, and fine and vain dress, and the least conscience-disturbing preaching, and then letting them rest at ease in Zion without change of heart, or discipline for irregularities? Of the vast numbers that are thus "gathered in," how many "shall be saved?" The Savior declared, "Ye must be born again." How few, alas! of those that "join the church" ever "return to give glory to God" for a change of heart! Would any fail to report if the change had been experienced? And what is the consequence of all this mistaken policy? Human policy it is, put in place of the Savior's plan to save the world.

It seems that we are making the fatal mistake of investing too large sums of money in costly churches and fine clothing—which have the effect of keeping away a large majority of poor people, while only a few of the fashionable attend to see and be seen, and thus while away dull time—instead of better using the same, and more, money in building a great many more less costly, but comfortable houses of worship, into which, invite cordially the masses of the people, and meet with them in less costly, but neat apparel, and worship God in spirit and in truth—not in form only. Now, this looks so plain and uninviting to human pride, of course, a great many would-be fashionable people will reject the idea with disgust, and still cling to the policy that is filling the churches at home with nice well-meaning people, but who are remaining unregenerated, and will be lost when they die, while the heathen are dying without the knowledge of a Savior. Even the masses at our doors are not being saved. The fault can not be in the Savior's plan of salvation; it must be in our methods of carrying it out. At home, has it not become so unpopular and unfashionable, as to be almost obsolete, to preach "the terrors of the law" to nice well-dressed people—to disturb the complacency of clever sinners? And to fail to preach a popular church member to heaven when dead, however slipshod he may have worn his religion, who does that?

Is it not our duty (which, if discharged faithfully, might be infinitely more successful) to devise far better ways of reaching far more of the masses of the people, and then preaching to them the gospel of Christ in all of its simple purity and sublime, soul-cheering and soul-saving truths—Christ and him crucified for the salvation of all the world! Science, and oratory in their places are proper and good; but if we are ever saved at all, it must be "by the foolishness of preaching of the cross," for "it is the power of God unto salvation," and nothing else can save us. The people must be brought to that; and the sooner, and more direct, the better. To waste time and lose opportunity in tickling the ears of dying men and women with flowing display of empty words is as much out of place as it would be to try to dazzle their eyes, glazed in death, with the vain pomp and gaudy show of wealth and fashion.

As it is true that all must "repent" before they can be "converted," let it be preached and insisted upon until all "be saved." And, as it is required of everyone joining the Methodist Church "to have a desire to flee from the wrath to come," and all be required to "continue to manifest that desire," or withdraw, it must be offensive to Christ, as it is damaging to his church, to suffer members to wear their so-called religion in such a slip-shod manner. The church has become too much "as salt that has lost its savor." It is not saving the world as it ought and was designed to do; its power for good is too circumscribed and weakly asserted. There seems to be as much need for reform now as in Wesley's time.

Count up all the money that is spent by the various denominations in costly churches and institutions of learning, and in fine dressing in one city (Nashville, for instance), and see what a vast sum they aggregate. Then calculate how many plain, but comfortable churches and schoolhouses might be built with it over the country, and thus bring religious education and Holy Ghost preaching within reach of so many more people who also have minds needing cultivation, and souls to be saved or lost. Of course, would-be "fashionable people will smile at the idea, and call it old-fogyism. That is much easier to do than to meet the solemn facts with sound arguments against the plan that would accomplish more good, and in less time, for the world at large. Suppose ye that the Nashvillians are sinners above all the dwellers in cities because they have been instanced? Nay, but except ye cities make better use of your money, ye shall all likewise fail to accomplish as much good with it as ye might otherwise.

"Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature," saith the Master. Is that to be considered as a simple permission, and, therefore, optional: or as a positive command, and, therefore, obligatory? How can the command be obeyed if, too much money be spent in building a few costly churches within sound of each other's bells, and then the balance be spent in fine dressing to attend them? Is there money enough in the land to thus extravagantly and unwisely gratify pride at home, and also carry out the Savior's plan of universal salvation "into all the world"? If there be not, then is it not clearly our duty to abandon or modify our present methods, which are evidently faulty, and adopt the Savior's plan? And if we can not invest so much money in home extravagance, and still "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," then we must curtail our unnecessary expenses until we can have enough money left to carry out that high commission, or we will fail to do our duty and must suffer the inevitable consequences.

D. W. FOSTER.

PEASANCY, Louisiana.

The Louisiana State Lottery.

No argument can for the present remove this moral carbuncle set upon the moral sense and religious sentiment of the great commonwealth, entrenched, as it is, in the constitutional law of the State. But I would like to say something to check the mad tendency of the public, including some church members, sometimes church officials (and the papers report, ministers of the gospel) from engaging in this unrighteous game of chance.

In reviewing the principles involved in the workings of this strange pet of the State, I can not enter into a very intricate minutiæ. Probably such detail would be too long for a newspaper article, and doubtless too long to be read by those for whom it is more especially intended. The extreme chance in the game taken by those who stake their money upon the issue of a successful drawing is what I wish to illustrate. A few secular papers have championed the cause of this huge gambling company, faithfully holding up the fairness with which many lose and few win money by the fact that two gray-haired and gray-bearded ex-Confederate generals, who once led the bravest armies in the world, but now stand to give dignity and character to a concern where multitudes are lured by deceptive offers to put in their millions of dollars and draw out a few tens. It is not in the fairness of the drawings, nor the hired dignity attached, nor the precision with which moneys and letters are kept account of by the "army of clerks" in the employ of the company, where the great fraud is perpetrated. The wrong lies behind all that.

I have an account before me of a drawing representing the sale of 100,000 tickets. These may all be sold or not. The unsold tickets are all in favor of the company, and are chances against the purchaser—the same as if bought by friend or stranger. The purchaser buys one ticket. Say his object is to secure a $5,000 prize. There is but one number of the 100,000 tickets that will call for that prize: hence he has one chance against 99,999. Certainly there is no game played where the putter-up of stakes has a chance to win where so many chances are against him. If he wins, his money comes from those who bought tickets as he did, while the money he gave for his ticket goes to the lottery company, and not in the least to remunerate those who have lost; hence he has received money from parties to whom he makes no sort of return, and gets something for nothing. That others have an equal chance with himself only adds to the chance feature of the game and adds to its dishonest complications. That he does not know the other purchasers of tickets, and they need not purchase unless they wish, makes no more difference in the principle involved than if he knew it was his own mother against whom he staked his money.

For a basis of calculation, we will suppose the average ticket to be $10. As the highest priced ticket is $20, and the lowest $1, the average of $10 will sufficiently approximate the truth to illustrate our argument. Then of the 100,000 tickets sold, $1,000,000 is paid into the coffers of the lottery corporation. If all these tickets are not sold, the remnant increases the chance of gain to the company for the amount paid in, because these unsold tickets are as though they had been bought by the company. With all the fairness and dignity of the drawing, there is something dark and unclean in that part of the game.

Following the sale of the 100,000 tickets, 2,197 drew prizes. To these were disbursed $522,500. This taken from the $1,000,000, leaves as proceeds for the company, $477,500. For this the company did not run the slightest risk. It was as sure of its money as a sportsman running a fine-blooded, well-trained horse against an actually dead dray horse. Surely the man must blush who calls himself honest and deals with this lottery company, and certainly the professor of Christ must sell his Master for a chance when he buys a ticket.

A. D. NEWSOM.

THE FAMILY ALTAR.—The religion which does not have an altar in the home will fail of its influence on the family, and thus lose one of the chief sources of its power. No sight is more impressive and beautiful than the gathering of the members of the household about the family altar, morning and evening, while the father, the priest of the family, reads from the holy book, and commits into the keeping of the great Father all the interests of those given to his home. Children never lose the experience. The scene lingers in their minds a picture of perpetual beauty and a thing of power. They can scarcely ever get away from its influence. No father has met the responsibilities of his position until he has established such an altar.

Is there not room to fear great and even growing neglect at this point? Were the former days not better, in this respect, than the present? "The times are full of action." The demands of business and the claims of life are constantly pressing. Men and women in all the walks of life yield themselves up to the haste which urges them on. Family religion, as manifested and nourished at the family altar, is one of the first things to suffer. There are not a few professedly Christian families in which the voice of prayer is seldom heard, and never from the lips of the divinely ordained priest of the household, the father; and in which the bounties of Providence are partaken of at the family board from day to day without the returning of thanks or asking of a blessing. These are sad facts, but they are facts. They are a source of weakness to the parents, and a wrong to the children. Religion, to be abiding and influential, should have its source in the home, and should gather about the family altar. Will parents open their eyes to these things?—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

The victory of the Head of humanity over his threefold temptation teaches the secret of all human victory over the temptations which beset all human beings. If he won by his freedom from all evil desire, they must conquer by seeking the extinction of their lusts through his grace. The death of lust is the weakening of satanic power. Temptation may vex a soul cleansed from lust and living by faith; but it can not, if resisted, separate it from Him in whom it has eternal life.—Daniel Wise, D. D.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1887.

The Board of Missions appointed the week, beginning August 8, as a week of prayer and self-denial in the interest of our missions.

It is with great regret that we announce the death of Bro. J. D. Jackson, our pastor in Opelousas, La. The presiding elder, Rev. S. S. Keener, writes: "On Monday, July 25, Bro. Jackson died, after an illness of two weeks. He brought it on by overwork. Bro. Jackson was a young man of promise. He leaves a wife and one child.

Just as we go to press, a letter from Rev. S. S. Keener, presiding elder, brings the painful intelligence of the death of Rev. J. P. Porter, of Washington, La. He died last Saturday night. "Overwork brought on fever, from which the weak nature could not rally. Two young and promising ministers in less than a week! May the Lord have mercy on us!

Briefs.

It is estimated that between twenty-five and thirty parishes of Louisiana are engaged in sugar planting, and that the area under cultivation in sugar cane is 190,000 acres, and that the people engaged in this business number 250,000. The land, machinery, implements, etc., used are estimated as worth $90,000,000. So says the Merchant and Manufacturer, of this city.

In regard to making the appointments of preachers, the London Methodist Times makes this remark: "In such a ministry as ours, where we are compelled to find an appointment for every ordained man, Methodism, and not the individual candidate, should always have the benefit of any doubt which may arise." We commend that remark to our Bishops and presiding elders. There is much food for reflection in it.

The cost of war is a fearful thing. The British and Foreign Arbitration Society has published a pamphlet, giving the cost of war in Europe. The annual expenditures for armies and navies are $3,867,500,000. The debt incurred by wars aggregate $24,113,057,650. There are actually under arms 4,123,675 soldiers. The number trained for war, and subject to call, is 16,697,484 men. There are besides 291,253 men in the navies. There are 304 iron-clads, and 1,972 frigates. The working people pay all these bills!

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor has assumed very large proportions in a very short time. Beginning but a few years ago, there are now 2,314 societies, with 140,000 members. There are societies in every State of the Union except three, and in every Territory except three. There are societies in England, Scotland, Spain, India, Japan, China, Africa, Ceylon, Syria, and Turkey in Europe. During the past year, 14,000 young people have united with the church from these societies. The aim of the movement is the training of young people in all the branches of Christian work. More and more the church is coming to the idea that the world is to be won to Christ by such work; and why not put the young, as well as the old, to it?

Are We Ready?

The week of prayer and self-denial is drawing near. The matter has been before the church for about two months. The papers have published all sorts of articles concerning it. The preachers have mentioned it in their pulpits and on their pastoral rounds. The people have been talking it among themselves right freely. Other churches have heard of it, and are closely watching to see what is to be the outcome of the strange experiment. The worldlians are eying us with a keenness of vision that would penetrate the depths of our souls. It is no stretch of the imagination to believe that angelic intelligences are looking to see if we are prepared to enter upon this carious week of our history in a manner that will glorify their Lord and ours. Nor does it lower the character of our ascended and glorified Savior to think of him as being interested in the effort which we are about to make for the advancement of his cause among the benighted and lost. "We are made a spectacle to men and angels;" and in God's sight we are called upon to do what no great Christian Church has yet done—to spend a week in prayer and self-denial for the furtherance of the missionary operations of the church!

Are we ready to enter upon the week in a spirit of humble prayer for guidance and help? We need special guidance because of the novelty of the situation. We need help because proper self-denial is the most difficult to do. This is not the ordinary self-denial that "forbears to gratify appetite and desire." It is the self-denial which does without something in order that that something may be converted into money and placed in the missionary treasury. A self-denial that does not yield money will not meet the case at all. And then it is to be a daily business for seven days, and, as the ability to perform it is a grace, like every other grace, it ought to grow right along through the whole week, so that what is saved by the self-denial of the last day may be larger than that of the first day. Are we ready for that?

There are some difficulties in this matter, but they will not emerge where most people think they will. Some are asking, How are the poor to deny themselves? The poor Christians will experience no difficulty at all. Take this case: The poor man's meat costs him, say, ten cents a day. He denies himself and family the meat, and at the end of the week, like the prophet who lived on "pulse and water," his "countenance is fairer and fatter in flesh," and he puts seventy cents into the Lord's treasury. This is about all that he can do. But if the well-to-do and the rich "walk by the same rule" as this poor man, and turn into the treasury of the Lord only their weekly allowances of meat, don't you see how ridiculously absurd such a thing would be? Would not such a proceeding come very near being a repetition of what Ananias and Sapphira did? The well-to-do and the rich Methodists are the ones that will have difficulties in this matter, and not the poor Christians. The poor are on record—a record brighter than human ambition ever made—in the case of the widow and her mites. The rich are on record, too, on the same immortal roll; but it is in the case of the rich young ruler, who, when called, as we are called, to self-denial, failed, and his future went out in the darkness of oblivion. We are really concerned about the rich people in our church standing this test. There are many of them. They could give millions if they would. The church that our fathers founded in tears and sufferings and privations has been calling to them out of her distress, and they have not come to her relief! They have one more opportunity—one more week of grace. May God help them to use it properly!

Methodism in Mississippi.

There is a fascination to the mind in the "beginnings of things." We want to know when, where, and how things began. And then we muse over why they begin. Seeing a great church, already spread over a large part of our country, and still busy in endeavoring to extend itself over it all, and, at the same time, sending its influences to other countries, we naturally inquire when, where, how, and why this church began its operations. The history of the church in any part of our land is, of necessity, a large chapter in the history of the country, and vice versa. Bro. Jones, in his recently published work, entitled, "A Complete History of Methodism as Connected with the Mississippi Conference," has answered the inquiries of our minds in regard to the beginning of the Methodist Church in the Southwest. Though this is but the first volume, yet it takes us through about eighteen years of toils and sufferings and privations and triumphs of some of the most heroic and self-denying men and women of whom we have ever read, and records the fact that in those trying years the church of our fathers and mothers was settled upon an enduring foundation. Everywhere the early Methodists built well and wisely, and they did so because they were guided by the "wisdom from above." By writing this book, Bro. Jones has rescued many important facts from oblivion, and has set them upon the pages of history to be read of all, and to be handed down to the future historian as the only basis of his work. He has even found what has long been known as "the lost Conference," and placed it in its proper niche in the temple of church history. The venerable man of God has done his work in a sprit of painstaking love, and the church owes him a debt of special gratitude. There is one defect, and it is the defect in Bishop McTyeire's great work. Books of this kind, when once read, are ever afterward used more as books of reference than in any other way. Hence there is need of a copious index.

The work includes the early history of Methodism in Louisiana as well as in Mississippi, and, therefore, ought to be of as much interest to the Methodists of Louisiana as to those of Mississippi. We have read the volume through with great interest, and trust that every member of our church in Louisiana and Mississippi will procure it at once, and satisfy the mind's questions as to the when, where, how, and why the Methodist Church began its career in this Southwestern country. The book is published by our House in Nashville, whence it may be procured. We sincerely hope the author will soon be able to bring out the succeeding volume.

The Boston Pilot undertook to lecture this distinguished prelate for saying, "The Irish question is the whisky question," which gave Canon Wilberforce a fine opportunity for saying in reply: "I am a Gladstone home ruler to the backbone, and have sacrificed not a little to this cause. I was only fragmentarily reported at the Tremont Temple. What I contend is this: that it would have been impossible thus to have stamped Ireland under foot if she were not weakened by her whisky. The drink bill of Ireland is £2,250,000 annually more than the whole rental of the island." Such a declaration from so high a source was more than The Pilot thought to elicit, and is what its readers will not all of them relish.

Some Notes.

Holding the last quarterly meeting of our second round at Donaldsonville, we preached Sunday morning and night to large and attentive congregations. All denominations participated in the communion service. The Methodists of Donaldsonville are few in number; but the pastor is receiving new members every time he preaches, and he hopes to report a large increase by Conference. Sunday night the altar was crowded, and doubtless deep spiritual impressions were made, and some souls blessed.

The new church stands forth a thing of beauty, with capacity for seating 150 to 200 persons. It is handsomely finished inside and outside, and is supplied with very comfortable opera chairs. The Donaldsonville Church is a perfect gem, and with a cross on its front top-centre—something new as to Methodist buildings—it presents an appearance creditable to the people who built it. Mr. Quimby, who co-operated with Bro. Hocutt and with Bro. Wimberly, the dearly loved Donaldsonville pastor, has been mainly instrumental in the good work. We look for scores of souls to be born unto God around that altar.

We got back to the camp ground Monday, in time to hear the temperance sermon of Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., on the words: "Help these women." It was an effort worthy of the man and the occasion. The ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union have in Dr. Black an able defender and helper.

Tuesday and Wednesday were given to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the time profitably employed by eloquent addresses from Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, a sermon from Dr. T. S. West—on "Am I my brother's keeper?"—a stirring address from Rev. S. Halsey Werlein, on Tuesday night, and talks, etc., all along from various ladies and gentlemen. Wednesday the bouquet presentation by the little folks to Mrs. Chapin; and their sweet singing and her talk to the men and women prohibitionists of the future all went to make up one of the most delightful experiences of our stay at the Seashore. Ah! can any man with a true, manly heart behind his ribs, in the presence of Christian womanhood and innocent childhood, be other than the pledged foe of the liquor traffic and the fast friend of prohibition? May the 300,000 women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the multitudes of white-ribbon boys and girls in the Union be backed up by the votes of the men, that the homes of America may be speedily rescued from the curse of the saloon! The tramp of the victorious hosts shakes the land from centre to circumference, and the triumph of all who pray and work and vote for "God and home and native land" is drawing on apace. A Seashore Woman's Christian Temperance Union was organized by Mrs. Chapin, with more than one hundred members. The closing services on Wednesday night, as was the case all through the two weeks, were in the power of the Spirit, and the melting, mellowing love of God filled all hearts.

The Seashore Camp Meeting for 1887 was, under God, a grand, spiritual success, and some here estimated that at least two hundred souls were converted. We know not, and we are not much inclined to figures in such matters; but God knows, and we are sure that numberless and rich blessings, right out of the Father's hand, were bestowed upon saints and sinners while they worshiped, preaching, praying, singing and rejoicing together, by the side of the solemn sea.

JULY 28, 1887.

Prohibition in Mississippi.

The Prohibition Convention, assembled in Jackson, Miss., July 27, adopted the following "declaration of principles:"

We, the friends of the legal and constitutional suppression of the liquor traffic in the State of Mississippi, in State convention assembled, acknowledge with profound gratitude the steady, healthful and intelligent growth of prohibition within our great commonwealth. From a small beginning a few years ago our cause has become a dominant moral sentiment in many counties. The little company has become a mighty army. The cloud no larger than a man's hand has overcast the heavens and rained its blessing largely upon every community. This success has emboldened us to greater efforts. The achievements of the past are a prophecy of yet grander things in the future. Wherever good prohibitory laws have been adopted, intemperance has been suppressed and good government has signally advanced. Prohibition does prohibit, despite the prejudiced and partisan utterances of papers that favor license and the saloons. The history of prohibition is an unanswerable argument in favor of its efficiency. We only ask that prohibitory laws be administered with equal fidelity with other statutes to secure communities their beneficial protection.

In view of the foregoing, we affirm the following:

Resolved, That we heartily approve the local option law passed by our last Legislature, and do most earnestly oppose any material modification of its wise provisions, except to make it more stringent, until suppressed by total prohibition by the legal enactment of a constitutional amendment. Under its operations a number of counties have been recovered from the curse of the open saloon, and others will soon be added to the prohibition column. This law compelling agitation by public discussion has been an efficient educator of the people, and its enforcement has demonstrated the fact that "prohibition does prohibit."

Resolved, That in the irrepressible conflict between the saloon, with its kindred and attendant vices on the one side, and the home, the church and the school on the other side, we unqualifiedly pledge all the powers of our enfranchised manhood to the side of our homes, our churches and our schools.

Resolved, That we congratulate ourselves and the country, South and North, East and West, on the rapid growth of the prohibition sentiment resulting from the enlightenment of the public mind, and we do rejoice in the belief that at last the American saloon with all its infamies is about to be brought before the bar of the American conscience to receive its verdict by the verdure of a patriotic, intelligent, home-loving, God-honoring people.

Resolved, That this convention send good cheer to prohibition workers in every part of the country; that we recognize the fact that every section and locality must work by methods suited to the circumstances of the place, and we regard all temperance organizations as so many divisions of one great army marching with measured and irresistible tread to the overthrow of the matchless evil of the age.

Resolved, That we reaffirm our desire to conduct this movement on the non-partisan plan, and that we mean by non-partisan the freedom of the movement from all party influence and party control, and as a great moral question affecting all the interests of the country we do believe it should have the right of way, and this should be accorded to it by patriotic citizens of all parties.

Resolved, That while we forbear to contend for place and power in any partisan sense, nevertheless we are convinced that it is the duty of every citizen to vote for sober men for office and men of good personal character not in sympathy with nor pledged to the criminal classes, to the end that prohibitory laws may be enforced and the public service be purified and elevated.

Resolved, That the question of asking the next Legislature to submit to the people a constitutional amendment at the next annual election prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicants in the State, the same to be left to the Executive Committee with full power to act according to their judgment.

Resolved, That we recommend organization in every county to secure prohibitory laws where they are not now in force and insure their faithful execution where they already obtain.

Resolved, That we use our efforts to have a law enacted at the next meeting of the Legislature prohibiting the sale of spirituous, vinous or malt liquors in this State.

Resolved, That we consider it unwise and unpatriotic to raise revenue for schools or any other purpose out of an article that has filled the land with mourning and prostrated the highest hopes of the country, and that no people have the moral right to license to obtain the elements of an education.

Resolved, That we memorialize the next Legislature to pass a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within five miles of the Industrial Institute and College at Columbus.

Notes.

The temperance cause is enlisting some splendid talents. It has created a literature of its own—unlike anything else; and that literature is creating a strong sentiment and wielding an immense power for the salvation of the country from ruin. We have just read a calm, thoughtful and yet fervid tract of a dozen pages, entitled, "Onward: or, The March of Prohibition," by Dr. J. B. West, of Nashville, in which objections are answered calmly and positions taken thoughtfully, and exhortations given fervidly. Such reading, scattered through the homes of the land, must be followed by larger harvests of good.

Our Baptist brethren, in some quarters, are working at the same problem which has occupied so much of the attention of our readers during the past half-year. We refer to the educational interests of the church. We really think, in view of recent developments on the line of education in the State, that there is no question of more importance to the people of God. The Standard (Baptist), of Chicago, in an article on "A National Educational Society," makes this remark: "Our mission work at home and abroad is well and wisely attended to. Our Publication Society enterprises proceed with some concert of effort. Shall our educational interests alone be left at hap-hazard?" The whole church needs, right now, to take a firmer hold upon this great subject.

A writer on missions makes this assertion: "In the third century the proportion of Christians in the whole human race was one in one hundred and fifty, and now it is one in five, and it is indisputable that the progress of the human race at this moment is entirely identified with the spread and the influence of the nations of Christendom." And yet there are opposers of the progress of Christianity everywhere. All such people are downright enemies of our race! And there are people in the churches who are opposed to missions. All such people are revealed in their true character in the light of that Scripture which says: "If a man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his;" for if the spirit of Christ was not a missionary spirit then the book has misrepresented him, and there was no motive to prompt his incarnation. An anti-missionary Christian is a counterfeit, and cannot give forth the clear ring of a soul conversion!

The Preachers' Meeting in the Carondelet pastor's office, last Monday morning, was every way an encouraging one. The pastors report good congregations, both at the public services and at the prayer meetings. The mission Sunday-schools are flourishing beyond the hopes of the most sanguine. The open-air meetings continue during the present week. The audiences at these meetings are very large, and the hearing is very respectful. Indeed, the good order at these out-door meetings is quite remarkable, and is commended in the highest terms by the preachers.

The week of prayer and self-denial will be inaugurated by a general union meeting of Methodists in Carondelet Street Church, next Sunday night. A program of exercises has been arranged, by which it is hoped to give an impetus to the missionary movement which will carry it on with accelerated momentum through the whole week. The pastors, as a rule, will hold services in their churches every night during the week. Though many of our people are away on the usual summer vacation, yet the "rank and file" of the church still remain, and we expect confidently that New Orleans Methodism will do her part now in helping the church out of her difficulties. Any way we look at it, it is the most serious business in which we have ever engaged, and the Lord looks for every man, woman and child in the church to give exhibitions of loyalty and love which can not be mistaken.

Personals.

A generous brother in Kansas City, some time ago, gave $5,000 for the erection of a church at Shanghai, China, and has very recently given $3,500 to build a missionary residence in the same city.

Rev. W. A. Candler, assistant editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, has been appointed by Bishop Wilson to fill out the unexpired pastoral term of Dr. Barbee, at McKendree Church.

Pastors ought to be careful to keep all the offerings made during the week of self-denial separate from everything else, and when the week is over remit all promptly to Dr. Kelley, at Nashville.

George Wilson, a son of Rev. Dr. N. H. D. Wilson, of North Carolina Conference, died recently of consumption. He was a gifted young man, and had just entered upon the practice of law.

A sister wonders what she can deny herself of during self-denial week to help on the Lord's cause. There is a five-dollar ring on her finger whose only office is to disfigure her pretty hand.

A brother carries a ten-dollar chain dangling from a three-dollar watch, and yet is racking his brain to find out what in the world he can deny himself of!

Judge Mayers writes to a friend: "My court in Monticello, Lawrence county, Miss., did not consume three days. Cause: prohibition—no whisky, no drunkenness—all peace and quiet." So the story is repeated o'er and o'er.

The Women's Jubilee offering to the Queen of England reached £80,000, of which £10,000 are to be spent upon the statue of the late Prince Consort, and the balance has been ordered by the Queen to be devoted to charitable objects.

A very modest little circular has been laid upon the editor's desk. It is the announcement for the thirty-third year of the Collegiate Institute of Baton Rouge, under the principalship of W. H. N. Magruder, LL.D. This school has always been of the first grade in every respect, and the veteran principal has abated none of his zeal and wisdom in its management. He is assisted by his son, J. B. Magruder, A. M.

Ministerial Education.

There are now eleven young men in the Brookhaven district who want to be educated for the ministry, and not one of them is able to bear the expense of a term in college. How many more there are in the Mississippi Conference I know not; but it is reasonable to suppose there are several. What is to be done? We have an educational association in our Conference; but our annual income is less than two hundred dollars. If the Methodists of Mississippi do not come to our aid, these young men can not be educated and will be lost to our church in that line of duty to which they are evidently called.

Our method is as follows: We give our note for fifty or one hundred dollars, to be paid in ten annual installments, without interest; and if the party dies before the note is paid, it is canceled. Our preachers have given nearly all the notes our association holds. Will not our laymen come to our aid?

The Baptist Church in Crystal Springs, alone, paid more money last year for the education of young ministers at Clinton than was paid for the same purpose by the Mississippi Conference. At this rate how long will it be before we have to yield this fruitful field to others more worthy than ourselves? Let Mississippi Methodists read and answer.

J. M. WEEMS.

The above note from Presiding Elder Weems, of the Brookhaven district, reveals a sad fact. God has answered our prayers in calling laborers into his vineyard; but these laborers feel the need of some further education before they can take the position of workers. The time is past when the church was justified in putting in her pulpits unlearned and ignorant men. The people can not and will not be led by such men in these days. When God calls men now to the ministry, that call is prima facie evidence that the church can and must afford them education sufficient to meet all the demands of the office. In the Mississippi Conference there are 30,315 members, and 155 local preachers, and 135 traveling preachers; and yet Bro. Weems tells us that one little Baptist Church in Crystal Springs raised more money last year for ministerial education than these 30,305 Methodists all put together. In the name of Methodism, what is the matter with us? Have we any religion at all? Have we forgotten the warning God gave to the church at Ephesus? Brethren, if our religion has not power to turn our money into the channels which God opens to us, then we need to examine ourselves whether we be in the fa. ...

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

A certain Alabama preacher reports the following conversation between himself and one of his members: "A sister said to me, 'We want you to take a vacation.' 'I do not need a vacation.' 'Go away for your health.' 'I am not sick.' 'Go to increase your strength.' 'I have more strength now than I am willing to use.' 'Go and rest.' 'I am not tired.' 'Well, go then, and let us rest.'"

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country, but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms. But worms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to commend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in the sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA.

Dyspepsia Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA by cleansing and purifying the blood, tones up the digestive organs, and relief is obtained at once.

Rheumatism Is undoubtedly a blood disease caused by an excess of the lactic acid in the blood. Where there is perfect filtration of the blood there can be no rheumatism. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA will remove the poison, supply the acids and relieve the pains.

Scrofula is caused directly by impurities in the blood, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, blotchy eruptions on the face or neck. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA, by purifying the blood, forces the impurities from the system.

Kidneys Through the Kidneys flow the waste fluid containing poisonous matter. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained and poisons the blood, causing pain in the small of the back and loins, flushes of heat, chills. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA acts as a diuretic, causing the kidneys to resume their natural functions.

The Liver By irregularity in its action or suspension of its functions, the bile poisons the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, weak eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling. These are relieved at once by the use of BULL'S SARSAPARILLA the great blood resolvent.

THE OLD-FASHIONED KITCHEN.

BY H. S. KELLER.

The old-fashioned kitchen, with kettles and pans,
And gable-roof reaching above it;
With daises and lilies and "sparrow-grass" beds
All scattered about—oh, I love it!

At noon what a feast, when the pies nicely baked,
From the oven with fragrance came greeting!
I've wandered all over, but never have found
A place so delicious for eating.

The ivy that clings to the old kitchen porch,
Swings gracefully, quiet and steady,
Where expectant I sit as I wait for the call
Which tells me that "dinner is ready."

A sweet little maiden whose elbows are flecked
By the traces of dough and of flour;
A rosy bowl brimming with roses as rare
As e'er graced a queen and her dower.

The pie-crust, sugar-sprig and biscuits so brown,
The roast-rib so succulent, tender;
The coffee so fragrant and eggs yellow gold;
The waitress, twice over I send her,

The strawberry sauce and the green lettuce dish,
The radishes, "snappy," all lay there;
'Tis a feast for the gods, and I can not resist,
Quite man-like and hungry, am I say there.

The old-fashioned kitchen, with kettles and pans,
And gable-roof reaching above it;
With daises and lilies and "sparrow-grass" beds
All scattered about—oh, I love it!

A sweet little maiden whose elbows are flecked
By the traces of dough and of flour—
She won the way into my heart, and I guess
'Twas done by her kitchen's endower.

—Good Housekeeping.

MR. EDITOR: As I have a few weeks' vacation, I have concluded to correspond with the little cousins through your excellent paper. I am a Mississippi girl; have only been here five months last February. Pa and I left the good old State of Mississippi to take up our abode in the far West. I want to say to the cousins that we have always had the dear old ADVOCATE as one of our associates ever since I could remember. When we came here I felt that something was missing. I soon found out it was our good old friend, the ADVOCATE; so we had it sent to my brother, with whom I am living. He is a minister, and is a member of the Pacific Conference. My pa is a minister also; once a member of the Mississippi Conference, but now a local elder of our church. I am going to school. It is a public school; but public schools are much better here than in Mississippi. There are 175 pupils in our school and four teachers. It runs ten months in the year, and graduates its pupils. This is a delightful climate. The scenery is grand. We are in the Santa Clara Valley. On one side we have a view of San Francisco Bay; on all other sides mountains appear. The valleys are very rich, and grow wheat, corn, barley, potatoes and all vegetables. They also raise many kinds of grapes, some of which are made into wine and some into raisins. There are also many beautiful flowers here, some of which I never saw in Mississippi. We have a good Sunday-school, in which I take much interest.

MAGGIE MAY SHARBROUGH.
MOUNTAIN VIEW, California.

MR. EDITOR: I think the only way to work the sum in addition, in your paper of July 21, is to add 1, 2, 3 and 4 together, which makes 10; then add the last of the list you mentioned to ten, and it will make 100. Is this answer correct? I read the "Sermon on Play." If all little children played that way, they could play in the streets with great satisfaction. Careful parents seem to do all they can to keep their children from playing in the streets. I expect it is because they do not always use pretty language like those Zechariah told the builders would play in Jerusalem's streets. Your little friend,

ROSA MIXER.
BIG CANE, Louisiana.

This is not a correct solution. —ED.

MR. EDITOR: We have been wanting to write to the ADVOCATE for some time, to tell you how we welcome its coming. And we also want to tell you how much we love Bro. Patterson. He is zealous in the cause of missions. We send you five dollars for the Japan missionaries. One dollar each for grandma, papa, mamma and Uncle Ernest, and fifty cents each for us. Can any of the little friends tell us to who this verse in the Bible refers?—"And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hand."

Your little friends,

FAULK AND SUE NOBLE.
CHARLEVILLE, Louisiana.

That's a good letter. "Help the Missionaries," is a good motto.—ED.

THE dangers of a malarial atmosphere may be averted if you will occasionally take a dose of Dr. J. H. McLean's Chills and Fever Cure. 50 cents, warranted.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old. School is out now, and I am very glad of it. It was too warm to go to school. We have a nice Sunday-school here, at half after nine in the morning. There are three classes: the Bible class, second class and the infant class. Mrs. Landrum is our teacher. I think she is such a good lady. I belong to the Methodist Church. Our pastor this year is the Rev. J. Landrum. I have no pets. I read through the Bible year before last. Do any of the little cousins wish to know how to read the Bible through in a year? I will tell them: Read three chapters every day of the week and five on Sunday, and you will get through in a year from the day you started. I will ask a few questions: How many books in the Bible? Which is the longest book in the Bible? Which is the longest chapter in the Bible? I will close, wishing good success to the dear ADVOCATE. I remain, as ever,

JENNIE FAULKNER.
WEST MONROE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter in the young people's column from this place, I thought I would write one. My father takes the dear old ADVOCATE, and we are always so glad when it comes. We all read it with delight. We attend Sabbath-school every Sunday. Our superintendent and teachers are so kind and take so much pains to instruct us. Brother A. T. Galloway is our pastor. We all like him very much. His wife is so good and kind that everybody loves her. Our District Conference will meet here, commencing on Thursday before the fifth Sunday in July. Do come out? We will be so glad to see you.

Your little friend.

E. PEARL SCOTT.
GRAND CANE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to the ADVOCATE, I will write. I am a little boy nine years old. I have for my pets two lambs and ten bantam chickens. I take the ADVOCATE myself, and like the children's letters and short stories. I have bought my winter suits for two winters with my apple money. I do not tell this to brag, but thought other little boys of my age might be glad to know how to make themselves useful and helpful. I will ask a question: How many years after Joseph died in Egypt before he was buried in Sechem in the land of Canaan? Your little friend,

STANHOPE KING.
MOUNDS, Louisiana.

A Flat Contradiction.

Some one has told you that your catarrh is incurable. It is not so. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure it. It is pleasant to use and it always does its work thoroughly. We have yet to hear of a case in which it did not accomplish a cure when faithfully used. Catarrh is a disease which it is dangerous to neglect. A certain remedy is at your command. Avail yourself of it before the complaint assumes a more serious form. All druggists.

How Insects Make Music.

The katydid has a wing that is very curious to look at. You have seen this little insect, I have no doubt. Its color is light green, and just where the wing joins the body there is a thick ridge, and another on the wing. On this ridge there is a thin and strong skin, which makes a sort of drumhead.

It is the rubbing of these two ridges, or drumheads, that makes the queer noise that you have heard. There is no music in it, surely. The insects could keep quiet as well as not, and they must enjoy doing it.

The katydid usually makes three rubs with its drumheads, sometimes only two. You can fancy she says, "Katy did," and "She did," or "She didn't." The moment it is dusk they begin. Soon, the whole company are at work. As they rest after each rubbing, it seems as if they answered each other.

Did you know that bees hum from under their wings? It is not the air of those beautiful light wings we hear. It is the air drawing in and out of the air tubes, in the bee's quick flight. The faster a bee flies the louder the hum is.

Don't you believe insects feel? Indeed they do! They have nerves all over them, even through their wings, and out to the end of every feeler. They suffer just as much as you do when hurt. You must remember this, and be kind to all the little insects God has made.—Our Little Ones.

APPETITE and sleep may be improved and every part of the system strengthened and the animal spirits regain their buoyancy by the use of Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier.

Household.

In the Guest-Room.

It is not always practicable in every house to keep a room exclusively for the use of guests, but it is a very pleasant thing to have one or more chambers set apart for the accommodation of visitors. And these should be made as comfortable as circumstances will permit.

If possible they should be heated in cold weather, and have such accommodations within themselves or in reach as a visitor expects in a first-class hotel, and of course, the use of the bath, with plenty of soap and towels, closet and bureau, table and chairs, and such attendance as will make the temporary occupant feel perfectly at home. The rites of hospitality are always recognized as duties toward an invited guest. And an uninvited one should not be wholly ignored in the matter of comfort, although no person can expect the same amount of deference paid to his wishes that he might look for if he were expected and desired as a visitant.

An excess of ornamentation seems quite out of place in a room set apart for the use of company, but there can not be too much of genuine comfort. The way some ladies have of making the guest-room a sort of hospital for all the disabled bric-a-brac of a crowded house is quite laughable. Any hook or picture or article of virtu which seems to have no other place is quietly relegated to the guest-room instead of being packed away in the attic. And the room is often no gainer thereby.

But although there should be enough ornamentation in the visitor's chamber to save it from the bareness of a hotel room, there is much more danger of erring in excess of such accommodations than in getting too little.

There is always room for a quiet, refined taste to expend itself in the guest room. The custom of having paper, envelopes, stamps, pens and ink in the room of a visitor is a good one, together with some freedom and liberty in the use of such materials, as well as of the books and engravings which may be placed there.

Before bedtime the slops should be emptied, fresh water supplied, a pitcher of drinking water with a glass taken to the room, the fire attended to, and the bed made, ready for occupancy. All this can be done without disturbing the occupant of the room, and tends to make a person feel more welcome and at home. Most persons are ill enough at ease away from their own familiar surroundings, and need all the little attentions which can be bestowed upon them to make them comfortable while visiting, and nothing shows a kindly heart and disposition to please more than the making the temporary visitant feel at ease.—Christian at Work.

PRAISE YOUR WIFE.—Praise your wife, man: for pity's sake give her a little encouragement; it won't hurt her. She made your home comfortable, your heart bright and shining, food agreeable—for pity's sake tell her you thank her, if nothing more. She doesn't expect it; it will make her eyes open wider than they have these ten years; but it will do her good, and you too. There are many woman today who are thirsting for words of praise, the language of encouragement. Through summer's heat, through winter's toil they have drudged uncomplainingly, and so accustomed have their fathers, brothers, and husbands become to their monotonous labors that they look for and upon them as they do the daily rising of the sun, and its daily going down. Home every day may be made beautiful by an appreciation of its holiness. You know, if you can take from your drawer a clean shirt whenever you want it, that somebody's fingers have ached in the toil of making it so fresh and agreeable, smooth and lustrous.

Blind to One's Best Interests.

At Tiflis, Japan, it was easier to cut a man's head off than to cure him of love. In some parts of America it appears to be more satisfactory to let a relative or friend die of Consumption or Heart Disease than to have him or her cured by a new remedy that some of the old school physicians view with envy and consequent disrespect. Drs. Starkey and Palen, of 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., had many such experiences when they began to introduce their Compound Oxygen Treatment. But the times are greatly changed and their Home Treatment is now cherished in over thirty-seven thousand families in this land. Send for a pamphlet explaining its properties. It is mailed free.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Why You Feel So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect with defiled water and defective sewerage, as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

"The Life of the Body."

Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indescribable symptoms?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "head and shoulders" above every other Alterative and Blood Medicine. As proof, read these reliable testimonies:

G. C. Brock, of Lowell, Mass., says: "For the past 25 years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of all the diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."

Eugene I. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system, I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Humors, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best

ENOCHS—Resolutions on the death of MRS. R. J. ENOCHS passed by Bethesda Sunday-school:

Resolved, That words fail to express our sorrow at her death; but we rejoice to know that our loss is her gain, for it was only a summons to come up higher.

Resolved, That we accept her messages of love and friendship sent to us from a triumphant death-bed, and lay them to our hearts with resolutions for higher Christian life and work.

CHARLES RUTLEDGE, Sup't.

Whereas, In the wisdom of God our Father, Sister R. J. Enochs has been called to her reward; therefore, be it,

Resolved, That while we can not fathom the depth of this mysterious providence, and while we mourn her departure, we bow submissively to the will of God, believing he doeth all things well. Although he has laid the hand of affliction heavily upon us, he has only taken his own.

Resolved, That we tender our affectionate condolence to the aged mother and our heartfelt sympathy to the husband and children, praying that our pitying Savior may encompass them in his arms of love, and give them grace to say, "Not as I will, but as thou will."

Resolved, That though our little band is so weakened by the death of one of our best workers, we unite our efforts in carrying on the mission work, and that special prayer be made that all hindering causes be removed from the way.

From MSS. we can not tell what body passed these last resolutions.—ED.

HORTMAN—Died, at her home, near Pleasant Valley, in Webster parish, La., MRS. LURANY D. HORTMAN, on May 25, 1887. Mrs. Hortman was born in La Grange county, Ga., October 18, 1812, and was married to Mr. Wesley N. Hortman, November 21, 1861. This union was blessed with five children—all of whom are still living to mourn her death.

Sister Hortman became a member of the Methodist Church at the age of twelve, and to the end of her life lived a noble Christian, showing to the world that she enjoyed the religion she professed. She was feeble for several years before her death, but was always cheerful, and finally when the end came she was perfectly resigned to the will of God. There is a vacancy in the house, a vacancy in the church. She has gone, but she is happy! She has gone to that delightful place, where sickness and sorrow, pain and death, never enter, and where she has the delightful associations of all the redeemed. In her death the church has lost a true member and worker; the preacher, a good friend. H. S. JOHNS.

WILSON—The subject of this tribute was born in Amsterdam, Holland, 1818, and came to this country when but two years old. She resided in East Feliciana parish until the year 1841, at which time she moved to the town of Covington, La., where she remained till May 2, 1887, when death ended her earthly career.

SISTER WILSON was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for over fifty years, and enjoyed the life and power of religion. Her attachments for the sanctuary of the Lord were so great that she has been known to walk many times a distance of four miles to hear the "glad tidings" of the everlasting gospel proclaimed. Possessed of a gentle disposition, patient in trials, she naturally bore her last afflictions with that resignation which ever characterizes the true Christian; and when the last struggle came she was ready with her lamp burning, and, no doubt, to day our deceased sister is shouting the everlasting song of the redeemed, where "congregations ne'er break up and Sabbaths have no end." G. R. ELLIS.

PEARCE—EMMA LEE PEARCE was born August 25, 1884, and died May 17, 1887, aged two years and ten months.

This bereavement is sad beyond our telling. The departure of this little one, by burning, is an affliction to be felt and known only by the affectionate, now lacerated, hearts of the parents, Bro. and Sister Pearce. Bright as the morning, and pure as the dew thereof, this sweet flower was suddenly taken from earth and transplanted in heaven. Her pattering footsteps fall no more in earthly home, and yet her words and tender form linger to hallow her memory through every hour. She is gone only to linger and live in brighter life athwart our pathway—gone, but living beautified in the glory-land. She is another jewel—our own sweet one—among the angels. Another star shines to lead us on to Eden's blissful shores. A FRIEND.

MASK—LEILA ADA, youngest child of Dr. W. B. Mask and Harriet L. Baker, was born February 1, 1887, and departed this life, near Winnfield, La., June 30, aged four months and twenty-four days. Her short life was one of affliction. May the bereaved mother be comforted in the thought that the dear little sufferer is freed from pain, and resting safely in the arms of Jesus! J. F. WYNN, P. C.

VAUGHAN—ELLA MARIARET, daughter of M. V. and J. H. Vaughan, aged three years, two months and twenty-eight days, died on the morning of July 7. While the rain was gently watering the earth the pure spirit took its flight to the God who gave it. Death may the bands of life unloose, but can't dissolve my love.

W. R. INABNET.

Faith.

The late Prof. C. S. Harrington held in such high esteem for his deep spiritual attainments, as well as for thorough scholarship, wrote near the close of life:

"The faith that makes men righteous is the faith that fastens simply and trustingly on the Lord Jesus Christ as the only all-sufficient, atoning Savior. To that faith it is Jesus that blots our transgressions, makes our record clear. It is Jesus that gives spiritual life. It is he that continues it. This faith merges the believer's life into the life of Christ. It dares not, it wishes not, a moment's separation. It knows no historic past; it deals only in present tenses. It echoes Paul's prayer, 'Let me be found in him.'

"I can not tell the process; I can not explain the power by which the black coal is transformed into the gleaming diamond; how much less can I tell how, by the mystery of the new birth, the lost, dead soul lives by the merit of Jesus!

"I can not tell how the living tree gets its flower and fruit from the dead substance in which it is rooted, and on which it feeds; how much less can I tell how the wounds, the blood, the death of Christ gives life to the soul dead in trespasses and sin, and clothes it with the fruitage of holiness. Or how can I tell the end of this divine work, when the giver of spiritual life shall crown it with life eternal? when dust and ashes, this body, shall spring from its sepulchre and appear in the glorified body of the resurrection? But it shall be done 'according to the working of the power whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself.' Enough for me that this is God's way, and the work is worthy of God. The righteousness may be mine by the faith of Jesus Christ. 'Not by works of righteousness that we have done, but according to his mercy, he saved us by the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Ghost. Faithful is he that hath promised, who also will do it.'"

THE REDEEMING MARK.—Visitors to the British dock-yards tell us that all the official property of the head of the nation is marked with a "broad arrow" where that is possible. In the case of the ropes for the rigging of the vessels a scarlet strand running through each rope takes the place of the "broad arrow." A suggestive illustration surely. The redeeming mark will be upon the Christian's business transactions. In his dealings with his fellow-men he will endeavor to make his life an exponent of Christian principle. When the sun arises it gilds all things with its beams. It has no favors, but floods the whole earth with light. So when the religion of the Lord Jesus comes into the life it should gild and illuminate the whole sphere of daily duty. John the Baptist taught this to the soldiers who came to him to be baptized. Christ said to Zaccheus, of Jericho, "This day is salvation come to this house," but this was not said until Zaccheus plainly showed that he comprehended that religion had something to do with his business affairs. Religion is certainly not a matter of mere words, or orators and rhetoricians might lay special claim to position in the kingdom of grace. Religion is a matter of deeds. God requires of us that we "do justly, love mercy and walk humbly with our God." These three things cover broad ground. In the day of account the Master will say to those upon his right hand, "Inasmuch as ye did it," etc., while those upon his left hand will hear the sentence of condemnation because their lives failed to produce the deeds needed to substantiate their claims to a place among the elect.

The Chamber of Peace.

This pretty phrase always brings to mind the thought of the Pilgrim's Progress and the blessed chamber in which the Pilgrim rested from the fatigues of his journey. The thought of it was brought to mind not long ago by a friend's random remark.

She had moved into a new home, which possessed greater capacity and ampler rooms than her former one. Always hospitable, she decided in the new house to have one room set apart for friends who needed a few day's rest; not merely for invited kindred and guests, but for those to whom it would be a real boon to tarry a little while beneath her pleasant roof. So, one by one, these friends come, arriving with shawl-strap or satchel, and remaining now over a Sabbath day, or staying for a week, if it suited their convenience. Now it is a toiling Bible reader, going from house to house among the poor, now a lay sister whose self-elected work for Christ is in the hospital which gathers little children into its loving shelter. Again, it is an elderly lady, over whose spirit in her declining years has come the restlessness which makes her weary of the home monotony and eager as a child for a little break or change. Whoever comes is ushered into the Chamber of Peace and treated as an angel, with the most winsome, cordial and beautiful grace of affection. Made at home, but not made to feel that she is giving any trouble, my friend's Chamber of Peace is to many a wayfarer an ante-room of heaven.

The suggestion is worth passing on. Often we sigh because we have so few opportunities of doing anything worth much for the Master. But are we availing ourselves of the little opportunities right in our path?—Christian Intelligencer.

Why Laura Lost Her Beau.

Laura once had an affluent beau,
Who called twice a fortnight, or so.
Now she sits, Sunday eve,
All lonely to grieve,
Oh, where is her recreant beau,
And why did he leave Laura so?

Why, he saw that Laura was a languishing, delicate girl, subject to sick headaches, sensitive nerves and uncertain tempers; and knowing what a life-long trial is a fretful, sickly wife, he transferred his attentions to her cheerful, healthy cousin, Ellen. The secret is that Laura's health and strength are sapped by chronic weakness, peculiar to her sex, which Ellen averts and avoids by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper.

GUNS VERSUS GOSPEL.—Some very large guns have recently been made, costing, each of them, a nice little fortune. We are told each shot fired will cost $900. Each one of these guns would build many churches and parsonages and school-houses. Each shot would support for a year a missionary and his family. If there was as much money spent in saving as in butchering men, the necessity for wars would soon cease. Yet nations spend the money of the people by the millions in such barbarous outlays, and the church raises its money in benevolent efforts by thousands. The nations think such savage performances are for its protection. The truth is, that if for ten years the war revenues of the civilized world were expended in Christian missionary work, the world might largely be taken for Christ, and nations be saved from all danger from one another. A Christian church is the best fort ever built, and a missionary is more protection than a general.—Observer.

Scarlet Fever.

Darbys Prophylactic Fluid is unequaled in the treatment of Scarlet Fever. Used as a gargle, it prevents the throat from becoming diphtheritic, allays the inflammation and subdues the pain. Used to sponge the body, it allays the itching inflammation of the skin and destroys infection.

Exposed in the sick-room, it will prevent the spread of contagion, and keep the atmosphere wholesome.

Evil thoughts are as dangerous to ourselves and as reprehensible in the sight of God as evil deeds, and they need to be repudiated, and abandoned and dislodged. Let us put our minds, as well as our hearts and bodies, under the sceptre of our divine Lord, and bring every thought in captivity to the law of Christ. Says the apostle, "Whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, think on these things." So do.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

God's Gift to Childhood.

That the Bible is a special gift to childhood scarcely needs proof. The grand story of the creation, the garden so beautiful, but with a snake in it; the parleying with temptation; Cain and Abel; the deluge; Abraham and Isaac; Jacob and Esau; Joseph and his brothers; Moses; the bondage; the Red Sea; Mt. Sinai; the golden calf; the fiery serpents; the captive maiden; the children and the bears; Elijah and Elisha; the arrow shot at a venture; Ruth; Esther; Jonah; Daniel; the children in the furnace; and the closing prophecy that the hearts of the fathers shall be turned toward the children—all these stories, gems of obl, attracting them toward Jesus. What book for children surpasses this in the finger touches of the Master Architect and Painter? Turning to the New Testament, there is the manger where the pitying eye of God veiled in infant flesh opened on the world's poor; the village of Nazareth, where the child Christ taught that grandest lesson of filial affection; his baptism and temptation; his miracles; his transfiguration; Gethsemane; Calvary; the eleventh-hour penitent; the resurrection; the ascension and the heavenly city with its streets of gold. O mothers, Sunday-school teachers, infant-class teachers, who, if not we, shall trace with the children this wonderful story of Jesus? Who, if not we, shall lead them into the broad, unfathomed and fathomless deep of the love of God? From this ocean of truth, let us bring argument such as children in sympathy with us, we with them, shall understand; let us bring illustrations from nature, let us bring the richest, the most gorgeous; let us bring in the potent forces of example, pile Bible stories and Bible truth so high about them that they can only see from their own little sinful hearts up to the great forgiving heart of Jesus.—Mary E. Holmes, in Interior.

BOOKS.

A DAY IN CAPERNAUM. By Franz Delitzsch, D. D., professor in the University of Leipzig. Translated from the third German edition by Rev. George H. Schodde, Ph. D., professor in Capital University, Ohio. Funk & Wagnalls, 20 Astor Place, New York.

Prof. Franz Delitzsch is generally recognized as the leading Old Testament scholar of the world. This magnificent little work of his has run through several editions in Germany. It is one of the most beautiful books we have ever read. Everybody should read it.

GOD'S WORD TO HIS CHILDREN. By George Macdonald, LL.D., the celebrated English preacher and writer. 12mo. $1 50. Same publishers.

There is a magnetism in this author's writings which fascinates while it instructs. The reader may be often startled by the sentiment or the form of expression, but it will suggest wholesome thought, even if he can not accept the teaching. The piety and spiritual devotion of these sermons will charm the Christian reader. The volume, we are confident, will prove one of the most suggestive and popular publications of the kind which have of late issued from the press.

FAULTS of digestion cause disorders of the liver, and the whole system becomes deranged. Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier perfects the process of digestion and assimilation and thus makes pure blood.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

This camp ground is situated on Bogue Falaar river, seven miles northeast of Covington, La., and four miles north of Abita Springs, the terminus of the Pontchevent and Cavre railroad. There will be a hack line between the Abita Springs and camp ground for the transportation of all who may come by this route.

There will be a public boarding tent on the grounds, where meals and bedding can be procured at low rates. All ministers of the gospel will be cared for free of charge, and are, with all others, earnestly invited to attend.

O WAIT, IMPATIENT HEART!

O wait, impatient heart!
As Winter waits, her song-lords fled,
And every nestling blossom dead,
Beyond the purple seas they sing!
Beneath soft snows they sleep!
They only sleep. Sweet patience keep,
And wait, as Winter waits the Spring.

And hope, thou heavy heart!
If tiny, trembling violet fair
But kiss her cheek—on morning air
If faintest note shall fall—so soon,
Sweet Spring awakes to smile,
Though skies are grey. In hope the while,
She looks to greet full, golden June.

Work, work, thou restless heart!
As royal Summer works; to warm
To richer life, and hold from harm
Her fields and wood; to thatch with gold
And rose her fruitage fair,
Only to lay with gracious care,
At Autumn's feet her wealth untold.

And trust, O doubting heart!
As Autumn trusts; bright robe and crown
Puts by, and calmly lieth down
In Winter's cold embrace; for so
God wills. Into thy night
Of woe shall break the morning light,
As bursts new life above the snow.

Dollars for Self—Dimes for God.

BY REV. J. J. BILLINGSLEY.

TEXT: Luke xii, 21.

Third proof. Take the "needless self-indulgences" in matters pertaining chiefly to what are called the physical appetites. This but opens up the way for me to say that there can be no doubt of the fact that there is a vast amount of money in the land squandered in the way of extravagant and luxurious living. The books of market owners, of retail grocers, and of other establishments, if opened to public scrutiny, would disclose some startling facts concerning our modern Epicures, and what it costs them to live, and who, at the same time, refuse to send the bread of life to the hungry, starving and dying millions of the Lord's redeemed in other lands; but, as I can only outline in a limited space, the reader must elaborate and supply the facts for himself.

Take opium. America to-day is yielding in a large measure, at the ratio of nearly one thousand per cent., to this maudlin habit of a debased heatheuism. Druggists hold well their secrets, and the medical quacks, whose prescriptions open up an insufferable hell on earth to thousands of these inebriates, embracing all classes, from John Chinaman, in his dive, to the elegant lady of Boulevard notariety. Thousands of the fair sex to-day in this land are nothing but living, walking opium depositories, enslaved victims, bound over to the day of judgment in chains of darkness that will never be broken except by the coffin lid. Ask these poor wretches for a missionary dollar, and you shock their sensitive nature at the mere mention of it; but when the appetite calls for opium, opium will come, if it takes the silk dress on her back to get it. I have seen such—a few now and then in the churches. A dozen symptoms betrayed them. They were standing interrogation points, enquiring after opium, and will take it in any form; and so the money goes—a million dollars of it yearly.

The tobacco habit is worse. By this useless extravagance we burn, chew up and spit out on the pure atmosphere of heaven enough money in twelve months to run the missionary enterprises of the church nearly a quarter of a century. The Protestant communicants of the United States, from July statistics, number 12,018,977. Say that one-half are males, and that one-half the males use tobacco. This would give 3,006,359. Now, if each spent seventy-five cents per month for tobacco, which certainly is a low average estimate, they would spend yearly $22,547,692 for tobacco; or, putting the average at $1 per month, which is still a reasonable limit, and you have $36,076,308 as the sum total spent annually for tobacco by the Protestant Church in America. Putting the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at a million members, and applying the same ratio, we spend even $3,000,000 for tobacco, which divided by $164,439, amount paid for foreign and domestic and special missions, and for church extension also (see report Board of Missions), and we find that our yearly tobacco bill would run all these various departments of missionary work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for over eighteen years. That is to say, at a low estimate, if the Southern Methodist people, not including our noble, enlightened and cultivated ladies who dip snuff, were to abstain from the use of tobacco for only twelve days, it would wipe out entire the missionary debt of a $100,000, under which we pray and cry and groan, as if the weight of a thousand worlds were upon us. What a startling array of facts to be flashed by the hand of God on the burning heavens in the last day. How shall we meet them? is the question. And the echo in your conscience, friendly reader, says, How?

From this brief outlining of a great evil it abundantly appears that men are rich toward themselves, and can generally find money for the accomplishment of personal and selfish aims. A thorough elaboration in detail of all the facts in the case, if they were attainable, would show the magnitude of this moral crime in all its immense and alarming proportions, and the illustrations would be interminable. We have not touched the statistics of the land at large on the waste of money for tobacco. We have not brought up the whisky tax of the world as levied by the rum power on the people of the various commonwealths. We have not exposed that wicked expenditure of God's bounty that is squandered yearly on ribbons, plumes, fine laces and costly outfits generally. We have left untouched that senseless and magnificent outlay of the Lord's gold as displayed on the wedding day and at the funeral service. Nor have we explored the hidden vaults, of even the Lord's people, for that vast amount of dead capital done up in gold and silverware and costly trinkets of various forms and value. To elaborate fully along these and other kindred lines would be to exhaust your patience and to arrive at a point of money value where figures lose their functions. Certainly you must be convinced of the fact that for the gratification of fleshly appetites and mental appetences men are rich toward themselves.

Educational Centers.

MR. EDITOR: No doubt many of your subscribers will join with me in thanking you for so continually advocating the cause of education. As an officer in the Louisiana Educational Society, the writer has given this subject considerable attention for several years. The conclusions as to what can be done in very many parts of our State to locally help liberate our people from the curse of illiteracy is in the establishment and perpetuity of strong educational centers, controlled by religious thought and motive. The simple, moral and mental forces requisite are to be found in most, if not all, the cities and towns of our State. One of the most potent of these factors is the aggressive minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, whose province is the attacking of error and the opposing of the antagonists of the kingdom of Christ. Valiant service has this worthy band rendered in the past, especially in the cause of religion as well as of temperance. Were they as unitedly and determinedly to oppose the foe, illiteracy, soon would vast majorities of the children in this State be found in good schools, who are now growing up under the curse of ignorance.

How are these centers to be established? Fortunately without pecuniary cost, and by the devotion of a single man in each locality, whose heart delights in serving God by building up the Master's temple with little polished stones—children's hearts. Such an one is usually he whom the Bishop has sent as an under-shepherd to the fold, whose ministry is to care not only for the spiritual interests of the community in which he lives, but by all means in his power to ramify the society with streams of gospel influence. Let such an one make a list of all the best and wisest people, both ladies and gentlemen, in his community, and by personal visitation of a selected number from the various religious denominations and classes, seek to interest them in the formation, say, of a reading club, a literary association, or an educational society, of such a type best suited to the necessities and conditions of his locality. Let the members feel their responsibility for the educational want of their community. A prolific subject for discussion would be, "Lack of School Privileges, and Remedies within Reach." Such a society could easily be made by the abundance of talent at command in many places. The exercises could be made highly entertaining by readings, recitations, music, essays and addresses; and philanthropic as well, by beginning a circulating library, composed of inexpensive books contributed by the members.

Suppose that each of our fifty-seven parishes had from one to five of such societies, what grand lifting forces would be operating in all these centers!

May our dear Lord and Savior put it into the heart of numbers of our conscientious and Christian brothers to enter this promising field and unitedly co-operate in diffusing Christian knowledge to the unreached masses!

Should anyone desire further information on this subject, the undersigned will be glad to hear from them.

Your brother in Christ,
D. L. MITCHEL.

Letter from California.

When I left home my friends all begged me to let them hear from me through the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, to save the trouble of a too voluminous correspondence, for we all regard the ADVOCATE as a medium of home arrangement, and one is sure to find it on nearly all our library tables; so, dear ADVOCATE, I send you greetings from the Golden Gate. I shall not attempt a description of the trip out, lest my friends should be as weary of the recital as I was of the actual experience. I have never before traveled over such a dreary waste. From Fort Worth, Texas, to Fort Yuma, California, the whole desolate country looked as if the curse of God rested upon it. Not the motion of a bird's wing in the air above. Nothing but prairie dogs and jack rabbits could exist on the earth beneath, and as for the waters under the earth, it takes the anger of a well-borer to find them.

The 125 California excursionists on our train decided to take in El Paso en passant; so we passed a day and night there. It is a thriving little city built on a dry, hot plain: all vegetation grown by irrigation. That sweetest of all soporifics, the patter of a gentle rain on the roof, is almost unknown to these people. Oh, what glowing pictures they do miss! The famed hasheesh ne'er conjured up such visions as one can see with closed eyes, "when the gentle rain cometh;" but they have their opium dens. Turn which way you will, you encounter the bland face of a Celestial; and, though he may have been in our Christian land for years, he is ever "the heathen Chinee."

We crossed the Rio Grande and spent an afternoon in Paso del Norte. At the Barracks they showed us the vile den where Cutting was incarcerated: so I felt like cutting away from there. The old missions were very interesting. They are the oldest places of Christian worship in this country, and history and tradition have sanctified them; but our guide was a perfect curiosity, and a type of the Mexican race. From sheer laziness he had been sitting prone upon a sand heap. He was arrayed in tatters. He was half drunk, and could not say enough of the pure juice of the grape (to the mortification of the white ribbons in the party), and he owned ten dogs. Some excuse the appalling laziness of these people on the pretext of climate; but just over the river the air does not have the same effect upon the thrifty Americans.

Fort Yuma put us all in a good humor, for there the desert blossomed as the rose: and we spent some time among the flowers and rare shrubs. Poor Lo stood around and peered in at the car windows in open-eyed wonder. He was clothed in Uncle Sam's dry goods; but he still had on his war paint and feathers. In crossing the desert I saw for the first time the mirage of the desert, and I could appreciate for the first time the picture so often drawn by explorers, of the weary traveler, almost exhausted, almost consumed with a burning thirst, suddenly seeing a clear, cool stream of limpid water. By a superhuman effort he calls up a little more strength, and plods on toward the goal; but just as he stoops for the life-giving draught, it vanishes, and he dies on the sandy plain, and his bones bleach under the brassy sky. With the glare and heat and dust of the desert all about you, this picture does not seem overdrawn.

We are now in Los Angeles, Cal. It is a lovely city containing 65,000 people, some magnificent buildings, horse cars, cable cars, electric cars, gas and electric lights. It is connected by railroad with the whole world, it seems to me. It lies at the foot of the Sierra Santa Monica Mountains, while to the south and west, as far as the eye can reach, stretch plantations of oranges, figs, lemons, limes, etc. Here they have that anti-malarialist, the eucalyptus; also pepper trees. One might say that the wealth of the tropics is here. In the court of the hotel where I am boarding, hang clusters of green bananas, oranges, lemons, and guavas, in abundance.

We visited the ostrich farm here yesterday, and were much interested. They have forty of them in pens. They were brought from the Cape of Good Hope. The cost was $500 each, and the duty for them per capita was $500 more. There was a nest in one of the pens containing five eggs, and they had an incubator full. All the eggs are hatched in incubators. They had on hand also some dressed plumes at right dollars apiece.

My friends at home who have the flower mania would go wild here. I have seen an arch seven feet high covered with heliotrope; geraniums twenty feet tall, fuchsias covering bay-windows, oleanders penned and knotty with age. The proprietor of a nursery that I visited yesterday is known as "the rose king." He showed me, twined over a chimney, a tomato vine that had borne successively ten years. It had never known wintry weather enough to wither a leaf. A perpetual spring-time seems to reign, and any good thing that I would say of this delightful and equable climate would not be an exaggeration.

The real estate boom surpasses anything one could imagine. Immense fortunes made in a few months. Capitalists from the four quarters of the globe are here investing. In this hotel everybody, from the kitchen scullion to the proprietor, have bought a lot or lots. You step into a real estate office and you will see ladies, boys, gentlemen, Chinamen and negroes all after land speculation. I took the fever at once, as I do everything that is in the least contagious, and my pulse was in a perfect flutter: but my mentor is as steady as "immovable rock." He thinks speculation a "tricksy sprite," and closes his ears and eyes to all rose-hued representations that look to an investment on his part.

We spent a divine day in Pasadina yesterday. It is a lovely city of ten thousand people, about an hour's run from Los Angeles. At the depot the genial face of that some-time Louisianian, Mr. Harry Ogden, greeted us. He took us in his carriage all over the city, showing us the points of interest. From the heights in front of the Raymond Hotel we had a fine view of the whole valley lying at our feet, embowered in foliage, a perfect vision of greenness and beauty. The mountains seemed to surround the city like an exaggerated Chinese wall, while just over the heights we had a glimpse of old ocean, thundering at the mighty bulwarks for a pass-way. A real Caddo parish dinner at Mr. Ogden's hospitable home crowned the day.

On Sunday, of course, we found the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and those who think we have not a "firm foundation" on this Pacific slope, let them step into this elegant church and be undeceived. The architecture is of the newest and most tasteful design. The stained glass windows threw such a soft light around the fine young minister that he looked like a saint. The grand and mellow notes of a fine pipe organ reverberated through the church. I think St. Cecilia herself must watch over that choir, for their heavenly singing carried my soul up to the very throne of God. After service pastor and people came and took us by the hands, and we felt that we were, indeed, among our own. Bishop McTyeire said truly, when he said that the word "Methodist" holds people more firmly together than the masonic grip.

Now we are on the eve of departure for Long Beach, and the life-giving sea breezes and the invigorating salt baths. So, adieu. SHREVEPORT.

JULY 25, 1887.

Two Pastors Fallen.

MR. EDITOR: Our church is enshrouded in sadness on account of the loss of our dear pastor, Rev. J. D. Jackson, who passed into the realms of eternal day at two o'clock P. M., July 25, at the parsonage in Opelousas. He had been attending a series of protracted meetings for six or eight weeks, laboring successfully. He preached his last sermon in Opelousas, on July 10, from, "Our lamps have gone out." He was suffering much at the time with pain in his head, but preached with power.

During his illness his mind frequently wandered. His physicians thought the crisis past, and that he was better; but a sudden change announced the worst. He seemed conscious of his condition; told his family that was the last night he would be with them. His wife asked if he was near heaven. He answered slowly, but audibly, "Y-e-s; t-h-e-r-e," and without a struggle entered into the pearly gates.

His remains were borne to the church, which loving hands had draped in mourning and decorated with floral tributes.

The funeral services were performed in the church by Revs. F. W. Lewis and J. White Davis, after which numerous friends followed the casket to the cemetery, where our beloved presiding elder, Rev. S. S. Keener, met the cortege, and, with appropriate and endearing remarks, consigned the body to its rest till the resurrection of the just.

"God moves in a mysterious way," and we are too short-sighted to solve the mysteries connected with his all-wise providences. Five days and seven hours after Bro. Jackson's death another watchman, Rev. J. P. Porter, in our neighboring town, Washington, was called to his reward, and we are left without shepherds. Our hearts are sad. We sorrow, not that they are at rest, but that their solemn warnings are hushed, their voice no more will be heard proclaiming the precious truths of the gospel. In their prime of life and usefulness these two consecrated, holy men have been called from "labor to reward," having given themselves, a "living sacrifice," to the church of their espousal.

Our sympathies cluster about the bereaved ones in their deep affliction. God bless, protect and console them!

Pray for our flocks without shepherds.

MRS. M. A. DAVIS.

OPELOUSAS, LA., Aug. 1, 1887.

In a recent address Dr. R. S. Storrs, referring to the divine purpose as manifested in the developments of the present day, has this splendid passage on History:

"I know of no other department of study, outside of the Scriptures, more essentially or profoundly religious. A Christian college may well hold it in honoring esteem, and give it in permanence an eminent place among the studies which it proposes. In our recent country, in our times of rapid and tumultuous change, it seems to me that we specially need this, as the thoughtful among us are specially inclined to it: since it is vital to the dignity and self-poise of our national life that we feel ourselves interknit with the life of the world, from which the ocean does not divide us; that we recognize our distinctive inheritance in the opulent results of the effort and the struggle of other generations. It is a bright and encouraging indication of the best qualities of the American spirit, as well as of the vigor and vivacity of the American mind and the variety of its attainments, that such studies are eagerly prosecuted among us, and that those who have given to them, with splendid enthusiasm, laborious lives—like Prescott, Motley, our honored Bancroft—have been among the most inspiring of our teachers, have gained and will keep their principal places in that republic of letters from which the republic of political fame must always take grace and renown."

"We are constantly prone to forget most important admonitions of Scripture; and yet there are times in our lives when they are peculiarly appropriate. There is an admonition which the pastors would do well to emphasize with all their power just at this time. There is a class of our people who are in peculiar danger just at this time. Here is the admonition to the preachers:

"Charge them that are rich in this world that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works; ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." (I Timothy vi, 17-19.)

"THE CRY FROM JAPAN."

Dedicated to Mrs. Dalsie Lewis Smith.

BY MRS. L. CRARY SAYLES.

From o'er the mighty ocean
"A Macedonian cry"
Is causing a commotion,
And we must "go over."
It spoke in tones of thunder,
And this is what it said
It rends our hearts asunder
"O Christians, are you dead?"

Japan, from hill and valley,
Has opened wide her doors;
O brothers, sisters, rally
And hasten to her shores.
"Oh, don't you hear them crying"
And pleading for the "bread
Of life?" for this they're dying—
"O Christians, are you dead?"

They ask: "When are you coming?"—
Coming to bring us light?
We're sitting in the gloaming,
We're groping in the night
Of darkness that surrounds us,
Of sin in all its gloom;
Some gleams of light have found us,
O Christians, come; there's room.

With out-stretched arms we'll meet you,
In "seven-leagued boots" we'll stride;
By thousands we will greet you—
We've thrown away our pride.
We want to hear the story
The missionaries tell
Before our heads are hoary,
Before we sink to hell.

Oh, list! Columbia's nation,
How can you turn away?
Japan calls for salvation,
And calls for it to-day.
Oh! who will go and tell them?
Oh! who will cross the main,
Caring not what befell them,
But "count all loss as gain"?

Methinks I hear one saying,
"Here am I, Lord, send me."
And, Lord, make no delaying
To set the prisoners free.
Help us to tell the story,
Till the whole earth around
Shall echo, Glory, glory!
With no uncertain sound.

JESUS AND THE LAW.

Matthew v, 17-20.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill."—Matthew v, 17.

SERMON ON THE MOUNT CONTINUED.

If one were to undertake to make an analysis of our Lord's discourse on the mountain, the first division might be called the "Beatitudes," and the second be headed, "Christian Influence; Salt, Light." The third subject, by an easy and natural gradation, could be styled, "The relation of Christ's teaching to the law of Moses and to the deliverances of prophecy," which is the study for the present Sunday-school lesson. The subject is a very important and a very interesting one. It is one also upon which the blessed Master had need to declare himself early in his ministry. He was considered a malefactor, a subverter of the law of Moses. It was thought, too, that he wanted to make himself a ruler and a temporal prince. It was needful to disabuse the minds of the people of these errors. God's kingdom throughout all ages is one. His laws are unchangeable; the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. These same laws Christ came not to add to, nor to modify, but to explain and fulfill. Hence among his first utterances was the re-enactment of

THE OLD LAW.

Verse 17. "Think not." Do not be misled by the blessings which I have pronounced upon the people, and by the high dignity which I have put upon Christians in calling them the salt of the earth, the light of the world. "I am not come to destroy the law and the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." To destroy the law of God is an impossibility. Human laws may be destroyed or abrogated, because human law is fallible, and it is right and just that law proved by experiment to be bad ought to be removed from the statute book. But God's law inheres in the very nature of things. It is the outbeaming of God's glory, the express image of his person. It is supreme, unalterable wisdom, the everlasting fitness of all things which ever were created or ever can be created. Christ's life and character and death are but the incarnation of this law; its presentation to mortals in its most attractive and most influential form.

18. "For verily." Amen, so be it, so it is. The Savior frequently prefaced his most solemn and most important teachings with "Amen," or "Verily." "Till heaven and earth pass." You might just as soon expect the earth and heaven to dissolve as to expect the law to pass away. Indeed, the dissolution of the heaven and the earth is possible; but the destruction of the law can no more be expected than the destruction of God himself. Peter, quoting from Isaiah, writes: "The word of the Lord endureth forever." "One jot or one tittle." Jot, or jod, is the smallest letter in the Hebrew alphabet; tittle—horn, signifies the little corner which distinguishes similar Hebrew letters. This is a proverbial expression to indicate anything very small, and thus to show that the law shall not and can not in anywise be interfered with.

19. "Whoever therefore"—denoting an inference from the majesty of the law spoken of in verses 17, 18—"shall break one of these least commandments." Men can very properly say that some commandments are greater than others, because they produce more evil in this world; but God knows no least commandment in the sense of being more excusable than others. James says: "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." "And shall teach men so." Authorities of any church who deliberately violate this commandment by granting indulgences certainly bring down anathemas upon their head, while ministers of God who daub with untempered mortar are scarcely less guilty. "He shall be called least." The measure he metes will be meted out to him, as he repudiates the least commandment, so that least commandment will repudiate him. "Whosoever shall do, and teach them"—shall recognize them as God's complete and harmonious law, and so declare them by precept and example—"shall be called great." Shall be promoted to honor, as it is said: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city."

20. "Except your righteousness"—your religion exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees. The scribes and Pharisees were in the habit of keeping the letter of the law, and of neglecting the spirit. They were strict in outward things, but within they were full of all inconsistencies and violations of purity and charity. God looks at the heart, and service acceptable to him must not only conform to the outward requirement, but must also have purity of intention and motive. "Shall in no case"—under no circumstances—"enter into the kingdom of Heaven"—experience the joy and purification of religion here, nor its rewards hereafter.

THE NEW LAW, OR THE GOSPEL.

Verse 21. "Ye have heard it said by them of old time." "Said" refers to oral traditions, and not to the written law. The Savior was truly abrogating that law, so-called, and he was teaching that the gospel which he was preaching was perfectly in accord with the old written law. "In danger of the judgment." A court of twenty-three men, who could sentence a criminal to be strangled.

22. "But I say unto you." Here is one speaking by authority, not as man ever spake. "Whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause." The Jews considered every Hebrew a brother. The phrase, "without a cause," does not occur in the New Version. It is left out also of many of the ancient manuscripts. Very properly so. If men were to be allayed to decide upon a sufficient cause, here would be a sliding scale by which they would justify almost all anger. "Raca"—silly man, trifler. "Council"—the Sanhedrim, the highest Jewish court. "Thou fool" seems to mean, not only a senseless wretch, but an impious man or atheist. "Danger of hell fire." Gehenna, the extreme punishment known to the law, involving future retribution.

23, 24. "Therefore." If thou hast offended in any of these particulars. "Leave there thy gift: first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift." Any conscious offense against a brother, which can be reconciled or atoned for, and is neglected, makes the offer of any kind of spiritual worship to God to be unacceptable. David said: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me."

25. "Agree with thine adversary." With anyone whom thou hast thus offended. "Lest at any time the adversary," etc. The meaning of this method by which an offender against civil law is to be brought to justice is simply to show that any one, who violates the law relating to the duties to one's neighbor, will most surely, and after a legal process, be brought to justice.

26. "Verily I say unto thee." This is a most solemn asseveration as to the truth of the statement about to be made. "Thou shalt not come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing." A figurative, yet most emphatic way of stating that there can be no remedy for the violator of this law. A debtor in the debtor's prison has no opportunity whatever of making money to liquidate the claim against him; hence the exaction of the uttermost farthing is the same thing as the shutting the gates of hope against him forever. Men very often employ similar figures to impress the idea of impossibility, viz.: "Such a thing can never happen while the world stands." No one for a moment thinks that it will happen after the world ceases to stand.

This most suggestive lesson most forcibly presents the following, viz.:

1. The law of God never will be, never can be, made to relinquish its claim upon any child of man of any nation, or of any age.

2. That all God's commandments are equally binding upon men. The law is perfect and harmonious; each part suggesting the whole, and the whole comprehending all the parts.

3. That the violation of any law unatoned for will be unending in its retribution.

Reports Adopted by the Meridian District Conference.

CHURCH LITERATURE.

It was ordered by the Meridian District Conference that the report on "Church Literature" be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and also the organ of our church, the Nashville Advocate.

The following is the report:

In proportion as the people become lovers of reading, intelligence increases among them. This is true in regard to the spread of religious culture as of secular education. To acquire an intelligent membership, the members of a church must be diligent readers of its literature. One of the most efficient means for the spread of the gospel is found in the dissemination of religious literature. The power of the press is recognized all over the land as the most efficient means of moving the minds of the people, whether politically or morally. The religious press then becomes a great sanctified power in the advancement of Christ's kingdom over the earth; and a denomination is wise when it appreciates and uses this power to spread its views and doctrine. The Methodist Church has used the aid of the church paper very efficiently in the past, and is still wielding this mighty arm of power to strengthen its hold upon the people, to gain an intelligent membership, and to advance its standards over the world.

Our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, comes as a weekly messenger, bringing the intelligence of the Methodist world to every member. It is a paper ably edited to meet the demands of the church, and ought to be in every Methodist home throughout the patronizing Conferences. Indeed, it is difficult to understand how a Methodist can do without it. He surely can not keep up with the movements of his own church. To live contentedly in ignorance of affairs of the church, and of its great progress in these States, is to lose interest in the Master's kingdom, and to hold but a feeble membership in that kingdom. We earnestly endorse and recommend our ADVOCATE as a paper admirably adapted to our needs, and a power that is doing a great work in evangelizing the people.

The Nashville Christian Advocate, our central organ, is a mammoth periodical, representing the whole church, and is the authorized source of all information concerning the church at large, and is essential to the intelligent apprehension of the great movements of the church. In these two Advocates we have a complete compendium of the current history of the church, containing a choice variety of reading-matter to suit all tastes.

The Methodist Review, published at Nashville, is a stately, dignified publication, containing able articles on current questions of great importance to the intelligent reader, and should have a large circulation.

We have a complete Sunday-school literature: The Teacher's Magazine, The Senior and Junior Quarterly, and the Little People—all admirably adapted to the Sunday-school work; and a Methodist Sunday-school can not be successfully managed without them.

The missionary work is ably represented in the Missionary Reporter and the Woman's Missionary Advocate. In them we find a complete information of all our missionary operations. The circulation of them would arouse a more general and stronger missionary spirit among our people; and certainly the advancement of God's kingdom over the heathen world ought to interest intensely every lover of that kingdom.

In conclusion, we would say that no church is blessed with a better literature, more ably edited, more completely adapted to the needs of the church, and by its cheapness brought within the easy reach of every member. The prayerful resolution ought to possess us all: to circulate widely our literature, and to spread thereby the divine truth, as we believe it, throughout all these lands.

WOMAN'S DEPARTMENT OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

In the report on "Church Extension," adopted by the Meridian District Conference, which convened at Heidelberg, Miss., July 28-31, the following paragraph, relating to the Woman's Department of Church Extension, was ordered to be published in our Conference organ, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE:

Our last General Conference inaugurated what is called the Woman's Department of Church Extension, the object of which is to organize societies in every charge for the purpose of raising funds to aid in building parsonages where none exist. We regret to report that but one society has been organized in this district. This is located at Meridian, and numbers about seventy-five members. Certainly if any work ought to enlist the interest and co-operation of the preachers, it is that of building parsonages for the comfort of their own families.

L. CARLEY,
Chair'n of Com.

Self-Denial in the Country, etc.

At our house it looked as if we could not do much for the missionary debt except pray. Our household is composed entirely of womankind, and we do not use tobacco, or liquor, or tea, or coffee, or even Moxie. We do our own work, so could not save servants' hire. All told, we have spent five dollars for dressing this year. Somebody suggested living on half rations a week; but we make out on quarter rations all the time—breakfast: hominy, butter, clabber; dinner: buttermilk, a biscuit, slice of meat, or egg, apiece; supper: clabber, sweetened with molasses, and whatever is left from dinner. Sundays we have rice, but no buttermilk, as we never churn on that day.

We decided not to wait till August, but self-deny while we could. In a fortnight we saved and sold two pounds of butter—forty cents; two gallons of buttermilk—twenty cents; dozen eggs—ten cents. A neighbor sent us a big watermelon—our first, last, and only one of the season—and we sold it for fifteen cents. One day the minister dined with us, and we fed him on bacon and beans, and got fifteen cents for the chicken we should have slain. Then, one of us went to a picnic, and saved fifteen cents more—by taking the money instead of the ice cream and lemonade a young man wanted to treat her to. Another gained a dime by getting eight in place of ten yards of lawn for her best dress. All of it does not amount to much; but our mathematical genius figured it out that if the other nine hundred thousand nine hundred and ninety odd Methodists raise as much, it will settle the debt.

Now for the "and-so-forth" chapter of chronicles. Our youngest has acquired a queer, curious habit of perusing the Discipline when other reading-matter is not available. Her opinion of preachers rose perceptibly when she found the Conference formula for admitting them in full connection. If they said "Yes" to all those questions, and minded the special directions, they were not so bad a lot after all. In family conclave our youngest solemnly announced there were only two little reasons why she did not marry a minister—immediately: firstly, no preacher had ever asked her to; secondly, she had never even seen a parson who did not already possess one wife.

A few days ago we attended a protracted meeting eight miles away. Our youngest whistled and caroled camp-meeting melodies all the way, to get herself to feeling "good," as she elegantly expressed it. Fancy her delight when we learned that a single man was to conduct the services! She wondered if he looked like ordinary mortals, and if he would notice her, and if—and if—and if.

The sermon was grand, and the altar exercises seemed a foretaste of heaven. Some shouted, others cried and laughed, as the Spirit moved them; but our youngest sang. There was nothing in the world I desired so much as to see that youngest soundly converted; and when her eyes darkened, and her very dimples assumed a more sanctified expression, I was certain our youngest was approaching the "gate ajar." At intermission our youngest was in ecstacies. She must, could, and would speak to that man. It was his business, and she would always remember any good advice he bothered to give her. She already thought more of him than any man she knew. Alas! the passion was fleeting. Across the churchyard came the object of her admiration. He paused to speak to a group of men, and, as he harangued the brethren, gracefully used as a wand the cigar he had just removed from his mouth. Presto! the eyes of that youngest again darkened and flashed, but this time it was a different emotion. "Two weeks we have scrimped and stinted and starved to scrape up a dollar and a quarter for the heathen, and here's a preacher, who has sacredly promised to abstain from needless self-indulgence, and to always be employed, and never trifle away time, slobbering and blubbering over a cigar. Any preacher who will so lightly break his church and Conference vows, and spend money for tobacco when the heathens are dying in darkness, is not fitten to be called one of God's children. I will not be introduced; wouldn't belittle myself to touch his polluted old paw!" And, with shoulders thrown back, our youngest stalked away in dignified disgust, just as the young brother hurried up to be presented to the "saintly faced little girl who sang with such angelic sweetness."

If possible, the afternoon service was more impressive than that of the morning; but that incensed youngest kept up a continual chatter of comments from behind her fan. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God," announced the devout divine. "Wonder who'll squint at the nasty of breath," from the incorrigible youngest. The minister expatiated upon the grandeur of the better world, and referred to those remarkable trees, with their divers varieties of fruit, described by John. "Know he hopes his bush will bear cigars," from behind that long-suffering fan. When allusion was made to the end of the world and the day of judgment, that youngest wondered "if he'd smoke cigarettes between sentences!"

Before the conclusion of the very pathetic discourse many of us were in tears. Not so with that girlie for whose conversion we were so anxious. "I'll not boo-hoo for any such bombastic lally-gagging," she remarked. The reverend brother invited all who desired to meet him in the "promised land" to come forward and shake hands. Grim and uncompromising our youngest stood, with sealed lips. A gentle nudge for her to "move on" only elicited the laconic response: "Don't fellowship filth." And she did not.

Coming home she sang every low, comic song she knew. It was all put on, for suddenly she burst into a tempest of tears, and wished she had not gone to church, for the preacher had "stumbled" her till she did not want to see a single man again as long as she lived. Paul was willing to refrain from meat if it offended anyone; but modern ministers are different, and she would not go to church another day, for some worse temptation might assail her. She kept her word, for the heat and excitement and disappointment and cry proved too much for that "weak sister," and she took fever.

Query: What shall we do with such girls and such preachers?

CLYTIE BARLER.

True gladness doth not always speak; joy bred and born but in the tongue is weak.—Ben Johnson.

An Inquiry.

MR. EDITOR: I would like to ask, through the ADVOCATE, why the unanimous vote of our Conference, in regard to the change of time for holding the Conference, has been totally disregarded by our Bishop? This is talked about a great deal among the preachers, and they think an explanation would not be out of place. Twice since I have been a member of this Conference resolutions have been passed requesting the Bishops to hold our Conference the first of December instead of January. These are good reasons for changing the time of holding the Conference; and, certainly, if the Bishops will not grant the request of the Conference, we have a right to know the why in this matter.

I am under the impression that if our Bishops could see some of the preachers, who have to move in wagons, moving in January through the sleet and snow, they would realize the significance of our request, and change the time for holding the Conference. The preachers of North Louisiana are the sufferers, and they are largely in the majority. This matter should not be neglected.

Notice.

MR. EDITOR: Will you be so kind as to publish in your paper that I have been appointed an agent for the "History of Methodism in the Mississippi Conference," written by the Rev. John G. Jones, who has been a member of said Conference about sixty years? Volume I. embraces the territory of Alabama, West Florida, Louisiana, Texas and Mississippi, and contains historical facts, not to be obtained anywhere else in the world, of the most vital importance to the church, as the original minutes, embracing all the above territory, have been destroyed by fire. The price of the book is one dollar and fifty cents. Anyone sending me that amount, with their name and address, I will send them the book. Address me at Hazlehurst, Copiah county, Miss.

Every Methodist family in the Southwest ought to have a copy of the book, especially the preachers—the colored as well as the white preachers.

ROMELINE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: It will give all who feel an interest in us here great pleasure to know that our new church is now finished and will be dedicated on the third Sunday of this month (August), at eleven A. M. Bishop Charles B. Galloway is expected to be present, and to dedicate our church. I have the promise of other brethren to be present on that occasion, and to assist in a protracted meeting that will begin at that time. We all expect you to be present, as you promised, in the event you have recovered sufficiently to do so. This will be a joyful occasion to many who have struggled so ardently and persistently in building this house to our God. I hope all, far and near, who have contributed in anywise to this house of worship will be present. Let everybody come.

GRENADA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I am just in from a very profitable meeting, held at Sparta Church, Grenada circuit, which continued nine days, with the following results: A rich baptism of love and power on the whole church (and how that membership did need it!), eighteen additions to the church—some of the best men and women in the country. I do not know how many conversions, but quite a number. May this tidal-wave of glory roll on until we reach the other shore!

H. C. MOREHEAD, Pastor.

VERONA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I closed a meeting at New Chapel last night. Twenty-six conversions and seventeen accessions. God was with us in great power. Many professors and careless church members raised to a higher plane. I was assisted by Bro. Gladney, who is only a boy in age, but a man in preaching ability. He won all hearts by his humility and zeal. You will hear of him in the near future. We give God all the glory.

ANNUAL ADDRESS BEFORE THE WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Through the providence of God we have again met in annual convention to render an account of our stewardship. In some respects our reports are mengre, and the growth has hardly been in accord with our ability; but the Lord of the harvest knows the difficulties under which we have labored. Our gifts, though small, comparatively, show an increase of interest in some localities, and we present them to our Master as free-will offerings. The small increase in members has, doubtless, been commensurate with our labors. We can not reasonably hope to receive blessings, full and running over, nor gain unto a high spiritual life till we employ the means intrusted to us and improve the opportunities scattered around us.

To the ladies assembled in convention a great trust has been committed—a double duty lies at your door, not only to faithfully represent your societies, but to take back with you a zeal wherewith to vivify and enthuse the forthcoming year's labors. It is your privilege to fill your own souls with spiritual light by close communion with the Father of light, and then your radiant faces will shine, Moses-like, each in the corner allotted her. The tongues of fire rested on those who were together in an upper chamber praying, and they went forth proclaiming the wonders of pentecostal blessings.

Encourage the sisters at home to feel that everyone is the Lord's handmaiden, ever ready at the call of duty to exclaim, "Here am I." Support the weak, nourish the faint and uphold those few who are bearing faithfully the heat and burden. And do not forget the children. They are already nearest the kingdom. Form juvenile societies and train them to fall into line and be ready to fill up the ranks when our labors are ended. We know the discouragements and difficulties lying along this way; but, rest assured, every pilgrim has encountered the same, and the lions which threaten you are chained, while angels stand guard before you.

It is hardly needful in an enlightened Christian community for the cause of missions to require a champion, and still there are some who have not informed themselves on this movement of the church. There may be some before me who do not understand the promptings which have delegated a part of this work to the Christian women of the world, or else their understanding is so biased by prejudice that they continue to cry down the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. To such, in all gentleness and sincerity, I shall offer a few words of explanation. There are some Christians who object to our society on the ground that foreign work is beyond our line of duty until the home field is fully gleaned. Surely "that man is worse than a heathen who will not provide for his own household." If the advocates of exclusive home missions would prove their faith by their works, there would soon be such a missionary spirit aroused that every Christian woman would be a full-fledged foreign missionary society within herself. There is really no distinction made here without a difference in the work of missions; for those outside the fold, even our next-door neighbors though they be, are aliens in darkness, and the souls brought to Christ in China are members of his household, brothers and joint-heirs with him. Our common Father wants those of his children who are sheltered in security to hold out a helping hand to their brothers in danger. It is salve for an uneasy conscience to quote the much-abused solecism that "charity begins at home." A proper revision of the text would be, "Charity never begins until it leaves home." It can not be in the line of duty to confine all our efforts to this land of churches and Bibles and hundreds of thousands professed Christians. Is there not "leaven enough here to leaven the whole lump"—and to spare? Jesus said to the disciples, "Go preach to all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." Had they remained at Jerusalem until all the Jews became Christians, they certainly never would have encountered the perils by sea and land which brought the glad tidings to our gentile ears.

This work we have engaged in necessitates cross bearing; but we must overcome the reluctance with which we take up the cross. In the great congregation, upheld by the sympathizing multitude, encouraged by the eloquent preacher, and enthused by the devotional singing, it is easy for the weakest of us to exclaim, "My Lord and my God." But when we stand alone before the critical, sneering crowd—the mark of ridicule—we become veritable sisters of denying Peter, and we fear to open our mouths before the damsels of Pilate's court lest our speech betray us. Alas! for our professions, if they are to wilt and die at the first breath of reproach. Timidity is natural; but cowardice is hateful in the sight of our God. We can be as modest as womanhood and as courageous as a general.

Our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has planted its standard in China, Brazil, Mexico and the Indian Territory. Our workers in the field are doing honest, faithful work. The watch-cry comes back to us—"All's well;" and they mean to work till the going down of the sun. Yea, the sun has already set for some of them. Our home work is well organized to the remotest ranks. The Woman's Board of Missions is composed of delegates from every Southern Conference. The State Conference societies are thoroughly officered, and the auxiliaries are well arranged. We mean work for Jesus, and nothing else. The Board meets annually and, with modest mien, formulates broad plans of development. The General Conference, in 1886, endorsed the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and exhorted the preachers and people to "help those women."

In view of our small treasury, and no contingent fund, our State Executive Board decided not to send a delegate to the ninth convention of the Woman's Board of Missions. I hope this will not occur again, for "in a multitude of counselors there is safety," and every delegate should be present with her voice and vote to represent the needs at home, and to gather knowledge and enthusiasm to be dispensed throughout the work. More is gained for the cause by proper representation than is lost from the treasury in expenses. "There is that withholdeth and yet tendeth to poverty, and there is that scattereth and yet increaseth." It is the same vital need that takes our preachers to Conference once a year to replenish their spiritual vessels with oil from the fountain-head, and the same rule works well in our State Conventions.

I would gladly make mention of each of our foreign workers, but space forbids just here. Yet it is proper and meet to give a passing tribute to the memory of our young martyr, Dora Rankin, who labored so faithfully and died so nobly at her post. I saw her in Augusta, Ga., in 1886, at the convention of the Woman's Board of Missions. She was there fresh from that human hive—China. Her sweet smile and gentle voice told us plainly wherein lay the charm by which she fascinated the heathen children and their mothers. She reveled in the congenial Christian companionship of kindred sprits at Augusta, and never tired of narrating thrilling incidents in the lives of the almond-eyed children of the Orient. I shall never forget her warm handclasp and tearful voice as she said, at parting: "What a feast of heavenly things has been spread for us in these meetings! How I wish I could scatter them all along through the laborious years to come in my foreign home, and bring them out one by one for perpetual enjoyment." Alas! little did we dream that the shadow of the dark-winged messenger was then hovering over her. The dangers of the deep safely passed, and a loving reunion with her waiting sister in their foreign home granted, then God beckoned her longing spirit upward to partake of heavenly things truly and to wear the crown she had so nobly won. Today her lonely grave is the consecrated link which binds her mourning, believing children in China to the heaven she taught them to seek. Her aged mother on this side the ocean, with tearful voice, says: "She was my baby; but she was God's child. It is well!" And the Woman's Board of Missions stands looking upward to their God and hers, and echoes, "It is well." Thus the workmen fall, but the work goes on. Another stone, rounded and polished and impressed with the image of the Savior, is carefully laid to its place in God's spiritual temple. The death of the martyrs is truly the seed of the church. Dora Rankin, though dead, yet speaketh, for the inspiration of her beautiful life and triumphant death has already awakened a burning zeal in the hearts of seven noble women, who have come forward, saying, "We are ready to fill up the ranks." Are we not willing—yea, glad to be able to have a share in this glorious work by sending them? With all the comforts and luxury of our lives—surrounded by the sweet influences of Christian home life, overshadowed by the security of Christian government, blessed with the unspeakable love of a revealed Savior—can we see our sisters and daughters, bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh, willing to brave all for his sake, and yet from an overflowing abundance refuse the little necessary for their equipment? The wonder is that we do not pour our gifts on the altar until our leaders shall say to us, as did the builders of the Temple at Jerusalem to the women who brought their gold ornaments and jewels: "Stay thy hand."

The going of our consecrated women means sacrifice truly. Our small efforts toward sending are not worth the name of self-denial. We can not, in justice to our womanhood, withhold our mites. Individual responsibility must be felt, and then the possibilities of the Woman's Board of Missions will be boundless. Will we not—every one of us—register a vow to our own hearts that we will be more earnest in work and zealous in sacrifice. To this end let us consecrate ourselves and our possessions anew to him.

History of the Dollar.

Our word "dollar" dates back to 1785, when a resolution was passed by Congress which provided that it should be the unit of money of the United States. Another resolution was passed in 1785, August 5, providing that it should weigh 375.64 grains of pure silver. The mint was established in 1792, and was then required to coin silver dollars containing 371.25 grains of pure silver. This was due to the influence of Alexander Hamilton. No dollars were coined until 1794, and then irregular. They are worth now $100 each. In 1794 the coinage of regular dollars began. Our coin was an adaptation of the Spanish milled dollar, a coin very popular wherever Spaniards traveled. The coin was called "piastre," meaning a flat piece of metal; it is synonymous with piaster. It is supposed that the Spaniards took the German "thaler" and called it by the name of "piaster." The word "dollar" is entered in Bailey's English Dictionary of 1745, and was used repeatedly by Shakspeare at the beginning of the seventeenth century, especially in Macbeth, ii, 2, 62: "Till she disbursed * * * $10,000 to our general use." (See also the Tempest, ii, 1, 17.) The question where Shakspeare found the word "dollar" is answered by the fact that the Hanseatic towns maintained a great establishment, called the Steel Yard, in London. The Steel Yard merchants were mostly North Germans, who would call the German thaler as it was spelt, "dah-ler." The same merchants occasioned the word "sterling," an abbreviation of the word "esterling." As the Hanseatic trade was particularly brisk on the Baltic and in Russia, the standard coins of the Hause merchants were called esterlings, and sterling came to mean something genuine and desirable. The word "dollar" is the English for thaler, the first of which was coined about 1486, and corresponds quite closely to our present American silver dollars. The word "thaler" means "coming from a dale or valley," the first dollars having been coined in a Bohemian valley called Foachimsthal. It was under Charles V., the Emperor of Germany, King of Spain and Lord of Spanish America, that the German thaler became the coin of the world.—The Financier.

"What Drug Will Scour These English Hence?"

Wicked Macbeth, who murdered good King Duncan, asked this question in his despair. Thousands of victims of disease are daily asking, "What will scour the impurities from my blood and bring me health?" Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do it. It forces the liver into perfect action, drives out superfluous bile, brings the glow of health to the cheek and the natural sparkle to the eye. All druggists.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not perform its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Briefs.

William Arthur, in his little book, "Tongue of Fire"—a book which every Christian should read much—uses this illustration to show the lack of power in worldly Christians: Place a man in contact with the earth, and then put him in connection with the most powerful electrical machine, and you can never charge him with electricity. But sever his contact with the earth, and he is filled with the subtle fluid directly, and, if you touch him in that condition, the sparks will fly. So as long as a man fails to "come out and be separate from the world," the Divine Spirit can not charge him with the heavenly fire; but when he comes out and separates himself from the world, then the Spirit takes possession of him. Just as the earth acted as a great draining machine in the electrical experiment, so the world drains the good out of us unless we separate from it. Beware of worldliness!

The immigration to this land is becoming not only an interesting study, but a serious problem for our statesmen. Here are some facts in relation to the matter which provoke study: The official statistics for the year, ending June 30, show that during twelve months, ending at that date, 483,116 immigrants have landed here. This is an increase over last year of nearly fifty per cent. The largest increase has been of Italians—47,524 against 21,503 last year. The Germans show only a slight increase, while the Austrians have nearly doubled. The Irish have increased from 49,166 to 68,130. The Welsh and English increase is nearly fifty per cent. The Scandinavians from 39,683 have gone up to 58,741. Coming with all their old-world ideas and customs and traditions, these hordes of people present to our people and government a grave question for consideration.

There is nothing more important for the present, nothing more important to the future welfare of the Church and the State, than for the churches to enlarge their educational operations in every direction. With the Bible driven out of the public schools, and with State colleges and universities ignoring the practical teachings of the New Testament, the churches can not afford to relax the least effort to get hold of the young people to mould their characters according to the pattern of Christ. The churches, we are glad to know, have a large majority of the schools, and we trust that they will yet have more under their supervision. According to the New York Evangelist, the case stands thus:

Of the 385 colleges and universities in the United States, 278 are church schools, averaging thirteen teachers and 193 students to a school: eighty-seven are non-sectarian schools, averaging fifteen teachers and 136 students.

Bishop McTyeire, in Texas Christian Advocate, writes with his usual vigor on the prohibition question. Here is a sample: "The whisky power must be put under, or it will put us under. The battle is begun, and there is no retreat or parley: and submission is intolerable. More than ever I am for the final and extreme measure of prohibition, since witnessing the developments of the whisky power in its struggle for life. All its malignity comes out. It stands exposed and without disguise."

How Goes the Battle?

The great Napoleon had laid his plans wisely to crush the Austrians at Marengo. All the preliminary skirmishes had turned out as he had planned. The enemy, hemmed in by the swollen Po and the French Army, would become an easy prey to his consummate skill and the valor of his soldiers. But the Austrian general had determined to cut his way out; and such was the fury with which he fought, that when Napoleon reached the field, it was to see his once victorious legions in confusion, and the Consular Guard giving way; and the well-planned victory turning to a dire defeat. Just at this juncture young Desaix, who but lately returned from Egypt to join the First Consul, came sweeping on the field at the head of his cavalry, and halted on the eminence where Napoleon stood, with glittering eye, watching the defeat of his army. There was in that squadron a drummer-boy, who had followed Desaix in the campaigns of Egypt. As the column halted, Napoleon shouted, "Beat a retreat!" The boy did not move. "Gamin, beat a retreat!" The boy grasped his drum-sticks, and said: "Sire, I do not know how to beat a retreat. Desaix never taught me that; but I can beat a charge that will make the dead fall into line. I beat it at the Pyramids, at Mt. Tabor, at the bridge of Lodi. May I beat it here?" Napoleon, in deepest distress, said to Desaix: "We are beaten. What shall we do?" "Do? Beat the enemy. It is only three o'clock, and there is time enough yet to win a victory. Beat the old charge of Mt. Tabor and Lodi!" And the squadron, following the gleaming sword of the young general, and keeping step to the furious roll of the gamin's drum, swept down upon the Austrians, and the first line was hurled back upon the second, and then both were driven back over the third. Desaix fell dead in the first volley, but the line never faltered, and the gamin marched right on in front beating his furious charge. Over the dead and wounded, over breastworks and fallen foe, over cannon belching forth their fire of death, that drummer-boy, beating his charge, led a beaten army to a victory that has been a wonder to military science.

As a church, we have planned for a great victory. All the preliminaries have turned out well, and the battle was joined last Sabbath, and now we are in the midst of a hotly contested fight. The foe we are engaged with has never been known to yield or surrender, and gains the victory much oftener than suffers defeat. It is a foe which will resolutely and with utter desperation cut its way through any and all opposition, and will be actually hacked to pieces and die in its own gore before it will cry for quarter. We fear that many of our members do not comprehend the nature and power of this foe with whom we have joined battle. What is it we are fighting for, anyhow? Why is our whole church called to this battlefield? Who is it this million of Methodists have marched out against? Dear readers, it is nothing more nor less than our own selfishness. It is no use for any of us to try to convince ourselves that selfishness is not the prevalent sin of our church. The spectacle we present to the world this week—a great church practicing self-denial in order to raise money to pay a missionary debt—establishes the sad fact of the prevalence of selfishness among our people. We were once a very wealthy church; but we failed in its use, and all our riches melted away. We have been increasing in prosperity now for several years, and yet our use of our means in the Lord's cause has not proportionately increased, and we are in the same danger that overwhelmed us twenty-five years ago. If we had used our money according to Scripture teaching, we would not be in the position we are to-day. And why have we not used our money thus? Because of our selfishness. "Dollars for Self—Dimes for God," has been our rule; and it will become our ruin if we do not crush out of our hearts the selfishness that prompts such a rule of action. The call of our church authorities is, then, not merely that we should raise so much money to meet our present exigencies, but that we shall fight the battle in our own hearts, and beat down our selfishness, and wrench from its miserly grip the Lord's money.

Reader, how goes this battle in your heart? Don't you know that it is a case of life and death with you? Spiritual life or spiritual death? And, with these alternatives in view, and your spiritual forces beginning to waver and fall into confusion, will you, like the defeated French Consul, order a retreat to be beaten? Up, man! Rise, woman! The week is but little more than half gone! There is time enough to win the victory of a lifetime! Beat the charge that will wake up your dead energies! Storm the breastworks of selfishness! Plant the banner of loyalty to Christ upon the ruins of the temple of covetousness, and let it wave as a signal of your devotion and heroism in the cause of God as against self.

Vicksburg District Conference.

This Conference was held this year in the town of Fayette, Miss. Bishop Galloway presided to the satisfaction of all. Dr. Hunnicutt, the presiding elder, is a man of method; and that method, like his personal bearing, is erect, direct; correct. Bro. D. P. Bradford, the preacher in charge, is a man who loves no sham nor taffy, but is very decidedly in favor of Jersey butter and other good things.

This district—about one-sixteenth of the former territory—raises annually $3,000 for church building and improvement at home, besides what is raised for the Church Extension Board; and this district has subscribed $1,200 to the Paine Loan Fund! Here, then, is one-sixteenth of territory doing work outside of the support of the ministry in one year more than equal to twenty-six years in its early history. This same one-sixteenth part pays twice as much in one year to support the ministry as the whole paid in those twenty-six years; while its contributions to the Conference, the missionary and educational collections, it contributes nearly one-half as much in one year as the whole contributed in the twenty-six. Still some of us are not happy because our wives have to retrim their old spring bonnets and our daughters can't attend more than one interstate drill and three base ball matches and a fair! Brethren, be patient; that good time is coming when some friend of the preacher will not only provide all these needful things, but will furnish a machine that will speak your sermon for you and send it down to the pews upon the breath of an immense fan provided for the hot season.

The plan of business adopted by the Conference was the rotatory. That is, one topic is taken up and run through all the charges of the district; then another is taken up and run through in the same way. This dispenses with committees and long reports, which some man, with murderous intent, moves to be "spread on the minutes and published in the ADVOCATE;" and rarely does secretary and printer escape. Another end is thought to be subserved, viz: all the preachers are kept till the close of the Conference. But I notice that in this there is partial failure at least. Several of the preachers in the most prominent charges left on Friday or Saturday. I don't think he is the most faithful pastor who hurries home for fear his people will not have service on Sunday. He may find that a loosening of the connectional bond is a more serious matter than the omission of a Sunday service.

Much matter, similar to that developed in other Conferences, was turned up. The general results show considerable advance in all the lines of operation. Preachers and people are hopeful, and generally in love with each other, or they do much talking for buncombe. But, so far as I can learn, it is sincere. Among the old linger those two phases of moral leprosy—unhopefulness and covetousness. Among the young, an increased and intensified love of the amusements of the world. The old scowl and growl at the young, and the young pout at the old, both forgetting that they are suffering from the same disease; that of the young being certain to change to the secondary stage in their old age. The cure of worldliness in amusements is more religion; but the covetous and moping Christians can not pray it away, and the ease-loving preacher can not preach it out.

Education and literature were allowed to be represented by your correspondent. The results for education are yet embryonic; of the effort for literature, one subscriber for the Nashville Advocate, and nineteen for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. (I enclose list.) I wish to say that you have Bro. Williams and Bishop Galloway to thank for this result. Your scribe talked and perspired over it, and sat down with one dollar on paper! He said he was sorry, and the Bishop arose and said that he looked sorry. I did feel that it was breaking out on me; but the Bishop seemed to have caught the war-whoop, or some other Indian complaint, while in the Nation, and Bro. Williams in a moment seemed to be in an explosive state, and then the corked dynamite (in the shape of silver dollars) began to rattle out, and the thing was done, and our country saved again.

Delegates elected to the Annual Conference are T. A. Holloman, T. W. Sullivan, H. Key, W. O. Watkins. The next Conference at Natchez.

I must not fail to add that, with Dr. Marshall, I had the best of quarters at Bro. Gordon's, where I hope often in future to drop in, if only for an hour.

"Gilderoy" on Several Topics.

It is awfully hot now. The thermometer runs away up yonder every day, and it comes down but little at night. We hunt for cool places, and sigh for cool breezes; but the cool places are few, and the cool breezes are far between. It keeps one busy trying to keep cool. The injunction, "Keep cool," is heeded by no one. It is too hot to keep cool anywhere or on any subject.

The preachers are in the heat of their work now. This is big meeting time. In some sections, particularly in the rural sections, revival meetings must be held now, or not at all. This comes partly from habit, and partly from the necessities of the case. Farmers have to be accommodated; have to have meetings at a leisure time when the press of work is off of hand.

Hot weather is not the best time for a meeting. Neither the preachers nor the people are at their best. Mental and physical lassitude holds sway. Loss of sleep makes people drowsy. They are not fresh, vigorous and active then. The days are long and hot, and the nights are hot, too—hotter than the days in a crowded church with a full blaze of lights. But this is the time for big meetings; and they must be held. The Lord smiles, and the work prospers. Men are convicted of sin, souls are converted, the church revived, and the work moves bravely on.

The temperance cause moves bravely forward. The sentiment in favor of prohibiton grows stronger every day. The women have come to be a great power in this grand work. They take an intelligent and hearty interest in it. Many, perhaps a large majority, of our local county papers now have a temperance column edited and managed by the women of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Their columns tell. The children are being organized into bands, and they are regularly and systematically instructed in temperance. These good seed, sown in tears and tended in faith, will germinate and grow into sheltering trees by and by. We have safely passed the apologetic period in our temperance work. The time has come when every woman and Christian man is counted in favor of local option and longing for prohibition. To be a Christian, and to be in favor of the open saloon, has come to be, as it always should have been, a contradiction in terms. These things do not go together—they do not fit; are not agreed. Prohibition will win. It will carry the day not far hence.

The States have rights. They certainly have the right to protect themselves from the most gigantic evil that ever cursed our world—the whisky traffic. The right of the State to do this is, most assuredly, in no way contrary to the doctrine of "State rights." The right to sell whisky was not one of the inalienable rights secured by the original compact. I have not so read that document. Few are found now who so interpret it. The greatest court in the country has not so expounded it. It is too late in the day now for any man to say that the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of whisky is contrary to the fundamental principles of our government. That question has been passed upon too often. I have often heard it intimated, and hinted at in various ways, that, somehow, or in some way, the prohibition movement was subversive of Democratic principles. I have been waiting for some Solon to rise and show how, wherein, and in what way. In what way is the manufacture and sale of whisky essential to the prosperity of this grand old party? In what way will the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of whisky hurt the party? This is a ghost story, a boogaboo, a hobgoblin, a witch, a warlic or some long-necked animal to frighten children and simpletons with. There is not one word of truth in it. If there is, let somebody show it. The Democratic party will be just as strong, and stronger, too, in the South when every State has constitutional prohibition as it is now. The two great parties of this country have never divided on this question. This has not been the bone of contention between them. Both parties have studiously avoided it, and the prohibitionists are very anxious to keep this matter out of party politics. Now, why shy at this stump? Why point out this hobgoblin to frighten simpletons? Prohibitionists have one single end in view, and that is the suppression and final prohibition of the legalized whisky traffic of this country. They are going to stick to this text till doomsday, or till they carry their point.

It is said that there are about 2,500 women in or near Boston who are engaged in literary work. On the publishing lists of Robert Brothers there are seventy-seven women; fifty-five on Ticknor's lists; eighty on Houghton's, and eighty on the Methodist Book Concern list.

Bible Studies in Colleges.

The following from Prof. [illegible] S. Holmes, in the New Yo[rk] Evangelist, shows that a mo[st] important feature in the educ[a]tion of the young people is a[s]suming definite form. As her[e]tofore, so now again, we call th[e] attention of the managers an[d] teachers in our church schools t[o] this matter. This is not a que[s]tion of expediency. It is a que[s]tion of the rights of the childre[n] of the church. Is the Bible fro[m] God? The church says, Yes. Then let her teach it in he[r] schools. What can be the mean[ing] of the fact that it require[s] argument and exhortation to in[du]duce the church schools to adop[t] a course of Bible studies for a[ll] their classes? We are glad t[o] know that others are moving i[n] this matter, as is witnessed b[y] the clipping that follows:

There has long been a demand for some systematic way by which to study the English Bible. We have been asked many times in our normal classes at Chautauqua, at Ottowa, Kan., at Crete, Neb., at Farmingham, Mass., and elsewhere, what book there was which would serve for a guide in study along similar lines, and by similar methods, to those pursued and used in the normal class, and have always been compelled to answer, "There is none." A similar request has at last come up from the colleges, and, in response, Dr. W. R. Harper, now of New Haven, prepared and delivered during the past year an address upon this subject, embodying suggestions for such a course of study as would enable the individual alone, or associated with others, to acquire a thoroughly comprehensive knowledge of the Bible, not only as a code of morals, or as a divinely given system of religion, but as a book of history, literature, manners and customs, having direct relation to the times in which it was produced, and intimate connection with the history and political movements of the nations that surrounded Israel. So practical were the suggestions of this paper, that an added demand came up from the Christian young men in Yale, Amherst, Brown, Oberlin, and other colleges, that a series of lessons along the indicated lines, for use in the colleges and by college Young Men's Christian Associations, should be prepared by Dr. Harper. Busy as is the life he leads, he has acceded to the demand, and, having associated with himself three scholars of equal reputation with his own, Dr. Beecher, of Auburn Seminary; Prof. Ballantine, of Oberlin Seminary; and Prof. Burroughs, of Amherst College, he is now preparing a series of forty studies in the Old Testament, which will begin with Samuel, and will include all the history to the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. These lessons will be published in the Old Testament Student, beginning with September next, each number of which will contain four.

The course proposed will include:

(1) The history of the period (1171 B. C.–586 B. C. by the chronology of our marginal Bibles) under consideration.

(2) The literature of the period in its connection with the history.

(3) The history and literature of other nations, so far as they shed light upon biblical history and literature.

(4) The manners and customs of the times.

(5) The more important principles of textual and literary criticism, and of interpretation which may be suggested by the material considered.

We are delighted to be able to call attention to such a course of study as is here indicated, and we sincerely hope that our pastors will seize upon this means of building up in the churches such a knowledge of our holy Bible as can by this means be surely secured.

Please to remember the awful fact that the saloon can live only as it destroys something infinitely better than itself. The Northwestern Christian Advocate has this to say about the saloon keeper: "He harms everybody, kills some, degrades many, and benefits nobody. He is a pestilence, a nuisance, a horror. Expel him instantly, prohibit him thoroughly, and license him—never!"

Personals.

Rev. John Walton has been chosen president of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference in Great Britain. He has rendered conspicuous service in India, in Africa and at home.

Our thanks are hereby tendered to the Chamber of Commerce of this city for a copy of Reports from the Consuls of the United States on Emigration from Europe. Glancing over these reports and tabulated statements, we are confirmed in the opinion, several times expressed in these columns, that this subject is one of the most important problems to be solved by our statesmen.

The prohibitionists failed in Texas; but to determined souls failure is one of the best rallying-points for success next time. The resolution is recorded among inexorable laws—The saloon must go. Let no man's heart fail because of this temporary defeat.

We record with sorrow the death of Miss Sallie Sykes Brooks, eldest daughter of Rev. J. H. Brooks, of the North Mississippi Conference. She was interred in Holly Springs, Miss., July 28th.

A second time Dr. Haygood has called at our office, and we did not have the pleasure of seeing him. He was on his way home from the Texas campaign.

Rev. B. Carradine's sermon, "Fifteen Objections to Church Entertainments," preached in Carondelet Street Church, has been published at this office. It is a good presentation of objections to a custom prevailing in some quarters of the church, and should be extensively read. Price, ten cents.

How is this? A little sermon prepared by Dr. Ahreus for this paper appeared last week in the Episcopal Methodist, and neither the Doctor nor this paper gets any credit for it. Could both of us have been unintentionally overlooked?

Mrs. Marcia Marvin left St. Louis, July 21, for her work in the Brazil Mission.

One local preacher lately sent the Wesleyan Christian Advocate twenty seven subscribers from one place. Can't some of our local preachers beat that?

A correspondent, giving the editor carte blanche in regard to a communication sent, very naively remarks, "I think sometimes men are injured by their own articles." Many of them would be ruined but for the editor.

We regret to announce the death of Rev. D. S. Watkins, a superannuate of the East Texas Conference. He was in former years a member of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. C. F. Gillespie, a superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, died in Texas, July 21.

A Sad Incident.

Our brother, the Rev. I. W. Cooper, of Edwards, Miss., mourns the death of his sweet little daughter, Florence Ione, just entered into her fourth year. He had gone from home to assist in holding religious service. On the morning of the day of his return—Monday, August 1—she was playing about the room in her accustomed cheerful manner, was suddenly seized with a convulsion, followed speedily by two others, and she died in the third. The telegram announcing the sorrowful news failed to reach Bro. Cooper, and he arrived at home some three hours after to find the bright little spirit fled.

She was their only daughter and was a beautiful child, attractive and winning in her manners. What a source of pure and perennial joy she was in that parsonage home! What an inconsolable sadness her absence brings to mother and father! The kind people spared no pains to show their sympathy and to lighten, as far as possible, the distressing blow. A large audience attended the funeral, the pulpit and furniture were draped in spotless white and numerous flowers gave their beauty and fragrance to cheer the scene. Bro. and Sister Cooper feel their affliction most keenly, but they find consolation in an unwavering trust in him who doeth all things well. Our brethren of the Conference and their numerous friends will join me in invoking for them the consolations of Christianity in this time, when they so sorely need them.

C. G. ANDREWS.

Don't you think our Lambuth Fund is growing nicely? Please, friends, don't send postage stamps. If you were to cover a missionary all over with postage stamps, it would not take him to Japan.

The wealth of professing Christians in the United States is said to be $8,000,000,000. If they should give two per cent. to the cause of the Lord per annum, how long would it take to establish the gospel everywhere?

Another Sample Letter.

We would like to publish many of the letters we have received in relation to answering Dr. Lambuth's call; but we have not the space. We publish one below which we wish every reader of the ADVOCATE would ponder. The writer evidently holds his possessions subject to the will of the Lord. This is the true idea. It is the only way God can be honored in ownership, and God honors his trustee by drawing upon him for trust funds.

MR. EDITOR: Enclosed you will please find $— to aid in your ADVOCATE's effort for the foreign mission cause. I hope that I do not think anything in my possession, save a comfortable living, is mine; but I can not always determine what the Lord calls me to pay for special occasions. I know we are to pay out as the Lord furnishes the means; but what is to decide the amount to each occasion? If I owe more to your call, draw on me, and I will honor the draft. Maybe God will tell you what I don't know.

Yours truly,

Dr. Lambuth's Call.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 124 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

"What is the worst thing about riches?" asked a Sunday-school teacher. "Their scarcity," replied a boy; and he was immediately awarded a chromo.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

An Irishman who had on a very ragged coat was asked of what stuff it was made. "Bedad, I don't know!" said he; "but I think the most of it is made of fresh air."

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, to making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

"What kind of pudding is this, waiter?" "Tapioca, sir." "Is it? I thought it was mediocre. Merely a case of heterophemy, you see."

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time the reputation has steadily increased until at present it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the surest remedy. Worm Confections made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country, but their short leave of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given by children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of B. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your Vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

AUGUST.

BY FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN.

AUGUST, month when summer lies
Sleeping under sapphire skies:
Open all the windows wide,
Drink the orchard's fragrant tide—
Breath of grass al morning mown
Through the leafy vistas blown—
Hear the clinking of the scythe
Sound mellifluent and blithe.
August, month when everywhere
Music floats upon the air
From the harps of minstrel gales
Playing down the hills and dales:
August, month when sleepy cows
Seek the shade of spreading boughs
Where the robin quirks his head
Contemplating cherries red:
August, month of twilights when
Day half goes, and comes again:
August days are guards who keep Watch while summer lies asleep.

A Mother's Talk to Boys.

BY MARY A. ALLEN, M. D.

"It's well enough for a boy to bring in wood or coal, and make the fires, but it's girl's work to cook and wash dishes." Is it? Why? You think so simply because you have always seen such a division of labor, but did you ever think that you might be the loser by being shut out from participation in housework? An eminent clergyman once said to me: "I think we men lose by not being trained in domestic duties. We need to have patience, skill, forethought, attention, ingenuity, helpfulness and forbearance developed in us, as they would be by taking a part in household labors, and we would also cultivate a spirit of kindness, politeness and consideration. It is certainly not quite courteous in us to enjoy the dinner prepared by wife or mother, and then thoughtlessly walk off and leave her to the unpleasant task of 'doing up the work.' It would be more manly to do it all, and let her rest." I read, not long since, of two ladies who called on the poet Whittier, and he, being alone in the house, prepared supper for them with his own hands. He could not have done that had he never helped at home. There is nothing necessarily unmanly in housework. In our own land a male cook commands a high salary. In a big hotel his salary is about that of a member of Congress.

Men who go to the far West and "rough it," in mine or on ranch, find it valuable to know how to cook. Boys sometimes board themselves while going through college, and unless they understand cookery they will not be able to give themselves wholesome fare. Boys like to camp out, and often they don't want girls around in the way, and to avoid it they should know how to wait on themselves. In many emergencies, to know how to sew becomes invaluable to men, as does knowing how to sweep, dust, and make a bed. A young man, whose mother was a poor widow, helped at home during his college course. A neighbor once found him rubbing away at the wash-tub, while his mother read moral philosophy to him. When he went as a missionary to the Indians, he found all this domestic love of great value: for if there were no white women to teach the squaws how to keep house, in a civilized way, he could teach them. I know two manly little boys, eleven and thirteen years old, who take care of their own room, make their beds, set table, sweep, dust, wash dishes and assist in cooking.

"You are as good as girls," I said to them.

"We think we are better; for we can do all that girls can, and all that boys can besides."

It does not make boys "Molly Coddles" to know how to do housework. I know a boy who at fifteen can get a nice dinner all alone, make biscuits, fricassee chicken, make a pie or a cake; and he can harness a horse, skate, jump or wrestle equal to other boys. He can sew on his own buttons, too. He is planning to own a ranch some day. Be helpful at home, boys. You can lift many a burden from mother or sister, while at the same time you are gaining valuable information.—Congregationalist.

To the Children.

Our Mite-box Brigade has done well this quarter. All honor to the little soldiers of the cross who come forward so bravely to the Lord's help against the evil one! Men fight for the kings of this earth and kill their enemies; but you, dear children, are helping God's soldiers fight Satan and save souls from eternal death. Satan is strong. He hates our Father in heaven. He hates Jesus who came to save the world. He hates everybody, and, if he could, would utterly destroy the world. But Jesus loves you. Our Father in heaven takes care of you. He loves every little one and wants to save them from Satan. He wants you to help him. Who is on the Lord's side? Let him come forward and help God. Those who do not help God are helping Satan. Did you know that? I am glad so many of you are on God's side. You have indeed done well this quarter; you have raised enough to aid in building a home for one of God's ministers. The girls are ahead again. O boys, if you were men you would think it brave to be soldiers and defend your homes! But nothing is braver or nobler than to be God's soldiers, for do you not hope that heaven, God's home, will be your eternal home? Some of you have enlisted, but I want every one of you to be on God's side. Last quarter a little boy in New Montana led the Mite-box Brigade. A little girl in old Virginia is ahead this time; next to her comes a little girl out among the Indians. You see there are children all across the whole country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, who have joined this brigade. And Jesus is the Captain of all.

AN OLD SONG ANALYZED.—You all know the old "Sing a Song of Sixpence;" but have you ever read what it is meant for? The four-and-twenty blackbirds represent the twenty-four hours. The bottom of the pie is the world, while the top crust is the sky that over-arches it. The opening of the pie is the day-dawn, when the birds begin to sing, and surely such a sight is "a dainty dish to set before the king." The king, who is represented as sitting in his parlor counting out his money, is the sun, while the gold pieces that slip through his pieces as he counts them are golden sunshine. The queen, who sits in the dark kitchen, is the moon, and the honey with which she regales herself is the moonlight. The industrious maid, who is in the garden at work before the king—the sun—has risen, the day-dawn, the clothes she hangs out are the clouds, while the bird which so tragically ends the song by "nipping off her nose" is the horn of sunset. So we have the whole day, if not in a nutshell, in a pie.—Anon.

DR. J. H. MCLEAN'S Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier, by its vitalizing properties, will brighten pale cheeks and transform a pale, haggard, dispirited woman into one of sparkling health and beauty.

ENCOURAGE THE BOYS.—"One of 'Em" gives, through a Western journal, these excellent suggestions to farmers about interesting their sons in the most wholesome of all pursuits: "Yes, all farmers should take one or two good agricultural papers, but if you'll give the boys the money, and let them subscribe in their own names, they will read them with more interest, and it will do you just as much good. Give them a patch of ground, and let them have all they can raise on it: then get them to experiment with the different kinds of vegetables and some small fruits by planting and cultivating differently. They will find out in this way which kinds pay the best, and the best mode of cultivation, and no doubt you might learn something yourself. Experimenting is the most interesting and instructive part of farming, and if practiced by the boys, they will soon learn to reckon the expense and profit of farming.

The hard facts are, that no lower standard has ever elevated sinful men and women into a virtuous civilization, while the gospel of the Christ of God has lifted the most depraved of the human race into the dignity and purity of Christian life.—W. J. R. Taylor, D. D.

Household.

Women Who Work for Their Husbands.

If a man is a real man, it is safe for a woman to continue earning wages after she is married; but I think that there are hundreds of men to-day, yes, thousands, who have been ruined because they were not compelled to support their wives. If a man who earns small wages marries a woman capable of earning as much as himself, there are nine chances out of ten that he will develop extravagant habits because of the added income of his wife. If they could agree or hold to the decision that they should live on the husband's income, and let the earnings of the wife accumulate for a business in which they both could engage, it would be well; but their earnings would probably be largely dissipated in personal adornment, the passion for which, especially among the middle classes, is the bane of the American people. There is one class of women wage-earners to whom I have given much attention, who suffer considerably through their own ignorance. I refer to the married women who work in factories or at home, making underclothing and other articles, and who supplement their husband's wages in order to cover their own deficient knowledge of housekeeping. Such women were wage-earners before they were married, and never had an opportunity to learn how to manage a house, so that after marriage they have to earn money to supply their want of knowledge not only of cooking, but of sewing. Such women buy ready-made clothes for themselves and their children, which, of course, are not so durable as could be had for the same money if they made them themselves. Not knowing how to economize in cooking, they spend more money in that way than they should. Out of 300 women wage-earners I visited in tenement houses, only five claimed that they were able to make bread, and only one really did make it. Only two were able to cut and make garments for themselves and their children. I think that these women are all conscious of their deficiences, but do not know how to overcome them. They have some spare time, but they waste it. Their cooking is of the most primitive and unwholesome description, and their meals are supplemented with beer, which is looked upon as just as much of an article of diet as bread. —Epoch.

WASHING HELPS.—Lately we have tried putting a little kerosene in the water when the white clothes are soaked overnight, and it acts like a charm. At first I thought it might have an unpleasant smell, but such is not the case. The rinsing has a great deal to do with the clear look of the clothes. Hard water is the best for this purpose, and only a little blueing is to be allowed. The chief thing is to get all the suds out of the articles. Colored fabrics should be washed for the first time in salt and water. If the colors are delicate, the goods should be washed, rinsed, starched and well shaken out, then hung at once on the lines. It is always better to fold clothes the night before ironing; it seems to help the smoothing process. A great help to washing day is a mangle, and that family is fortunate who possess this very useful help. Here, again, kerosene comes in to assist in laundry work, a spoonful mixed in the starch being one of the aids to polishing not always known. Sufficient attention is not given to sorting and soaking white clothes, and sometimes the quality of soap makes a great difference, and this can be discovered only by a fair trial. Anything that helps to make washing day easy is to be done. And of all the ingredients used as a washing fluid, I prefer plain borax, that can be used without injury to fabrics, or to the hands of the laundry-maid.—Rural New Yorker.

The Reason Why

Ayer's Pills are so popular is, that while always reliable as a cathartic medicine, they never leave any ill effects. This is because they are purely vegetable, and entirely free from calomel or any other dangerous drug. In all cases, therefore, whether the patient be old or young, they may be confidently administered.

In the Southern and Western States, where derangements of the liver are so general, Ayer's Pills have proved an inestimable blessing. D. W. Baker, New Berne, N. C., writes:

"I suffered a long time with stomach and liver troubles. I tried various remedies, but received no benefit until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. These pills benefited me at once. I took them regularly for a few months, and my health was completely restored."

Throughout New England, next to lung diseases, Stomach and Bowel Complaints are the most prevalent.

Dyspepsia

and Constipation are almost universal. Mr. Gallacher, a practical chemist, of Roxbury, Mass., who was long troubled with Dyspepsia, writes:

"A friend induced me to try Ayer's Pills, and, after taking one box without much benefit, I was disposed to quit them; but he urged perseverance, and, before I had finished the second box, I began to experience relief. I continued taking them, at intervals, until I had used eleven boxes. Suffice it to say, that I am now a well man, and grateful to your chemistry, which outstrips mine."

The head and stomach are always in sympathy; hence the cause of most of those distressing headaches, to which so many, especially women, are subject. Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes that for years she was a martyr to headache, and never found anything to give her more than temporary relief, until she began taking Ayer's Pills, since which she has been in the enjoyment of perfect health.

REGAN—RALPH REGAN was born in Marion county, Miss., March 11, 1818, and died at his residence, near China Grove, Pike county, Miss., June 11, 1887, and hence was sixty-eight years and three months of age at the time of his death. His father, Stephen Regan, was a local preacher, and his mother a devoted Christian; hence he was trained up in the way he should go, and when he was old he did not depart from it. He joined the Methodist Church early in life, and maintained his church relations to the end. Bro. Regan was twice married: First, to Miss Tabitha Warner. She died in about a year after their union. After several years, he was married again to Miss Abigail Lewis, daughter of the late Quinea and Martha Lewis, of precious memory, and sister of Revs. H. P. and W. B. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference. The fruits of this marriage were twelve children—eleven of whom, with their mother, survive. All these children belong to the church; and one son has been licensed to preach, while a daughter, Mrs. P. Howard, of Centerville, Miss., has given her life to be a helpmeet to a minister of the gospel.

Bro. Regan lived "a quiet and peaceable life in all godliness and honesty." Always consistent with his professions, in his latter days he grew more pious and useful. He gave liberally of his means to support the institutions of the church, was a regular attendant upon the public worship of God, and a faithful friend of his pastor. When others would sometimes find fault with the preacher, it was his custom to put them to silence by saying: "He has passed an examination by a wise and noble body of men, and has been sent here to preach to us, and we must be satisfied with him." For some time before his death Bro. Regan had been impressed that his time was short, and that his death would be sudden. He spoke of it to his family, and held himself in readiness for it. So when on the night of June 11 the Master called, in a moment all was over, and the weary servant was at rest with God.

JONES—Called from earth's labors, June 21, 1887, WALTER AUGUSTUS JONES, near Adams, Hinds county, Miss., where he was visiting relatives. He was taken suddenly and violently ill, and died of congestion of the brain, giving no evidence of consciousness during the few days of his illness. He was born December 8, 1872, the son of William M. Jones, formerly of Dallas county, Ala. A sister, who is the only surviving member of the family, is in the Protestant Orphan Asylum of Natchez. May the Good Shepherd kindly care for her! A cousin remarked, "Oh! auntie, the good angel came and took away our bright gem." He so often sang, "Jesus is calling." He was baptized in early childhood in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Resolved, That while Augustus was a member of the Carlisle Sunday-school, he won our hearts by his kindness, gentleness, studiousness, and other good moral habits.

Resolved, That while we deplore the loss, we feel that God knoweth best, and that a lesson is taught us. We are deeply impressed with the great responsibility that rests upon us and we pray that our heavenly Father will assist us in helping each other that we, too, may be "bright gems," in the home, and that we may be ready when called.

MRS. E. D. JONES, for Com.

HARVIN—MRS. HARRIET A. HARVIN, of St. Helena parish, La., was born, May 20, 1855, and died triumphantly in "the faith once delivered to the saints," at home, in the arms of kind friends and in the presence of father and mother, brothers and sister, June 18, 1887. She was well disposed from youth, and when quite a young lady joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. D. P. Bradford, who, in the providence of God, was called upon to pay the last tribute of respect to the dead sister, he being on a visit to relatives in the parish. Being conscientious in religious matters, when, in after years she was taught that she had not been baptized, and, therefore, not properly inducted into the church, she felt that her acceptability, if not safety, would be enhanced thereby, she yielded to other teachers and joined the Baptist Church, in which she died. Being overwhelmed in doubts and unable to satisfy herself as to her condition and, therefore, her safety, the writer was sent for; and after an explanation of some Scriptures which threw light upon her case she was relieved, and ever after to her death she was happy, brave and willing to die, saying in her last words, "My soul is so happy." I have never seen one of such brave trust in all my observation. May God bless the surviving loved ones and finally bring them to their loved one, who now "rests under the shade of the trees!"

J. W. ELLISON.

MCLEAN—MARTHA SEWELL, daughter of the Rev. D. N. and Mrs. C. M. McLean, was born February 6, 1886, and died June 28, 1887. God has transplanted a sweet flower to bloom forever in the fadeless bowers of Eden. The little chair is vacant now, the little clothes laid by, and father's and mother's hearts are desolate. But "God is good," and "he doeth all things well;" and while your hearts, fond parents, seem breaking "for the sound of a voice that is hushed," pray for grace to kiss the rod which smites you, and he who seeth the sparrow when it falls will comfort and aid you.

M. L. S.

MOORE—LEWIS MOORE was born in Darlington district, S. C., April 29, 1813, and came to Mississippi when about ten years old, where he has remained ever since. He was married 1841; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1848, and died of heart disease, July 16, 1887, being at the time of his death seventy-four years, two months and fifteen days old.

The church and community have sustained a great loss in the death of Father Moore. He was one of the purest men that earth afforded, filling all the stations and relations of life as nearly to perfection as any living man. He was a loving husband, a tender, affectionate father, a kind and obliging neighbor, a good citizen, a consecrated Christian, and a consistent church member until death.

A. D. MILLER.

MADISON—On June 15, 1887, Miss NANCIE L. MADISON departed this life, left her parents and loved ones, and went home to heaven. Miss Nancie was born in Kemper county, Miss., April 13, 1864, and departed this life in Neshoba county, June 15, 1887. She joined the church about fifteen years ago. Nancie was a good girl, and loved by all who knew her. She left a good father and mother, two brothers and two sisters and many friends to mourn her loss. May God bless all who mourn for her! May they strive to meet her over yonder, where partings will be no more!

HER PASTOR.

WILLIAMS—In Morehouse parish, La., on July 13, of congestion of the brain, FANNIE EPPS, aged four years and five months, daughter of James B. and Fannie M. Williams. How we miss the clasp of tender arms, the kisses from rosy lips, the laughing sparkle of bright black eyes, the sunny face stilled by the icy hand of death! Precious hope—may we meet our darling in that peaceful home of our Father, where she is safe from the storms of life, and maybap is even now hovering over the narrow way her mother's steps must tread!

Fresh Air.

We do not condemn the theory or practice of resorting to fresh air mountain retreats, quiet country homes, seaside rambles and bathing, or the various mineral springs as restoratives to failing health. No doubt there are many who have been greatly relieved by all these favorite resorts, and some very justly claim they have been cured. But the numbers is legion that find no comfort, no relief to their weakness, their aches, their pains, in such grasping at straws in their struggle to save themselves. The following letters illustrate this point and show the wisdom of the one most interested in the case.

A patient in Grand Junction, Tennessee, on April 30, 1886, wrote the following:

"My family doctor said I ought and must go to Hot Springs and stay there three months. My good brother came down from Middle Tennessee to see me, and he also tried to persuade me to go and spend three months at the Springs. I declined to do so on the ground that I knew more about Hot Springs than either of them. I just simply told them that I intended to stay at home and use Compound Oxygen, and be where I could get fresh air. I believe three months at the Springs, taking that contaminated air in all the time, would kill me. I have been there once, and it was a fruitless trip—aye, worse. On the other hand, I have as much confidence in Compound Oxygen, as I would have in giving beef and bread to a starving man. The Compound Oxygen that I used over a year ago did me much good. I wanted to be moving to some other country all the time, and could not control myself about eating and many other things. I find myself much relieved after using the Compound Oxygen."

A volume of nearly two hundred pages, on "Compound Oxygen—Its Mode of Action and Results," will be mailed free to every inquirer on receipt of address; and if particularly interested in the cure of any special disease, a monograph on that will also be sent. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The thunder-clap can strike the inattentive, but it is only the listener that catches the whisper of the summer air in the pine trees.—Faber.

The Negro Problem.

There is one immense advantage which the South will have for a long time to come, and that is, it must grapple with and try to solve what is called the "Negro Question." It is proverbial that the hardest problems are set for the brightest scholars: and here is the very hardest problem that has ever demanded solution. With this question in all its bearings the South must employ itself for many years. Nor will it be only with the ethnical, economical, political aspects of that question that it must concern itself. For a long time it must deal with an ever-present destitution, intellectual, moral, spiritual, as well as physical. The undeniable blessedness of those to whom God speaks his benediction in saying, "The poor shall not cease out of the land," will continue for a long time to belong to the Southern people; and they are called to a noble career in being required by God's providence to help in the lifting up of a whole race, and to assist in their complete redemption. And it is time that the Southern whites should realize that they are peculiarly fitted and, therefore, specially called to perform this task. They understand the negro, and sympathize with him far more thoroughly than do their Northern brethren. They have less of race antagonism to lay aside, and less of prejudice to overcome. The hindrance of poverty is no longer in the way, and it never did amount to a real excuse: for what the negro needs is not money, but encouragement, sympathy, neighborly interest and the simple old gospel of brotherly love. These things the Southern whites can give him more entirely and more effectually than any others can; and in the doing of it they can keep themselves not only in advance of the race to whom they extend their help, but in advance of any people not blessed with so noble an opportunity to achieve greatness. Let it be seen that the Church Commission for work among the colored people relies, and not in vain, not merely on the money of the North, but chiefly on the interest, energy and brotherly love of the Southern people.—Churchman.

A RELIGIOUS HUMBUG.—One of the professors in Harvard University was a great bugologist. He had all sorts of bugs the world ever saw in frames, and he studied bugology until he knew all about it, and had thousands of specimens of different sorts of bugs. And the mischievous students took the legs of one bug, and the body of another, and the wings of another, and put them all together, just like nature puts them together, and carried the bug in to the old professor, with his thick glasses on, and laid it on the table, and said, "Professor, what sort of a bug is that?" The old professor looked at it, and turned it around, and looked at it, and looked at it, and looked at it again; and, said he, "Gentlemen, this is a humbug." And this is just what we mean by a religious humbug. He has got the head of a Christian, and the feet of the dancer, and the tongue of a tattler, and the appetite of a drunkard, and the laziness of a shirk, and you just put him all together, and he is the finest specimen of a humbug you ever saw.—Christian Standard.

A Pleasure Shared by Women Only.

Malherbe, the gifted French author, declared that of all the things that man possesses, women alone take pleasure in being possessed. This seems generally true of the sweeter sex. Like the ivy plant, she longs for an object to cling to and love—to look to for protection. This being her prerogative, ought she not to be told that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the physical salvation of her sex? It banishes those distressing maladies that make her life a burden, curing all painful irregularities, uterine disorders, inflammation and ulceration, prolapsus and kindred weaknesses. As a nervine, it cures nervous exhaustion, prostration, debility, relieves mental anxiety and hypochondria, and promotes refreshing sleep.

LOSS OF TEMPER.—In argument, Robert Hall was impetuous, and sometimes overbearing, but, if he lost his temper, he was deeply humbled, and would often acknowledge himself to blame. On one of these occasions, when a discussion had become warm, and he had evinced unusual agitation, he suddenly closed the debate, quitted his seat, and, retiring to a remote part of the room, was overheard by a lady who was just entering, to ejaculate, with deep feeling: "Lamb of God! Lamb of God! Calm my perturbed spirit!"

When everything else fails, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures.

CONSIDERATIONS AND CONVERSIONS.—I have in my mind's eye two young men who left the seminary at the same time. They were not unequal in their gifts and culture. One determined to be a great preacher. His ultimate aim was to do good; but he thought it wise and right to secure popularity as a foundation on which to build usefulness. He was soon called to a large church. He preaches there to crowded houses. He is one of our ablest defenders of the faith, and one of our most highly honored doctors of divinity. We all admire and love him. But, looking over the minutes, I see that he reports congregational expenses, $24,000; additions on profession, five. The other man started out to save souls, without any thought or care as to personal popularity. He is a home missionary in the far West. He reported last year congregational expenses, $400; added on examination, sixty. Who would not rather have this record in the great day than the other? The temptation to labor for congregations rather than conversions is very insidious. Elders and trustees often join with Satan in presenting it to the minister. "We must fill the pews and the treasury," they cry. "We must not repel the impenitent by pricking them in their hearts." But God sends his ambassadors, not to prophesy sweet things, but to cry: "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish." Brethren, don't go a-whaling without harpoons.—Interior.

BOOKS.

HEAVENLY SHADOWS AND HYMNS. By Rev. A. P. McFerrin. Published by Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

The first part of this little book is pretty good reading. There are some good thoughts well expressed, and may become valuable and helpful to thoughtful readers. But, as to the hymns, our opinion is that no man ought to write a hymn unless it is an absolute impossibility not to do it.

THE ETERNAL CITY.

We seek a city, where each quiet dwelling
Stands fast upon the everlasting hills;
Wherein the songs of praises loudly swelling,
Come not a discord of our earthly ills.

We know that in that city life aloideth:
Nor tears, nor death, can ever enter there;
And One with nail-pierced hands our way still guideth,
Until we come unto the city fair.

We seek a city—pilgrim feet grow weary,
But we press on; beyond still lies our home,
Though days are dark, and ways are often dreary,
We seek, we seek a city yet to come!

Letter from California.

MR. EDITOR: We wander about so like nomads that we get our mail irregularly, and I must take it for granted that my last reached you; so I begin where that left off.

One has little need of Aladdin's wonderful lamp in this day and time, as far as quick journeys are concerned, for this nineteenth century, with its network of railroads, has annihilated distance, and you have but to seat yourself in one of these gilded coaches, make your wish, and, presto! you are transported from one green valley to another, like a California mariposa on the wings of a sea breeze; so on a divine day we saw the spires, towers and shining cupolas of Los Angeles fading in the distance behind us, while the illimitable ocean stretched away in front of us until at the horizon it seemed to blend with the spacious heavens. The long rolling breakers dashed their foamy crests at our very feet, as if they dared the divine fiat, "Thus far and no farther."

Arriving at Long Beach, we were conducted to elegant rooms en suite in the Long Beach Hotel, an ideal summer home for tourists. I have three windows fronting the beach, and I sit and watch the "deep and dark blue ocean roll," and sympathize with Tennyson in his cry of, for certainly tongue nor pen can cover the range of thought brought up here by the restless, ever changing sea, the fairy palaces peopled with bright fancies, the sacred memories, the hopeful longings. All day I watch "the stately ships move on to the harbor under the hill," and at night I am lulled to sleep by the song of "the sounding sea." I think such daily delights tend to dispel all narrowness from the soul of the spectator, and where there is a spark of poetic fire it must be fanned into a flame under this inspiration.

"Break, break, break on thy dark gray crags, O sea!
And I would that I might utter the thoughts that arise in me".

Long Beach is still in its babyhood; but whoever comes here a year hence will move under lucky stars, for whatever skill and taste can do to supplement the work of nature is being done. The lawn is being laid off into smooth walks and drives, sodded with Bermuda grass, sometimes sown with blue grass, and planted with rare and beautiful flowers. The hotel will soon be complete in its appointments and furnishings. Every kind of amusement is afforded the guests; but the favorite sport is surf bathing. Frequently as many as 200 people are in the water at one time: but these horrible stingarees abound on the Pacific coast, and every day I see two or three people, who have been stung by them, borne out of the water screaming with pain. Occasionally the bath-house managers explode some dynamite cartridges in the water. This destroys them in quantities, and the next breaker washes hundreds of dead ones ashore (stingarees, I mean). They are perfect monsters, and the sting of one makes an ugly wound. M. Glinka's wild dance, "The Tarantula," very well describes the antics of a stingaree victim.

The history of this unique little city does not date back farther than three years; but it is entirely in accord with the spirit of the times. The whole tract of land extending for miles up and down the sea coast, and rolling far inland over the verdant fields, belonged to the Chautauqua Assembly. They sold off this little township, but in the title was incorporated the "prohibition condition," and notwithstanding the many local pictures that make the place attractive, that which gives Long Beach her final and queenly grace is the taboo against King Alcohol. People come here in crowds because it is so orderly, and there is not a policeman in the place. Ladies and children come here without protectors, for there is nothing to fear in a place where there is not room for a single grog-shop. Surely the millennium will dawn when the white ribbon army effectually rout this whisky fiend.

The Chautauqua Assembly is in convention here, and we have had "a feast of reason and a flow of soul." The spectacular and costume lectures that I have heard on "The Tabernacle of the Wilderness," "Palestine," etc., are worth years of study to any student of those subjects. I heard Rev. Dr. Cantine's lecture on "The Girl to Love." I need not commend it any further than to say he has delivered it 200 times to delighted hearers. Dr. Bowers, of the Ventura Free Press, gave an admirable lecture on "The Cosmogony of Moses," and last evening a crushing audience was out to hear Bishop Fowler, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, on "The Bible, the Prophet of Science." What a discourse it was, proving that science has nothing to fear from theology, and theology nothing to fear from science. They are twin sisters, "vestal virgins which can not be wedded to error."

I could not too highly extol this Chautauqua movement. Every year it brings together a perfect array of talent for the education and enjoyment of the people. No time is wasted on new departures and new isms, but the articles of the evangelical religion are emphasized. In the schools the illustrative mode of teaching is largely adopted. On last Sabbath the Sunday-school was a perfect kindergarten. Our days here are numbered. We will remain over Sunday to see the Chautauquans fold their tents and steal away: then we will "follow fast and follow faster;" so I will bid you good-night here, and say good-morrow at San Diego.

Yours truly,

SHREVEPORT.

LONG BEACH, CAL., Aug. 5, 1887.

Prohibition in West Feliciana, La.

MR. EDITOR: I have been thinking for some time of writing to you about our temperance work in this part of the vineyard. The only reason why I did not do so was because I had precious little of encouragement to write about. But as we are emerging from the woods, and have somewhat of a pleasing prospect ahead of us, I conclude to write.

About eight months ago Mrs. Goodale lectured at Bayou Sara, and organized a Woman's Christian Temperance Union of about seventeen members, composed of ladies from each denomination represented in Bayou Sara and St. Francisville. We began our work under rather discouraging conditions, when we considered the past social habits of our people on this temperance question. Since the organization, by prayer and persistent pegging away, the number of members has increased to about one hundred and seventy-five, including honorary members. We have gained a host of friends, and are gradually, gracefully, healthfully growing in favor with God and the people.

What I want to write about specially is, the impetus given to our work by a series of lectures delivered by Mr. W. H. Goodale, of Baton Rouge. He commenced in one end of the parish, and finished up very nearly in the other, lecturing in all about ten times, to whites and blacks, in different parts of the parish. I honestly assert that, after having heard him seven times, I decided the last lecture to be the best of the series, and they were all good. Mr. Goodale has made many warm friends and adherents in this parish. Some unexpected and very pleasant surprises greeted us from men whom we supposed would be very much against us. At a little place, called Sebastapol, right on the banks of the Mississippi, Mr. Goodale delivered a lecture on a gentleman's store gallery, who frankly stated that he sold whisky, but who also as frankly stated that he would vote against license and use his influence, which is considerable, in carrying the parish for prohibition. After listening very closely to the lecture, this gentleman very kindly entertained us for the night, and before leaving his house in the morning requested us to have family worship with them. Another lecture at 5 o'clock, Sunday, to a nice audience at Tunica. After the lecture, the hearers personally tendered thanks to the lecturer for giving them so much to think about on the temperance question. Another lecture at half-past seven to the colored people. These lectures have set the people to thinking and talking, and it will not be very long before they take action on this question.

I must tell you of a nice little incident on our way back to Bayou Sara. We stopped at the store of a friend of mine, who sells whisky, and requested him to fix us a cup of coffee. He not only ordered coffee made, but made us iced lemonade, gave us a fine lunch, fed our horse, and refused any remuneration. Now, this is the kind of opposition we are meeting in almost every place we go. Even the men who are engaged in the traffic will be glad to get rid of it. There are about four prominent men in the parish who can influence a vote large enough to carry the parish for prohibition to-day if they would. We are waiting on them, and as soon as we get their co-operation, down goes the liquor traffic in West Feliciana.

H. BRADFORD.

To the Friends of Prohibition in Mississippi.

It is my pleasure to report to you the rapid and healthful progress of our cause throughout the State. Our recent State Convention was large and enthusiastic—representative of the best citizenship of Mississippi. While there were reasonable differences of opinion upon minor matters of policy, there was absolute unanimity on all questions of principle, and a lofty patriotism inspired the whole proceedings. We enter upon the work before us with a stronger column, a better organization, and brighter hopes of speedy triumph than one year ago. The operation of our admirable local option law, compelling agitation, has strengthened prohibition sentiment and multiplied faithful friends, until we stand up to-day an exceeding great army. Letters received since the adjournment of the State Convention give assurance that the principles of prohibition are gaining substantial ground in the upper river counties. Large planters, hitherto indifferent, are convinced that the agricultural interests of the delta can not endure the demoralization of the whisky traffic.

Intelligent conviction on this question is growing also among the colored people. Their ministers of religion and teachers of the day-schools are united in opposition to this most inveterate and insatiate foe of their race. We hail them as valued co-workers in this great moral reform.

The news from Texas is in no sense discouraging. The battle has not ended, but only begun. This was merely the first skirmish betokening a struggle that will in the end triumphantly wave the white banner over every home in the Lone Star State. The issue was precipitated by the enemies of prohibition. Its friends courageously took up the gage of battle and, though at no time hopeful of immediate victory, succeeded in mobilizing an army that will never retreat or surrender. The 140,000 freemen who voted for "God, home and native land," will never deny, compromise or falsify their splendid record. They are more determined to-day than before the fourth of August. Men of principle never falter, though they fail. Moral reforms never go backward, however fiercely opposed. Eliminating the nearly forty thousand foreign votes cast almost solidly against the amendment, and two-thirds of the 8,000 colored votes claimed by the anti-prohibitionists, and the fact is revealed that a majority of the native white population cast their ballots for constitutional protection against the matchless evil of the age. The election, therefore, is only a clarion call to duty and a sure prophecy of glorious victory. The colored people will never again be so largely influenced to vote for whisky, and every day's agitation will add recruits to the army of reform.

In view of the magnificent struggle in Texas, and the grand work achieved in our own State, I greet every friend of prohibition with words of cheer. Mississippi is destined in the near future to become one of the most solid prohibition States in the Union. Patient persistency of purpose, uncompromising loyalty to conviction, and sublime devotion to duty, will redeem our beloved commonwealth from the curse of the open saloon.

From Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I see the Board is not able to send us men because they have no money. Now, I would like to see in the Mississippi Conference, the North Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, missionary societies formed among the children and young people of our churches, and called "Japonica Missionary Societies," the object of which would be to send one or two missionaries to Japan. We are needing the men, and the work is suffering for the want of them, and I am sure the Board would be glad to have the aid of such missionary societies among the Sunday-schools in all the churches. If we can get five thousand children to give each week one cent each, that will amount to fifty dollars a week, and for one month it will be two hundred dollars, and for one year the total amount will be two thousand and four hundred dollars—enough to support two missionaries a whole year in Japan. Let them contribute this money with this specific object in view: to send one or two missionaries to Japan. The Sunday-school children and young people of our church could support ten missionaries in Japan. If they can do this for thirteen years, we will ask no more help from the home churches, for I feel sure with that help, and with the blessing of God, we shall have in Japan at the close of this century one hundred thousand native Christian members of our own church. Let us ask great things of the Lord, and let us expect great blessings. The revivals which are going on in Virginia and in other places in our own church, and other churches, fill us with new zeal, love and hope. Thank God for these revivals, and we are praying that showers of blessings may fall upon us in Japan. We are organizing missionary societies among our people, and already we have sixty or seventy members. The Kobe Missionary Society is already sending out two native missionaries to work among the people, and we hope to do the same in Hiroshima. Let the church help us now, my dear brother, and pentecostal showers of divine grace will be poured out upon the church at home and in heathen lands.

Pray for us and help us, and I pray the Lord to add his richest blessing.

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

What one Home Missionary Society is doing is told in these words:

"It speaks well for the missionary spirit of the Congregational Churches that more than one-half of all their ministers in active pastoral service bear the commission of their Home Missionary Society. These 1,571 missionaries had under their care 3,063 churches and regular preaching stations and over 2,100 Sunday-schools, the latter having a membership of nearly 130,000. They organized during the year 135 new churches and 323 new Sunday-schools. They built 112 houses of worship and repaired 170, and brought 63 churches to self-support. They report 8,056 conversions and 10,031 additions to their churches—all but 3,562 of these being admitted upon confession of faith."

Current Coins.

(The Foreign Missionary.)

The heathen will never be judged for not accepting a Savior "of whom they have never heard," and it is wholly unfair to present any such man-of-straw conception for the sake of a lame argument: but the Christian Church will be judged for not proclaiming a Savior to the heathen, and that is the fact which it most concerns the church to ponder. It is not God's compassion toward them that needs vindicating, but our own.

(London Methodist Recorder.)

No preaching of the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ is, in our opinion, firmly based, adequately apprehended, or duly effective, which does not deal with the spiritual part of man's nature, which ignores the need of conversion, and fails to show the way in which it is to be attained. Meanwhile, those who think with us must beware. Those who believe it to be the main duty of a Christian minister to understand and expound spiritual truth with fervor and power, must take care that in their fervent tones there is no falsetto note, that in their zeal and tenderness they do not forget to be simple and natural, and that they do not afford the world—always ready for a sneer—the opportunity of confounding unctuousness, which is wholly human, with unction, which is more than half divine.

(Christian at Work.)

No, a good man's life is not incomplete, not a broken column because stilled on its earthly side. There is a heavenly side, and it still grows on in beauty and symmetry. Apelles, the Grecian painter, when asked why he touched and retouched his pictures with so much care, answered: "Because I paint for eternity." A true Christian works for eternity, and if it is God's will that he should go higher, even while in the midst of a noble work here, his life still goes on. No matter how many broken shafts are reared above his coffin lid, he would say if he could speak, that he was satisfied. He would echo Dr. Preston's dying words: "Blessed be God! though I change my place I shall not change my company; for I have walked with God while living, and now I go to rest with God."

(Advance, Chicago.)

Not only is it good for individuals, it is good for the church, for all true believers to belong to it. The church needs all the moral force it can properly secure—all the faith, all the love, all the consecration, all the aggressiveness—in order to meet the mighty tides of evil which are all the time sweeping in on men, and to get truth and righteousness forward in a permanent conquest. One who loves Christ in all sincerity, and who has accepted him as a personal Savior, and who wants to be of service to him and his cause, will not find it easy to put this consideration aside. If any man will come after me, or be my disciple, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me. This is one of the points when not to be with Christ is to be against him.

(St. Louis Christian Advocate.)

True consecration means that Jesus Christ has gone through us as the refiner's fire and fuller's soap; that the dross has been consumed, the filthiness purged, the whole nature subdued to Christ; that even the imagination of every thought has been brought into captivity to him; that every chord of the soul is attuned into harmony with him; that Christ has become to it the fairest among ten thousand, the one altogether lovely. Discovered with disrelish from all other good the heart cries out: Whom have I in heaven but thee? What is there on earth I desire beside thee?

"Thou art the sea of love
Where all my pleasures roll.
The circle where no passions move,
The center of my soul."

This is the secret of happiness and of strength.

(Congregationalist.)

Of all books in the world, the Bible is one that presumes on the good sense of its readers. When Christ calls Peter "the rock," the evangelist does not stop to explain that this word is not there to be taken in its literal sense, as that would make nonsense. It assumes that the reader has some sense of his own, and will use it. The difference between the language of plain words and the language of symbolism, emblems, figures, is not so great after all; for words are themselves only signs, the artificial or conventional symbols of things and thoughts, of which the more pictorial images are the natural signs. And these pictorial symbols may themselves come to have also a conventional usage, and pervade a whole literature, being taken up and used similarly by a long succession of writers. This is just what one finds to be the case in the prophetic writings and representations of Scripture. Hence the need, as Paul suggests, of comparing Scripture with Scripture; so that, if in any one place a certain phrase of speech or form of inquiry is obviously explained, its meaning in other places may be inferred. In this way even the visions of the Revelation, which are so infinitely imaginative and poetic, may be more an open secret than has been supposed.

THE LITTLE CHURCH COVERED WITH IVY.

BY N. LAUGHLIN.

One spot in the home of my girlhood
Is graved on my memory still:
The little church covered with ivy,
That stands at the foot o' the hill.

No place half so peaceful and prayerlike
As that near the white of the mill,
On the bank of the rippling river
That flows at the foot o' the hill.

I have seen many silvery streamlets,
To me none so dear as this rill
Which waters the English "God's acre"
That stands at the foot o' the hill.

I listen to far grander music,
Which never has power to thrill
My soul like the simple old anthems
We sang at the church o' the hill.

Stored in my heart's garner no picture
Could ever replace or refill
The little church covered with ivy,
That stands at the foot o' the hill.

The Sunday-School Lesson for August 28, 1887.

BY C. B. ANDREWS, D. D.

PIETY WITHOUT DISPLAY.

Matthew vi, 1-15.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."—I Samuel xvi, 7.

INTRODUCTORY.

Just why the Sunday-school authorities should have skipped from the twenty-sixth verse of the fifth chapter to the first verse of the sixth chapter, thus leaving out the discussion of some of the most important principles of the Christian system, does not appear. I suppose that they think that to take all the subjects in the Bible for Sunday-school study would be impracticable, and, therefore, they aim to give variety, to keep up the interest and, at the same time, to impart benefit. The study of all parts of the Scripture will prove beneficial. Some parts seem to be more popular with general readers than others; but it is all good to the use of edifying. We are called to pass over four paragraphs of our Lord's Sermon on the Mount, devoted respectively to deliverances upon adultery and divorce, upon false swearing, upon retaliation, and upon love to enemies, and we are to study first in this lesson the method and motive of

ALMS-GIVING.

Verse 1. "Take heed." These words are used often by the Savior, and in other places in the Scripture, and they convey the idea of careful examination, of diligent scrutiny. The etymology means "hold to." The idea is plainly impressed that one may easily be led into the error of doing good for self-glorification. "That ye do not your alms before men." The New Version, following many of the old MSS., has "righteousness" instead of "alms." If that rendering is correct, the text warns against ostentation, not only in almsgiving, as in verse second, but in prayer also, in verse five, and in fasting, in verse sixteenth. Any religious offering which is made just to receive praise of men is an abomination in the sight of God, as well as of men. When it is found out that a man seeks to play the religious hero simply for a bargain, he will be contemned of men, and he will also forfeit the reward of heaven.

2. "Alms" in this text is so translated by all biblical scholars, and means the bestowment of money in charitable deeds. It is worthy of notice that the pronoun here takes the singular number, so that the reader—man, woman or child—may take it right home to self. "Do not sound a trumpet"—a figurative expression denoting an outward show. "As the hypocrites." The original word translated "hypocrite" means "one who acts a part." The Pharisees sometimes blew a trumpet with the ostensible purpose of calling the poor together. "They have their reward." All they sought was human applause; therefore, the great Rewarder is under no obligation to them.

3. "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth." The right hand is used because it is with men generally the instrument of action. Men ought to conceal their good deeds from their fellows, because some would discourage a repetition, and others would damage by fulsome praise. They ought even to conceal them from their own consciousness as far as possible, lest they should be puffed up.

4. "Secret" or private "alms" will bring an open reward. God will bless the man with prosperity and success, who bestoweth alms solely for the purpose of benefiting the needy. "Honor the Lord with thy substance and the first-fruits of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine."

TRUE PRAYER DISTINGUISHED FROM FALSE.

Verses 5, 6, 7, 8. Warning is given lest men should follow the example of hypocrites in prayer; standing in conspicuous places, so as to attract the attention of men, and to gain popular applause because of their seeming sanctity. They may deceive men, and receive for themselves a false reputation; but what a miserable mockery is this! Prayer may be used so as to increase condemnation. There is no condemnation given here to social prayer, or prayer in the congregation; but it is spoken against all prayer which is simply made with reference to man's estimate. The proper way and place for successful prayer is to retire from the gaze of men and from distracting surroundings. Peter's closet was the housetop; Isaac went out into the fields to meditate; the Savior went up into a mountain to pray. Shutting the door means not only to seclude oneself from the world, but also to shut out all worldly and distracting thoughts. Thus the mind can be kept upon the object in hand, and God will reward such faithful worship by his open blessing. Another habit of the heathen or irreverent person is to use repetitions in prayer. The repetition of any word in prayer which is not felt in the heart brings one under this condemnation. How many words are uttered in prayer which really have no meaning in them, are mere catchwords! Many Christians—yea, even many ministers, use even the model prayer of our Lord so flippantly and so unthoughtedly as to make even its blessed petitions an abomination. "Our Father knows what things we need before we ask him." This does not mean that we are not to ask, and even ask importunately, for the blessings which we need. It rather means that we should be more particular about the manner or the spirit in which we make prayer, than about the specific petitions we make. When once the petitions come from the depth of an overburdened heart, our Father will then inspire and accept our prayer. To prevent such vain repetitions and to spiritualize such Pharisaic prayers, our blessed Master gave to his disciples, and through them to the world, a model form of prayer, which is known throughout Christendom as

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

Verses 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. It was not meant that this prayer only should be used, nor that it should be used on all occasions, but rather it was given simply as a pattern of brevity, of comprehensiveness, and of reverential worship. It is composed of an invocation of seven petitions, and of a doxology. The first three petitions have exclusive reference to God. They are given in an anti-climax, beginning with the Father himself, and coming down to his "kingdom" and his "will." The remaining four petitions have reference specially to ourselves. These, we might say, are delivered in the form of a climax, beginning with a provision for bodily wants, and ending with a deliverance from all sin. The invocation, "Our Father in heaven" is expressive of the unity of the human race and of the universal fatherhood of God. A minister leading the minds of a congregation on land or on sea, of any race or nationality, can, with truth and appropriateness, say "Our Father;" so he might if he were kneeling by a condemned criminal on the gallows. "Our Father" brings us all into divine kinship.

The first petition is, that the name of God be held in reverence. The pious Romanist inclines his head whenever the name of Christ is mentioned. It were well if every Protestant should imitate this example, at least, in so far as making obeisance with the heart at every reminder of the blessed Trinity.

The second petition is a prayer for the spread of Christ's kingdom, and commits everyone, who uses it sincerely, to do all in his power to have it answered in his own heart and in the heart of every child of man.

The third petition. "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven"—as continuously, as naturally, as perfectly. The reverent heart will not stop to ask, Is this possible? Conscious of the joy of the Lord in his own experience, and realizing that God's grace never stops short of a perfect conformity to his will, he continually yearns for its accomplishment.

The fourth petition relates to daily supplies of all temporal blessings. Luke has it, "day by day." So comes our supplies as the manna did fall, according to our need.

The fifth petition. For the forgiveness of sins. The measure and extent of our forgiveness is according to the forgiveness we show to others. An unforgiving man shuts the gates of glory against himself. Let the degree of forgiveness I extend to others be given to me. Men ought to think upon the awful consequences of uttering this prayer out of an unforgiving, bitter heart.

The sixth petition. God's Spirit is promised to lead men into all truth, and the pious heart may be assured that no temptation will befall it save such as God will give grace to bear.

The seventh petition. "Deliver us from evil." Some commentators count this petition with the last, and, therefore, have only six. The conjunction "but" does not so couple them as to make one; but rather shows that the one naturally is suggested by the other. It is a fitting end of the petitions that we may be delivered from evil, all evil, and all its consequences, fully and finally. The doxology, as it is called—"For thine is the kingdom, the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen!"—is thought by many not to belong to the text. But it is certainly in accordance with the other Scriptures, and it furnishes comforting reasons why our Father should answer our prayers.

Holly Springs District Conference.

MR. EDITOR: This Conference convened in its seventeenth session on July 29, Rev. John Barcroft, P. E., in the chair. On the day previous the Sunday-school Conference was held, also under the presidency of the presiding elder. There was a very good attendance of the pastors and delegates. Only four of the pastors were absent. Peace and harmony prevailed, and the occasion was one of great profit from business and religious standpoints.

A minute survey of the various lines of church work was brought out, and many encouraging features were delineated. The temperance cause was well emphasized, and the information was cheering and prophetic of triumph. All good people, and many of the bad, say, "On with the revolution!" The election has but to be held on prohibition in order to success.

The Sunday-school cause is very much improved in the bounds of the district, and was well discussed in its various phases. No doubt great good will result from the proceedings of the Sunday-school Conference. The Sunday-school Conference is a real and great means for good, and by no means should be neglected or relegated to an unimportant position. Many good things were said and done.

We had the pleasure of the presence of several visiting brethren. Bro. Newell, of Grenada Collegiate Institute, was present, in his effectual and genial manner working in the behalf of that elegant and excellent institution. He is fully awake on Christian education, and is doing a fine work in establishing one of the best schools in the Southwest upon the rock of public confidence and conscience. God bless him and his co-educators! However, he is to be congratulated on the acquisition of Miss Maggie Tate, formerly of Blue Mt. Female College, as a member of his faculty. Bro. Bachman was also present in the interest of the Bible and other strictly Methodist literature. His trunk lost some of its weight during the Conference. We need more such men in this great work. Rev. T. G. Freeman was there, and the canine species was reminded of, or became acquainted with, the familiarity and vigor of his big toe. I would regret very much to be the subject of his wrath, as the poor dog at church. Rev. J. H. Collins, the evangelist, and wife were there, and remained after adjournment of Conference to hold a series of meetings. He is, no doubt, doing great good. May the Lord pour upon him his blessings!

The portion of the district in which the Conference is held is, perhaps, to be one of the most fertile parts of the same in the not distant future. The resources of that section will be greatly enhanced and developed by the Kansas City railroad. We expect rich harvest to Methodism.

Shortly we will forward the reports of the Committees on Temperance and Literature. Be sure that the circulation of church papers was duly emphasized. I will curtail remarks for the present. The delegates to the Annual Conference are: W. H. Young, E. J. McKinney, Rev. W. M. Adams and W. R. Montgomery; alternates—G. H. Murray and W. F. J. Callahan.

C. H. OWEN.

Shreveport District Conference.

"Nothing succeeds like success," has passed into an aphorism nowadays. I am sure nothing stimulates men to more earnest action and higher resolve.

Your reporter would pronounce the work done by the above mentioned body as decidedly successful in every particular. Firstly, we had a full representation at Grand Cane. Every charge was represented by the preacher in charge, as it always should be. The work and its methods were thoroughly ventilated; thus the failures and most efficient modes were elicited. A thorough investigation of this kind was a revelation to some who were unacquainted with Methodistic economy. Special work was done through the media of committees, data being gleaned from the reports to make this part of the proceedings highly interesting and instructive. The papers read before Conference contained many valuable suggestions, were well written, and commanded interest and attention. Spirited debates characterized the discussion of some subjects, evincing earnestness tempered with charity. Our new presiding elder, Bro. Cassity, showed himself well qualified to discharge the responsible duties devolving upon him as president of the body. Harmony and good order characterized all the deliberations. The brethren were willing to hear as well as to speak.

Two regular services were held every day. The preaching was earnest, forceful and successful. Many were raised to a higher plane of religious life and thought; eight converted, and as many added to the church. This part of the good work is still proceeding under Bro. A. T. Galloway, assisted by Bro. Beard.

The claims of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE were pressed upon the people, and its influence clearly shown in the reports wherever circulated.

On Friday night a missionary meeting was held under the control of the Woman's Missionary Society. Well-selected pieces were spoken by the young ladies, evincing fine elocutionary training, interspersed with choice and appropriate song, closing with a masterly address from Dr. Trippett, and a collection.

Our hearts were saddened during the session by the announcement of the death of Rev. J. D. Jackson. All business was suspended for awhile, an appropriate hymn sung, and a touching, earnest prayer offered for the bereaved family. Scarcely had we closed the Conference when the wires bore the sad intelligence that Bro. J. P. Porter had also passed away. Jackson, earnest, ardent, fiery in his preaching; Porter, quaint, simple, logical in his style. Both gone home. It is well. It is God's plan.

May Israel's God comfort the widow, sustain the fatherless, and solace the aged mother, sister and brothers! He knows what is best. Trust him, then, in life, and in death he shall abide with thee.

Woman's Work.

NOTICE TO THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF LOUISIANA.

At the annual meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions, recently held in Catlettsburg, Ky., the week before Christmas was set apart as a season of prayer and self-denial for the women of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Each member is requested to pray every afternoon during the intervening six months (beginning June 25) for a baptism of the Holy Ghost on our especial work.

The promise is: "If two of you shall agree on earth touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven."

Let each of our 700 members of the Woman's Missionary Society in Louisiana feel this to be a personal call to duty, and the blessing will be such that we shall not have room to hold it.

From the Work.

WEST POINT, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Our meeting closed on Monday night. The conclusion was one of the best services of the meeting. We started in with the understanding we would let the recording angel do the counting, so we are not prepared to give the number of conversions, but would put it down as between seventy-five and one hundred; perhaps nearer the latter figures. About as many backsliders pledged themselves to consecration. The general impression is very distinct, and is seen everywhere. West Point is like a new town. All denominations and classes shared the benefits. Between thirty and forty men among the converts, and many of these counted among the hard cases in town. Whisky and gaming received blows from which they will not soon, if ever, recover. Whisky men admit that the traffic is doomed in West Point. One saloon keeper was converted, and in less than forty-eight hours had washed his hands of the business, and was praying, testifying and working for the salvation of others. The good work still goes on.

On Wednesday night the prayer meetings were largely attended. At the Methodist Church at least one hundred were present, and about one-fourth of them testified for Christ, while three came forward for the prayers of the church.

Our community will always remember Bros. Inge and Beville with tenderest Christian affection, and they will always receive a cordial, Christian welcome to our town and homes and hospitalities.

I said just a year ago, through your paper, that West Point was under the heel of the monster—whisky—but would be redeemed; and I now say, in the language of a popular song sung during our revival, as it now comes floating through my window from the lips of a mother, "The crowning day is coming." Yes, it is near at hand. God speed its coming!

Yours in great joy,

J. D. CAMERON.

HOMER DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR: Our District Conference has passed, and, I trust, with much profit to community and Conference. There was a good attendance—about sixty-five—and great peace and much spirituality through the whole session, both in Conference-room and in public worship. The congregation was well prepared for it by the gracious revival which had taken place some time before through the earnest and consecrated labors of Bro. White, assisted by Bro. Blocker and others. Some of the young members were put to work, and I trust all will be steadfast.

The reports of committees show some advance on all lines except educational interests, and I trust that progress will be made at this point. We wish, if practicable, to establish a district high school.

The prohibition work is growing rapidly, and I trust that our State will shortly register among the "dry" States of the Union. We are working for it, but do not expect it without a struggle. Our enemies would like to disarm us at this point, but our people must strive until the victory is won and the harvest gathered; then strive to retain and apply results to the good of domestic, social, commercial, religious and political prosperity and happiness.

Crops good, and promising a fine yield. No cotton worm in this country yet, or at least I have heard of none. Health good, or reasonably so for this time of year.

AUGUST 3, 1887.

CATO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: My second meeting on Shiloh circuit, held at Gum Springs Church, closed last Thursday at eleven o'clock, or with the eleven o'clock service. It protracted from our third quarterly meeting. Our highly esteemed presiding elder, D. A. Little, was with us till Sunday evening, and did efficient work, preaching in the power and demonstration of the Spirit.

We were assisted all through the meeting by Rev. R. E. Lee (local preacher). Had a fine meeting—thirteen accessions, and many more to follow. All the glory to God!

A. D. MILLER.

AUGUST 5, 1887.

BUENA VISTA, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We commenced a meeting at Asbury, July 2, and continued nine days, holding two services a day, with dinner on the ground, which resulted gloriously. The church worked well from the beginning, and the meeting resulted in a thorough and satisfactory revival—the conversion of thirty souls, twenty-five accessions, and many penitents at the close of the meeting. Every dollar on the collection ordered by the Annual Conference was promised, and the stewards say the preacher's salary will be paid in full. Bro. Kendall, our prompt and faithful presiding elder, was with us three days preaching, not only to the delight but the profit of all. Sister Kendall was present to help on the good cause, and organized a Woman's Missionary Society, which starts off well.

One peculiar feature of the meeting from the beginning was that everyone was intent on the good of others and seemed to forget self. We might tell you how the young men worked and led in prayer, and how readily the young converts took up the cross and worked for the Master.

Rev. H. C. Parrott did faithful service, and preached to the satisfaction of all. Sister Parrott was present, and worked earnestly and successfully. Bro. Gainn, a local preacher, stood by us and was ready to do anything called upon to do. To God be all the glory.

HESLEP R. TUCKER, P. C.

AUGUST 1, 1887.

ADA CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed another protracted meeting on Ada circuit. The meeting lasted eight days, resulting in fifty-three accessions, a great number of conversions, and the older church members greatly revived.

The meeting was held at the Oak Grove Church, in that part of the country known as "Point Meagre," on Red river, twenty-five or thirty miles below Alexandria.

I wish to make mention of these facts, as this has always been considered a hard place, where the people would not appreciate nor receive the gospel. On this occasion, however, the people gave good heed to the Word preached, and it proved to be "the power of God unto salvation" to all who believed.

A. I. HOFFPAUIR.

AUGUST 6, 1887.

LEBRON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Have just closed a most glorious meeting at this place. Received twenty-two on profession of faith, and more to join. Nine went to the Baptist Church; but it was a union meeting. We had no organized church there, but have one now, being served by the pastor of Sunnyside and McNutt charges on Saturdays and fifth Sundays, the remainder of the Conference year. This part of the wilderness begins to blossom as the rose. Had a fine meeting at McNutt. Received twelve on profession of faith.

W. S. SHIPMAN.

MCNUTT, MISS., AUG. 6, 1887.

GLENVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed my first meeting. This is my fourth year. The good Lord has blessed us with a good meeting. To start with results: Fifty conversions, fifty-one accessions to the church, and more to follow. God be praised for his goodness to us! Thanks, not to preachers for help, but thanks to God for a working church. It seemed at times that all were preachers. I have five more meetings yet. Hope this one is just a foretaste of what is to come. Pray for us.

Yours in Christ,

R. P. GOAR.

AUGUST 4, 1887.

Everybody Invited.

MR. EDITOR: Enclosed I send you a notice for the North Louisiana Camp Ground. We have bought and cleared off ten acres of land, and have let out the contract for a large shed and preachers' tent and a large tent for myself, where the friends from a distance will find free entertainment. Tents are being arranged for cheap board for those who prefer that order of entertainment. Easy rates. We want you to come, as our editor, and let our people see you, and hear you preach. We invite the presiding elder and the preachers of the New Orleans district to come and help us. We want any of the Bishops that can come. Yours truly,

R. PARVIN.

Our Minutes.

BY REV. WILLIAM HART.

The efficient secretary of our Conference, Rev. C. F. Evans, was kind enough to notice my brief communication on the minute question. His lengthy reply was remarkable for nothing so much as the temper displayed therein. I had no idea that what I wrote would call forth such a spirit.

My complaint was, and is, that although we have more advertising matter in our minutes, and are taxed more to pay for these minutes than in former years, yet the number sent out to the preachers has never been so small as now.

Bro. Evans replies:

1. "The number of cards in the minutes of late is not as great as in some years before the writer joined the Conference, but certainly is not as remunerative as then."

2. "No one has ever been taxed to publish the minutes, though the preachers were requested to furnish the postage for distributing them."

3. The Secretary refers to the writer in these words: "He has been exact enough in this complaint to fix the number at five or six to the hundred, when my memorandum shows the ratio to be ten. This was not in every case followed, for his charge of one hundred members received seventeen copies—the less right has he to complain."

As to the spirit in which the above was written, I can only say I have no desire to retaliate. Wrangling and spiteful assertions are unbecoming a Christian, and especially a minister of the gospel. Had the object of my note been to make "a personal attack" on Bro. Evans, I have certainly got the worst of it. As an evidence of this I have only to refer to the following irrelevant matter in his communication: "He claims to have had some experience in the office, and was, I believe, assistant secretary for one year, and acquitted himself so efficiently that his brethren have excused him from any further service."

It will be news to many of our preachers to know that the reason why they have not been elected assistant secretary by "the brethren" is because of their inefficiency. The above insinuation against me is unfair. Bro. Evans was not a member of the Louisiana Conference when the writer served as assistant secretary, or he might have known more about it. He might have known, for instance, that I served two years. Again, Bro. Evans knows well enough that "the brethren"—as he terms the members of the Conference—have nothing to do with the nomination of assistant secretary. The Secretary nominates the brother he wishes as his assistant. But, of course, Bro. Evans believed the charge of inefficiency he brings against me. What, then, was his motive in publishing my misfortunes to the world? A man who can hold up to ridicule the infirmities of his brother is a man whose spirit I do not envy.

With regard to the three positions taken by the Secretary, as mentioned above, I beg to reply:

1. It is true I can not go back further than fourteen years. I don't know how many "cards" were published in the minutes before that time. It is unnecessary to go back a quarter of a century; but I still insist my assertion is correct, covering a period of twelve or fourteen years.

2, 3. The Secretary declares that "no one has ever been taxed to publish the minutes, though the preachers were requested to furnish the postage for distributing them." Is that all? Then what does he mean, in referring to the collection taken up at the last session of our Conference, in stating: "If Rev. William Hart gave a nickle of this, I have no record of it"? Did he mean to intimate that I did not pay the charges on the minutes I received? I wish to remove this erroneous impression by stating that I paid express charges on 22 copies (not 17, as the Secretary has it) for 201 members (not 100, as the Secretary has it). If, then, the call at Conference for contributions for the minutes was merely "to furnish postage for distributing them," what difference to the Secretary if I choose to pay the expenses at this end? I find it cheaper to do so. One brother paid a dollar at Conference, and his minutes cost him about seven and a half cents per copy. By paying at this end, I got my dozen for twenty-five cents.

"No one has ever been taxed to publish the minutes." That is startling. Let us take the minutes of January, 1885—the Centenary copy. It is larger than the 1884 copy, from the fact that it contains Dr. Carter's sermon, and some other Centenary matter. In that number we have twenty-two pages of advertisements; and it is well known that the expense of publishing the Centenary sermon was met by a good brother of Arcadia. I don't know what others paid for advertising, but I do know that the few who advertised in that number, residing here, paid far their cards at the rate of $50 per page. Those, of course, who took a whole page got cheaper rates; but there are very few whole-page advertisements in that number. Here, then, we have twenty-two pages of advertisements at a good price, besides the amount paid for the publication of the sermon. Well, that year the preachers were taxed five cents per copy for the minutes. This writer paid $2 50 for fifty copies. Yet, strange to say, the Secretary declares that "no one has ever been taxed to publish the minutes."

What has thus aroused the ire of our secretary? I am not left in uncertainty. Here is the secret as disclosed by him: that "Rev. William Hart has the presumption (!) to make a personal attack upon the Secretary"—the Rev. C. F. Evans, D. D. Well, really, I never thought of that before.

Warm Weather Musings.

"BEWARE OF DOGS."

Paul was not only inspired, but he possessed large common sense and fearless utterance of truth. "Beware of dogs." Apostle as he was, the man speaks out, as wearied with the presumption, ignorance or stupidity of the opponents of the gospel of Christ. There shows a threadbare spot in charity's lovely, useful mantle. To call one "a dog" was to give an appellation of disgrace, to make a brand of infamy. See how the eastern blood boils. II Kings viii, 13: "Is thy servant a dog." To be or to act the dog was the completion of baseness.

The dogs referred to by Paul were false teachers, and because rudely and irreverently they tore asunder the simplicity of the gospel in its requirements, and broke up the lovely harmony, so divinely appointed, between faith and its evidences in holy living. The Jews, like dogs, barked at the apostles because the purity and plainness of the gospel was a living, ceaseless rebuke to formalism and ritualism, under which lived real hatred of holiness whether of heart or life. These cynics in religion snarled and snapped at truths too pure for their apprehension, and barked the more ferociously because presented in the name and hallowed by the blood of the crucified Christ.

To a grand mind like Paul's, lit up by divine truth and rich in the experience of the light and beauty, the power and glory, of the sublime dual truth—"Jesus and the resurrection"—the snapping and barking of these dogs must have been largely annoying, and required much exercise of gracious patience and self-control. Argument was lost; illustration, however strong and clear, was in vain; appeal to Jewish scriptures and the dearest, stirring history of the nation could neither convince nor move. They snarled at what they could not appreciate, and only barked the loudest at argument they could not meet. They listened only to question, doubt and rejection. They wrapped round them so thick a veil of prejudice as to make their minds unimpressible by truth and reason. They hated Paul the more because his splendid natural gifts, scholarly education and large erudition had been withdrawn from Judaism and consecrated to the cause of the crucified Nazarene.

Paul finds sympathizers in every age of the church since his singular signboard—"Beware of Dogs"—has been placed by holy hands along the roadside of piety. The race that annoyed small-sized, large-souled Paul still exists; their race is perpetuated from age to age. Their study as to size and behavior is curious and amusing. Beside the surly bulldog, as if to strike one more forcibly, is the small ice-dog. The one shows his fearful teeth and strong jaws, with a miniature thunder note in his growl. The other curls his tail and seems to feel that, while there is no danger in his bite, his earthly "mission" is to bark. Between these extremes endless variety may be seen; yet the same family likeness is carefully preserved, the same traits carefully kept and exhibited.

There is no gospel truth so pure but it is assailed; no precious privilege meet with a snarl; no sacred duty but awakes some barking dog as example for the rest. Let any good man put on the dress of "a meek and quiet spirit," so priceless in the eye of Heaven; and how the dogs "begin to bark and bite!" Let the conscientious pastor carefully delineate the holy character and pure life that God requires of man, and especially if "besetting sins" are unveiled and gross irregularities of professing Christians exposed to view; and what a variety of whine and snarl, and growl and bark stirs the air! How ready is the manufacture of some term to reject or rebuke what there is lack of manliness openly to object to! How frequently is "old fogy," "antiquated piety," "antediluvian religion," whispered about, with the occasional variety of "crank," "strait-laced," etc.! Nevertheless, the tone shows the spirit of enmity to holy living, Christian consecration.

Perhaps while the larger and most furious can be guarded against with care and watchful effort, the most annoying are those who bark and keep up a perpetual noise as the force of evil habit. Each pastor has reason to remember the Pauline advice. Some desire to acquire and retain a momentary notoriety, at least, by being a self-constituted "committee of objections" to whatever anyone but themselves may propose for the real or supposed benefit of the church. The pastor, the official Board, each or both, may suggest; but the suggestion brings out those little barkers. Most piously, "from house to house," are sage criticisms given about means and measures they do not understand. The bark is feeble, but equally spiteful in purpose.

Then moneyed bark must have special attention given to it, even if it is directed to the topics and methods of the pulpit. It will not answer to be too particular or, in the least degree, seemingly personal in pulpit ministrations. Preach about sin and holiness in the abstract. Say as many hard things about the one, or as many good things about the other, as the dictionary may allow; but do not disturb the peace and quiet of the church by making piety too strait-laced in this liberal, enlightened age. We have not time to even glance at the variety of breed and behavior of "dogs" in the social circle—that large class of disturbers of quiet in homes as well as in the church. We leave to the imagination, observation and experience of each individual to complete his knowledge of the canines Paul refers to.

That the dogs exist is matter of fact. That they can bite and tear and destroy, as well as bark, is equally matter of fact. That they are as annoying now as in Paul's day, if they have not improved by long practice, may be a good study. If we do not "beware of dogs," we can not blame the great Paul, or the grand Anglo-Saxon Bible translating his warning. We make take occasional amusement in noticing some harmless old fellow that has lost his teeth and his voice, and has nothing left but his feeble spite, his superannuated noise.

At the same time we caress the good shepherd dogs, who aid in care of the fold, we ought not to allow them to acquire a taste for blood, and thus degenerate into "evil doers." Of course, if there are any favored regions where Paul's advice does not apply, these "Warm Weather Musings" do not have reference there. If all the "dogs" are effectually utilized, as by the Esquimaux, to draw their sledges, in that regard and to that region the golden age may be said to have returned.

PISCATOR.

An ugly complexion made Nellie a fright,
Her face was all pimply and red,
Though her features were good, and her blue eyes were bright,
"What a plain girl is Nellie!" they said.

But now, as by magic, plain Nellie has grown
As fair as an artist's bright dream;
Her face is as sweet as a flower new-blown,
Her cheeks are like peaches and cream.

As Nellie walks out in the fair morning light,
Her beauty attracts every eye.
And as for the people who called her a fright,
"Why, Nellie is handsome!" they cry.

And the reason of the change is that Nellie took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which regulated her liver, cleared her complexion, made her blood pure, her breath sweet, her face fair and rosy, and removed the defects that had obscured her beauty. Sold by druggists.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged; and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1887.

The editor, acting under the advice of his physician, left yesterday morning for the Hot Springs, in North Carolina, where he hopes to regain the health that has been gradually going down for several months. He leaves the ADVOCATE in safe hands, and the wants of our readers will be attended to promptly every week.

Briefs.

Some gentlemen in Glasgow, Scotland, recently sent out to householders these three questions: (1) Are you in favor of prohibiting all licenses to sell liquors as a beverage? (2) Are you in favor of the people having entire control of the liquor traffic by vote? (3) Are you in favor of reducing the present number of licensed houses? There were 102,802 answers returned. To the first question there were 57,704 yeas, 19,411 nays, 5,356 neutral. To the second there were 77,246 yeas, 8,535 nays, 4,124 neutral. To the third there were 71,427 yeas, 9,591 nays, 4,445 neutral. It is said that this healthy sentiment is general throughout Scotland.

The following from a speech delivered by Col. R. T. Van Horn is not an exaggeration of the truth:

If the manuscripts of speeches, sermons, law arguments, scientific or professional papers were printed as they come to the printer's hands, seven in ten of great reputations would be wrecked, the educators of the land, the very teachers of grammar schools not excepted. There is something in the process of the handling of types, of reading copy, of correcting proofs, that begets an aptitude that no other instruction can give. The mind is so trained that it detects errors in style, expression, and rhythm in composition, as the trained ear detects discord in music. The printer is, after all, the real protector of literary reputation.

We have copied the above from the New York Christian Advocate. Those of our correspondents whose articles have undergone a change, and those whose articles have never appeared, may now know who it is that saved them from wreck.

The Canadian Methodist Church covers the whole of the Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland, and the Bermuda Islands, with a prosperous mission in Japan. It has 1,610 ministers and ministerial probationers; members, 197,479; value of church property, $9,895,043; college property, $453,435; Sunday-schools, 2,675; scholars attending Sunday-schools, 191,185; Sunday-school scholars meeting in class, 31,406; Sunday-school scholars who have taken total abstinence pledge, 37,280; Sunday-school papers taken, 229,639; amount paid for ministerial support per annum, $663,532, being about an average of $640 per minister; missionary money raised last year, $189,811, being about 97 cents per member. It has been for years the boast of this church that its missionary givings per member were about $1 50, but the amalgamation of funds by the union has somewhat lessened the relative proportion of givings to this fund; but it is hoped that when all the financial adjustments necessitated by the recent union are completed that the old mark will be reached and passed.

The committee appointed by the last General Conference to select a place for the meeting of the Conference, of 1890, have selected St. Louis, Mo. Good!

The Great Need.

We are living in an awful time. All the past has come down upon us. The present is the product of all the preceding ages. This age is the outcome of six thousand years of thrilling history. The responsibilities of this time are but the accumulated responsibilities of all times. The obligations of to-day have been piled upon us by the giant yesterdays. The needs of the present have been made vaster by the destitution of the past. We are living in an awful time.

The great need of the present is the same in kind, though larger in degree, that marked the past history of our race. The superficial thinker sees very many needs; but his untrained eye fails to pierce the depths of the present necessities and discover the one great necessity. It is thus in politics, it is so in religious affairs. In the supply of this one great need all other necessities are promptly met.

In the State and in the Church the great need of to-day, as of all past times, is men—earnest, true, heroic men. To solve the many curious and grave problems that have arisen in our politics—problems whose solution threatens the very life of the republic—political parties need true men to formulate their principles, and heroic men to carry them into execution. With the desperate and deepening wickedness at home, and with heathenism everywhere throwing open its doors and inviting missionary effort, the church needs men, real, live, pentecostal men, to lead "the sacramental host." "The right man" is the pressing need everywhere. Get him, and he will get everything else that is needful. "The right man in the right place" is such a rare thing, that when the two come together it is blazed abroad as something so unusual that it merits special attention. But the phrase always carries with it an idea that is humiliating. It is a clear admission that there are many wrong men in "the right places." In such conditions, the power of the place is neutralized by the weakness of the man, and efficiency is lost and progress is stayed. The church, as well as the commonwealth, has suffered untold misfortunes for the lack of those courageous spirits who deliberately put heart and blood and life into their work, in order that they may win success.

In all our church offices, from the class-room all the way up to the pulpit, these are the men who are needed. In all these places we need men who are afraid of nothing but sin—men whose hearts are all aglow with a Savior's love, and whose lives are loyal to a Savior's government, and whose zeal burns for the advancement of a Savior's kingdom. Put these men in the church offices, and they will create all the needful organizations and find abundance of money to carry forward the great scheme of the gospel, and the church will enter upon a career of prosperity which will be a fit adornment for the pages of her "latter-day" history. In one sense, our Lord's "whole soul was absorbed in the task of discovering and training a handful of men." The church must follow him in this. Let her train her eyes to discover "the right men," and use her utmost endeavors to train them for their grand work. Let her seek diligently for young men of native ability and force of character, and put them in her schools for academic training, that under the influence of sanctified learning they may go forth to the whitening fields with courage and enthusiasm. The need of our pulpits is trained intellects and hearts of fire. That church has suffered an incalculable injury where the pulpit is inferior to the pew in intellectual training. A succession of that sort, and that church is undone.

Schools and Sunday-Schools.

The recent editorial in this paper on the study of the Bible in our church schools and colleges was a timely suggestion on an important subject. The Christian school that does not make the Bible prominent among its text-books misses its aim and forfeits its claim to the Christian name. A college should not demand the patronage of the church by its title, while it seeks that of the world by truckling. Let the Methodist doctrines and polity be taught in all Methodist schools; let them thus be distinguished from all State schools; and, if they can not stand upon their own proper merits, let them fall. But if true to their high calling in promoting the Christian life and doctrine, they will not fall, but prosper the more.

This leads me to write what I have long thought and sometimes said: that we are but beginning to realize the vast importance of the Sunday-school as the annex of the church and the adjunct of the pulpit. It is the school of Christ, studying his Word on his holy day. The Sunday-school should consist of the church, old and young, studying the Bible. Thousands of the members of churches are appallingly ignorant of the Word of God. Some one recently proved by a personal canvass that many ministers of the gospel do not study the Bible, aside from their preparations for the pulpit. A personal canvass of the laity as to this point would reveal startling and humiliating facts. Does Protestantism give the Bible to the people simply that it may lie on their parlor tables as an ornament, a charm, or a fetich? The idea that the Sunday-school should be composed wholly or even chiefly of children is a harmful error. Parents should go with their children to Sunday-school, not send them. Leading is better here than driving.

There are several simple, but strong reasons why older persons, as well as children, should attend the Sunday-school. 1. It is the school of Christ, and is for all his disciples. 2. None are too wise to learn, or too old to be improved by studying the Bible. 3. Few study so regularly or so profitably at home as they would at the school. 4. All would be better hearers of sermons by their studying the Scriptures. 5. The helps and facilities for learning, furnished by the Sunday-school workers of our day, exceed the possibilities of all former times, and are among the glories of this generation. 6. All who know the Scriptures are needed in the Sunday-school as teachers; all who do not, need its teachings. 7. The children will be at church when the older people are at Sunday-school.

Whatever tends to separate this school from the church is an injury to both. What a beautiful sight, the people, old and young, studying the Word of God, on his holy day, together! The day is not far in the future, I hope, when the morning sermon will be preached as the closing exercises of the Sunday-school. This is already the plan in some places, especially in the country. It is also good for the cities. Let it become universal. The Bible needs to be studied in the churches as well as in the colleges.

W. L. C. H.

P. S.—I rejoice to see the ready responses to your appeal for answers to Dr. Lambuth's call. That missionary must go to Japan. A direct and personal appeal almost never fails. The hearts of the people are in this matter. Let the money pour in. Vicksburg district can furnish the man and part of the money too. The man is called. God's call of the man and the church's call for the money to send him are marvelously simultaneous. W. L. C. H.

"The Commencement Hop."

In an account of the closing exercises of the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn., an Episcopal institution, a newspaper correspondent says:

The commencement hop was a brilliant affair. Dancing was kept up to a late hour, and was guided by the celebrated Italian band of Nashville.

The correspondent referred to the long list of "Bishops and other clergy" present at commencement, and said there was no place in the United States where so large a body of the Episcopal dignitaries gather as at Sewanee, except at a General Convention. At the recent commencement six Bishops were in attendance, and the occasion was regarded as rather notable. But the presence of Bishops and clergy did not prevent the scandal of a "hop" at the close of a church school. We may have no right to criticise such affairs at State institutions; but church colleges, where the Christian religion is supposed to be taught, are expected to send young men home with prayers and benedictions upon their heads and in their hearts, rather than with memories of "hops," "carpet-dances," and like abominations. The idea of a Christian university encouraging, condoning or permitting "the dance of death!"

The Episcopal Church is largely responsible for the modern dance and its attendant evils. Who are the chaperones of the ball-room belles in our communities? And who are the "accomplished dancers" that find complimentary mention in the society columns of the newspapers? With conspicuous exceptions, their ecclesiastical whereabouts are known and read of all men. In the name of our holy Christianity, such things ought not so to be. * * *

The New Departure.

The East Mississippi Female College, at Meridian, Miss., has broadened its curriculum by adding the department of industrial arts, and making it an industrial as well as a literary school. This has been done to meet the growing demand for a practical education, thereby preparing young ladies for the various employments now opening to them. This college, by putting itself in the line of progress, is now prepared to meet the largest requirements for a liberal and practical education.

Surely such a movement ought to be encouraged, as it brings these advantages in a church school within the easy reach of the people of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama; for Meridian is a great railroad center, accessible from all points.

This college, by taking in such a wide scope of instruction, ought to attract the attention of those who have daughters to educate. Two new teachers have been added to the faculty—Miss Annie Williams, in the school of design and fine arts, and Miss Laura R. Powell, in the school of stenography, telegraphy and type-writing. These teachers are experienced and distinguished in their respective departments, and through them the very best advantages are secured to the institution in the industrial arts. These teachers, with those in the other departments, make one of the strongest combinations in a faculty that any institution can boast, and places this institution in the front rank of the schools of the country.

Then the music department is in the hands of a very accomplished and distinguished musician; and great success has been achieved this past session, as the display of the attainments of the pupils at the last concert fully attested. Miss Addie Purnell has certainly made a great impression as an able, successful and conscientious teacher; and under her skillful tuition pupils have all the advantages of a conservatory.

The college thus starts on its new career fully equipped for larger work, with a broader curriculum for higher achievements; and it is destined to be a still greater blessing to the country. For a comprehensive curriculum; for the best results in the work done; for the finest advantages and facilities in acquiring an education; for everything that can be reasonably demanded in a school, this institution occupies the front rank.

The point to be emphasized is that here, in a church school, will be found all the advantages in literature, sciences, music, fine arts and industrial arts, rendering it no longer necessary for parents to send to a State school for a practical education.

Let the members of the church who have daughters to educate rally to the support of this institution: fill up its halls with eager learners, and thus show to the world that Methodists, who possibly have the best schools, love to patronize their own institutions, thus preferring them to all others. Let the cry go forth, "Ye Methodist people, rally to your own schools!"

A. D. M'VOY.

Rev. Sam Small Coming to New Orleans.

Rev. H. D. Kimball, pastor of Morgan Street Church, who is now at Moundsville Camp Meeting, in West Virginia, has secured the promise of Rev. Sam Small to come to New Orleans and hold a series of meetings.

The services will be held in Morgan Street Church, commencing Sunday, November 20, and continuing through Sunday, November 27.

Bro. Kimball writes to us that Mr. Small readily offered his services to aid in a vigorous effort to revive the work of the Lord in Morgan Street Church, both because of his love for Methodism and his unabated interest in New Orleans, his old home. Mr. Small would not discuss the subject of compensation in connection with his proposed labors, and, as is his rule, leaves all the temporal incidents of his meetings to the care and direction of the Master.

Notes.

Bishop Hargrove:

Since I have witnessed the clamor and uproar of the General Boards in New York and Orleans by the grave and sober men who direct commerce and deal in stocks, I shall never apologize for the promiscuous rejoicings of saints in view of "an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled and that fadeth not away, a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth."

A spirited debate in the Wesleyan Conference, on the question of Methodist reunion in England, resulted in passing a resolution almost unanimously to appoint a committee to "consider and report as to the way by which the waste and friction in the actual working of the various sections of the Methodist Church may be lessened, prevented and brotherly love promoted."

The Western Christian Advocate says:

It is a singular coincidence that three candidates for the governorship of Ohio are Methodists. This ought to be a clean campaign.

It appears to us as one of the best signs and prophetic of good to the country when the political parties call upon the churches for the men to fill the most prominent stations in civil life. The nearer a man is like Christ, the nearer he is to being a true man, and the churches contain about all the Christ-like men, and stand ready to furnish them for all civil offices.

"How to reach the masses" is the question often asked by the church authorities. The London Methodist Times answers on this wise:

The meeting for workingmen at Rochdale was a great success. The fine chapel was crowded to the ceiling with men, chiefly workingmen. This was the reward of sensible preparation. The walls were covered with gigantic posters, and both the local papers were interested in the meeting. There is no difficulty in getting a crowd when the authorities have enough sanctified common sense to spend plenty of money on paper and ink. If the thing is not worth doing thoroughly, it is not worth doing at all. A miserable advertisement generally secures a miserable meeting.

Mr. Davis' letter to the Texas anti-prohibitionists has produced profound sorrow in the hearts of his true friends and most ardent admirers. They sorrow over the fact, that the last act of a grand life should allow him so clearly and closely to the practice and to those parties who are the greatest curses of this land. Whether Mr. Davis' letter had much to do with the results of the election in Texas or not, of one thing we are sure—he has taken a position which is clouding his evening sky, and spoken words which detract from the fame of his wisdom. Notwithstanding this, prohibition is stronger to-day than ever before. It stands firm in the public sentiment and in the courts of justice.

We are indebted to Miss Annie Littlefield, the efficient secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, for a copy of the ninth annual report of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The report is full of information concerning woman's work in our mission fields, and the statistics show that gratifying progress has been made and the future is more hopeful than ever. The receipts of money for the past year are not quite so large as for the two preceding years, but footed up the handsome sum of $50,092 63. The Woman's Board has in its employ twenty-eight missionaries, nine of whom have been appointed this year. Thus the Master's work goes bravely on in the hands of his servants.

There are some Scriptures which present our Lord in a very human aspect. And this is very encouraging to us poor mortals. The apostle, speaking of the glories of the ascended Lord, having won by his divine work on earth the place of honor, and having "sat down on the right hand of God," immediately recalls to our minds the humanness of the divine Savior by adding, "From henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool." The humanity of our Lord survives the glories of his ascension, and lives in his session at the right hand of the Father; and we recognize it in his expectation of the final subjection of all his enemies. But who does he expect to do this work of subduing? His brethren here, where the enemies are. Reader, are you engaged against the enemies of the glorified Christ? How much does he expect of you? Are you meeting his expectations?

A socialist, down in New Haven, has been compelled to give bond for the support of his children or go to jail. While a man may be allowed to preach what he pleases, the law will see to it that he also does something for the maintenance of his family.

Personals.

We are authorized to say that Rev. Sam Jones is not expected at the Sam Jones Camp Meeting, August 26. A greater than Sam Jones will be present.

Scylla: "Your paper is too scrappy. We want something to occupy our minds more than ten seconds." Charybdis: "Give us more paragraphs, personal mentions, etc. Nobody reads long articles." Editor: "I am in a strait betwixt two." Finale: An editor runaway to the mountains, and left a sub. to get the pelting.

Sister Jane Deeel, one of the excellent Christian women in Scotland circuit, Mississippi Conference, died on the twenty-fourth of July.

The women will take the world yet. Mrs. James Denholm, of Cape Town, has consented to act as the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union's vice-president for Africa!

The President seems to be receiving more invitations than he can accept. We trust he will find it possible to visit our city, where he will be sure of a hearty Southern welcome.

Hon. James G. Blaine was traveling around and "doing Ireland" last week, but can not "become reconciled to the order of things on the other side of the ocean."

A very large number of students are already applying for admission to Whitworth College next year. President Fitzhugh is making additions to the boarding department, which is under the supervision of Mrs. Kidd, and the outlook for the college is most promising.

Col. Jack, of Natchitoches, has said that he believes he has discovered gold ore on one of his plantations in Winn parish. Louisiana will yet make a good showing in mineral wealth.

The Confederate veterans had a reunion and barbecue and speech making, at Natchitoches, La., last week. Hon. H. F. Jones, of this city, was the orator of the day.

A lynx-eyed reader sends us the following clipping from our own column: "When parties desire extra copies of the ADVOCATE containing their obituaries," etc. That reader deserves to be promoted to the position of proof-reader.

The minutes of the ninth annual meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions, of our church, is very interesting reading, and contains much valuable information. You will find them in the Woman's Missionary Advocate for August.

The Missionary Reporter, for this month, contains much that goes to show that the missionary tide is rising. Already the results of the week of prayer and self-denial are coming in encouragingly.

The Woman's Board made these appropriations for 1887-88: China, $34,757; Mexican Border, $10,150; Brazil, $16,480; Indian Territory, $1,800; contingent, printing and office expenses, $3,000. Grand total, $66,487.

Missions.

Sarah Hosmer, of Lowell, though a poor woman, supported a student in the Nestorian Seminary, who became a preacher of Christ. Five times she gave $50, earning the money in a factory, and sent out five native pastors to Christian work. When more than sixty years old, she longed to furnish Nestoria with one more preacher of Christ; and living in an attic, she took in sewing until she had accomplished her cherished purpose. In the hands of this consecrated woman, money transformed the factory girl and seamstress into a missionary of the cross, and then multiplied her sixfold.—The Rev. Dr. Josiah Strong

The principle of missions is not enough, however, without the spirit of missions; a law of labor for souls will not suffice without the love for Christ and for souls, which is the life-secret of such labor. While the spirit of missions is still lacking, no machinery will be adequate; the men and money will still be shamefully inadequate, both to the extent of the field and the needs of the work, and to the number of disciples and the means at their disposal. Give us the spirit of missions, and the territory now scarcely approached will be at once surrounded, penetrated, possessed; and a new motive power will be supplied, that will transform cold duty into ecstatic delight.—Rev. A. T. Pierson, D. D.

The Rev. Josiah Strong says: "One-fifth of the wealth of the United States, or $8,728,100,000, was in the hands of church members in 1880. Of this great wealth one-sixteenth part of one per cent, or $1 out of $1,586, is given in a year for the salvation of seven or eight hundred million heathen. If Christians spent every cent of wages, salary and other income on themselves, and gave to missions one cent on the dollar of their real and personal property, their contributions would be $87,281,000, instead of $5,509,000. If the members of our Sunday-schools in America gave each one cent a Sabbath for missions, it would aggregate nearly as much as is now secured with endless writing and pleading and praying from our entire church membership. If each of these professed Christians give five cents, the price of one cigar, once a week, it would amount in a year to $26,000,000. If each gave one cent every day to that which he professes is the object of his life, the building of the kingdom, it would amount to $36,500,000. Seventy business men of New York subscribed $1,120,000, or $20,000 each, toward the Metropolitan Opera House in that city, which was completed two years ago, and this without receiving or expecting pecuniary return. Where are the seventy men who will give one-half that amount to home missions? Is the love of the Italian opera a more powerful motive than love of country, love of souls, and love of Christ?

"It is commonly agreed that the annual liquor bill of the nation is $900,000,000. As comparatively few women and children use intoxicating drinks, and many men do not, we may safely assume that the most of that amount is paid by one-fifth of the population. That is, in 1880, 10,000,000 people paid $900,000,000 for liquors, and the same number of professed Christians gave $5,500,000 for missions. Anyone that did not know better might naturally infer that one class loves beer and whiskey better than the other loves souls."

The old established house of E. Heath have taken possession of their new and elegant quarters, No. 116 Camp street. The improvements made for the handling of their large stock of mattings, wall paper and general house-furnishing and trimming goods are convenient and, without exaggeration, elaborate. No expense has been spared by Mr. Heath, and the result has been to give to the public a first-class establishment of which any city might be proud.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 125 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

A home missionary was asked the cause of his poverty. "Principally," said he, with a twinkle in his eye, "because I have so often preached without notes."

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in this sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. TUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. SANDY, M. D.

A LIST OF OUR PRESIDENTS.

Come, young folks all, and learn my rhyme
Writ like the ones of olden time.
For linked together, name to name,
The whole a surer place will claim;
And firmly in your mind shall stand
The names of those who've ruled our land:
A noble list: George Washington,
John Adams, Thomas Jefferson,
James Madison and James Monroe,
John Quincy Adams—and below
Comes Andrew Jackson in his turn;
Martin Van Buren next we learn.
Then William Henry Harrison
Whom soon John Tyler followed on.
And after Tyler, James K. Polk;
Then Zachary Taylor ruled the folk
Till death. Then Millard Fillmore came;
And Franklin Pierce we next must name,
And James Buchanan then appears,
Then Abraham Lincoln through those years
Of war. And when his life was lost
'Twas Andrew Jackson filled his post,
Then U. S. Grant and R. B. Hayes,
And James A. Garfield each had place,
And Chester Arthur—and my rhyme
Ends now in Grover Cleveland's time.

—Wide Awake.

Dear Little Nieces and Nephews: After I had finished my morning's task, and got the baby down to sleep again, I was sitting on the cool front gallery reading the "dear old ADVOCATE," and wondering if I could possibly write you an interesting letter, and thinking of so many things I could talk about if I could see you. I heard a noise from a chicken, and, looking up, I saw it trying to kill a snake; but the horrid thing got away and hid in the violet bed! "Ah!" thought I," the 'serpent among the flowers.'" Can you not draw a lesson from that! How many times have papa and mamma trusted you to indulge in some little pleasures in which to go so far, and no further, would be no harm; but you yielded to the temptation to go too far (just for a little fun) though you knew it to be wrong? Those temptations are the serpents among the flowers of pleasure. Be careful, my dears, or they will sting you fearfully.

I wonder how many of you are going to really deny yourselves of something during this week for the sake of missions? We were talking it over here the other day, and I was explaining the object to the children, and we were trying to decide what we could do without. C. says: "Well, we don't have much now! Besides, I haven't any money!" G.—"Well, I've got a nickel; but I promised mamma if she would give it to me, I wouldn't spend it!" U.—"I've got a nickle, and I'll give that." L.—"I haven't any money, and I don't know what I can do without, yet." But U. said: "Sister, how much will it take for you to go to —— and back?" "Sixty cents." "Well, stay at home, save that and give it." "Humph! that is this week, and not next?" Then I said we would all do our best, and if we could not give much money, we could pray, and give what we could in the right spirit. How many of you will report to the editor on a postal card the amount of your self-denial? That is, if he approves.

Yours lovingly,

AUNT FANNIE.

MR. EDITOR: As I see so many girls and boys writing to your valuable paper, I have concluded to write a letter myself. I have been going to school ever since February, to my cousin, Miss Alma Fulton. Our school will close in two weeks. Papa is going to hear Bro. R. A. Davis preach. He is our pastor this year. He preaches once a month; most always has a large congregation and is a splendid preacher. Our camp meeting will be in September. I will answer Josie Wyche's question: There are 773,592 words in the Bible. I will also answer Mary S. Hodge's question: Jesus changing water into wine at the marriage feast at Cana of Galilee is the first miracle. Papa takes your valuable paper. We all enjoy reading it very much. He said this morning he could not see how he could do without it. I remain, Your little friend,

LUCY C. HAMMETT.

CAMPTE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years of age. I am not going to school now, but my sister teaches me at home. I study reading, spelling, geography, arithmetic and writing. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Bro. Dyer is our superintendent, and Bro. Anders our minister. My grandma takes your paper, and I like to read the little letters. I will close by asking a question: Where and what is the longest verse in the Bible?

Your little friend,

BIRDIE HARELSON.

BATON ROUGE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: On account of old acquaintanceship I have been inclined to write a letter for the young people's column for some time; but since I am elected corresponding secretary for the Juvenile Missionary Society, at this place, it becomes my pleasing duty to write letters to the officials and organs of the missionary work, and on this I presume to write this brief sketch. I know you will be delighted to learn that those noble ladies, Mrs. Fullilove, Mrs. Foster, Miss Logan, Miss Paxton, and others of the lady officials of the Conference Missionary Society, held their annual meeting here, July 1, 1887, and by their zeal and entreaties enkindled in the hearts of the Ruston people a greater spirit of missionary work than has ever been known or felt among our people. During their sojourn Mrs. Fullilove and Miss Logan delivered lectures to the children on the subject of missions, and organized a juvenile auxiliary numbering thirty-six members. Our Christian lady managers—Mrs. J. A. Parker and Mrs. L. M. Kidd—meet with us regularly on Sunday evening, overlooking and aiding in our work. Our membership has increased to sixty, and we hope to reach one hundred in a short time. We have reading, recitations, music, and prayer at our weekly meetings, and frequent encouraging talks from our senior visitors. Our much-loved pastor, the Rev. J. A. Parker, has pledged himself to aid us in every manner possible by his presence, prayers, and money if need be. We hope to grow stronger and better as we grow older. Pray for us.

Your little friend,

BLANCHE A. M'CORMICK.

RUSTON, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: We are two little sisters aged eleven and nine. We live in Rodney, a small town on the grand old Mississippi river. We live with our grandma. She has taken the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for seven long years, and since we have learned to read, we love to read it, especially the little folks' letters. We both belong to the missionary society. We have about forty members enrolled. We gave an entertainment on the twenty-eighth of June, and had recitations, tableaux and songs. One of the best pieces was the Ten Virgins—five foolish and five wise. Oh! it was a solemn thing to hear the foolish pleading with the wise for entrance into the pearly gates, where they had been shut out by their slothfulness. Oh! when that great day comes, we hope none of us will be among the foolish. We realized twenty-five dollars after all expenses were paid. Oh! if there was more societies in the land. We think it so nice to be able to help the perishing nations in the far-off corners of the earth. Can any of the little folks tell us where in the Bible the words "twelve thousand" are contained in one verse three times? We hope to see our letter published soon. We are two little Methodist girls,

The Little Boot Black.

A hundred years ago there lived a little boy in Oxford, England, whose business it was to clean the boots of the students of the famous university there. He was poor, but bright and smart.

Well, this lad, whose name was George, grew rapidly in favor with the students. His prompt and hearty way of doing things, his industrious habits and faithful deeds, won their admiration. They saw in him the promise of a noble man; and they proposed to teach him a little every day. Eager to learn, George accepted their proposition; and he soon surprised his teachers by his rapid progress. "A boy who can blacken boots well can study well," said one of the students. "Keen as a brier," said another, "and pluck enough to make a hero."

But we can not stop to tell of his patience and perseverance. He went on, step by step, just as the song goes—"One step and then another," until he became a man—a learned and eloquent man, who preached the gospel to admiring thousands. The little boot black became the renowned pulpit orator, George Whitfield.—Christian Neighbor.

Household.

A Bit of Advice.

I caught myself wondering today if all girls have their bags and baskets of darning-cotton and yarn near at hand, neatly arranged, well filled, and ready for action; and if, when the stockings are brought from the wash, the heels and toes are duly examined, and holes, which will be small if the weekly inquiry is rightly followed, are nicely darned with the fine weaving good darning is? If this is so, it is a comfortable comfort, one the family will quickly notice and miss if suspended.

The very mention of darning stockings will cause some girls to strike an attitude of dismay; but there can be nothing alarming in the act or the fact, if viewed in the light of reason and a little sense. To begin, all know who have ever worn stockings, "holey," that hole spelt with a "w," is decidedly preferable; also that well-cared-for hose will last much longer than that neglected. One daughter of the family will find, if she makes it her weekly practice to faithfully look over each pair belonging to the members, it will become much less of a task than she may suppose, when she sees the big holes of the hastily and seldom mended. To keep the darning basket well supplied and well appointed, will grow to become good practice. It will train her in a practical way, that will not come amiss in the work of life. Then the discipline of nicely and patiently doing the plain, homely work will be a gain, beside the skill of needle acquired. Added to this comes the pleasure and economy of study foot-wear, and last but not least, it lifts a decided burden from the shoulders of mother. If a daughter should start up of herself and take the family stockings as a share of her work, the mother's face would brighten more than I can tell. She would think of it often and remember it long, and when the daughter has left the home-nest and settled for herself in a broader sphere, it will still be repeated and told of her.

Let some of the useless fancy-work slide. What does it amount to in a short time? Fashion gone by, dust well settled, and presently banished. Such is the price often paid for hours and hours of precious time and tedious labor. Darn the stockings and help your mother. You will be rewarded oftener than you imagine, and a prick upon the finger now and then from a darning-needle is no worse than from a worsted needle, and the strain on the eyesight is much less than in most of the worsted patterns. But comfort, industry, and skill, all together, are not equal to the pleasure and happiness such a course will give your mother, nor to the smiles she will give you. Try it.

"Hundreds of dewdrops to greet the dawn,
Hundreds of bees to sip the clover,
Hundreds of butterflies on the lawn,
But only one mother, the whole world over."

—Christian at Work.

THE FIRESIDE SAINT.—Doubtless the memory of each one of us will furnish the picture of some member of a family, whose very presence seemed to shed happiness; a daughter, perhaps, whose light step even in the distance irradiated every one's countenance. What was the secret of such a one's power? What had she done? Absolutely nothing but radiant smiles, beaming good humor, the tact of doing what every one wanted, told that she had gotten out of self and learned to think of others; so that at one time it showed itself in deprecating the quarrel which lowering brows and raised tones already showed to be impending, by sweet words; at another, by smoothing an invalid's pillow; at another by humoring and softening a father who had returned weary and ill-tempered from the irritating cares of business. None but she saw those things, none but a loving heart could see. That was the secret of her heavenly power.—Rev. F. Frederick Robertson.

And the cane-seated chairs, not a spot need be left on them if on a bright sunny day each chair is thoroughly washed and the wood saturated with hot water and dried in the open air and sun. Not only will the chairs look better, but they will last much longer, as in drying the wood will swell and tightens where it joins, and the chair be as firm as when new.

Martyrs to Headache

Seek relief in vain, until they begin to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Then they regret the years of suffering they might have escaped had they tried this remedy earlier. The trouble was constitutional not local; and, until Ayer's Sarsaparilla did its effective work, as an Alterative and Blood Purifier, they were compelled to suffer.

The wife of Samuel Page, 21 Austin st., Lowell, Mass., was, for a long time, subject to severe headaches, the result of stomach and liver disorders. A perfect cure has been effected by Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frank Roberts, 727 Washington st., Boston, says that he formerly had terrible headaches, and until he took Ayer's Sarsaparilla, never found any medicine that would give Permanent Relief.

"Every Spring, for years," writes Lizzie W. DeVean, 262 Fifteenth st., Brooklyn, N. Y., "I have had intolerable headaches. I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla last March, and have not had a headache since that time."

"I suffered from headache, indigestion, and debility, and was hardly able to drag myself about the house," writes Mrs. M. M. Lewis, of A st., Lowell, Mass. "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has worked a marvelous change in my case. I now feel strong and well as ever."

Jonas Garman, Esq., of Lykins, Pa., writes: "For years I have suffered dreadfully, every Spring, from headache, caused by impurity of the blood and biliousness. It seemed for days and weeks that my head would split open. Nothing relieved me till I took Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has cured me completely."

When Mrs. Genevra Belanger, of 24 Bridge st., Springfield, Mass., began to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, she had suffered for some years from a serious affection of the kidneys. Every Spring, also, she was afflicted with headache, loss of appetite, and indigestion. A friend persuaded her to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which benefited her wonderfully. Her health is now perfect. DEGROFFENRIED—Departed this life, July 4, 1887, near Brooksville, Noxubee county, Miss., MRS. REBECCA A. DEGROFFENRIED. Sister Degroffenried was born in Kemper county, Miss., January 10, 1835; was married to T. B. S. Degraffenried, February 10, 1858; professed religion and joined the Baptist Church, in 1856, near Chuqualak, Noxubee county, Miss.; moved to Sumpter county, Ala., 1860, and joined the Methodist Church the same year. In 1872 the family, having moved to Noxubee county, Sister Degroffenried connected herself with the church at Sonle Chapel, of which she lived a faithful and devoted member till called above. She dearly loved her church and was always ready to do anything in advance its interests. She had been deprived of church privileges for a year, or more, owing to bad health.

In her the pastor always found a true friend. She loved the church. She dearly loved children. Though she was not blessed with any of her own, yet she never seemed happier than when listening to their prattle or attending to their wants. She was a good neighbor, a true and devoted friend. When there was sickness in her neighborhood she was always ready to lend all in her power to alleviate the suffering, going and ministering with her own hands to their wants. She was a model wife, a good friend, a Christian with all its Christian graces—faith, hope, and charity—with patience and humility. She preferred a good name rather than riches, and endeavored to let her light shine continuously before others. Her faith was strong and steady, but it was more in deed than in word—more in principle than in profession.

E. H. CAGY.

CASEY—MRS. ELIZABETH J. CASEY died in New Orleans, June 12, 1887. She was born December 2, 1813; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 1857; was happily married, October 16, 1873. Sister Casey was a great sufferer the last six months of her life, but bore it with Christian patience and submission. A Christ-like spirit marked distinctly the general tenor of her suffering days. A devoted husband and attentive sister did all in their power to give relief to their suffering loved one. Her husband was with her in New Orleans, seeking the best medical aid when the final dissolution came, and brought her back to her home in Le Flore county, Miss., where that suffering body was laid away, surrounded with many loved ones, to rest until the resurrection morn.

We have reasons for saying Sister Casey was a true and tried wife, and a loving and devoted mother. She was the magnet around which the father and six children cluistered, for in her they always found a sympathizing friend. If sorrows were to be borne, the husband felt she was more than willing to bear her part. She seemed to love her children with a peculiar devotion, never seeming willing to give up the soft, gentle attentions to the older ones. So she "rests from her labors and suffering." She can not come to us, but we can go to her. Will we?

W. S. SHIPMAN, P. C.

OTT—MRS. MARGARET ANN TATE, widow of Charles Ott, Esq., and daughter of Thomas and Ingabu Tate, was born June 20, 1813, in Clarksburg, Va., and died June 7, 1887, in Washington parish, La. She was taken sick Friday morning, June 3, and her affectionate children, two physicians and myself did all that could be done to "lengthen out the brittle thread;" but on Tuesday following, at half-past four o'clock, the angels came and bore her spotless soul to fairer worlds on high. Her remains were buried near the old home, in a lovely grove of oaks, where she will peacefully await the resurrection morn. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Buley, surrounded by a concourse of bereaved relatives and friends.

She was a consistent member of the Baptist Church, a pure-spirited Christian, with a great influence for good. She was not narrow and selfish in her religion, but loved all Christians. One of the last acts of her life was to contribute of her substance to the Methodist Church. The last sermon she ever heard was preached by our presiding elder, Rev. J. M. Weems, at our second quarterly meeting, and she expressed herself as having enjoyed it very much. She lived well, and therefore, died well.

MISS. MADIE TATE.

SULLIVAN—MILTON GALLOWAY, son of Rev. William M. and Malicia G. Sullivan, was born April 20, 1887, and died July 15, 1887, aged two months and twenty-two days. His stay on earth was short, but pleasant to loved ones. His departure was grievous to those who loved him most. Jesus said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

E. A. F.

HENSLEY—WILLIAM S. HENSLEY, adopted son of E. A. and L. A. Dennis, died suddenly, on July 3, 1887, at their home in Newton county, Miss. Little Willie only lived six months to gladden his earthly home, and then went to dwell with him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

H. R. CALDWELL.

NELSON—LESTER MARVIN, youngest son of John M. and Virginia O. Nelson, died, near Rocky Springs, Miss., July 1, 1887, aged two years and eight months. May the transfer of little Marvin cause all the remaining members of the family to strive the harder to work out their own salvation!

H. D. HOWELL.

BRIDGER—ROBERT JOHNNY, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Bridger, died in Brandywine, Miss., July 5. The Lord said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

A FRIEND.

ATHLETICS AS A DISCIPLINE OF THE WILL.—All physical exercises, however pleasant at first, tend to become irksome and distasteful when pursued systematically day after day; but the very energy that one is obliged to put forth in overcoming this distaste, is a wholesome discipline. Having recognized the fact that physical exercise is necessary, and that the exercise is best which meets one's physical needs, a man should pursue it with all the energy and vigor that he is capable of throwing into any other duty or line of conduct. By so doing, the training of the will is added to the training of the body, and the lesson learned in abnegation and self-mastery contributes the most important elements to the formation of character. Add to these attainments a correct method of working and a healthy habit of living, and a young man will have the best kind of preparatory training for the business of life.

The undergoing of present hardships for the sake of future gain is one of the most encouraging features connected with athletic sports and games. That the participants may be in the best physical condition at the day of the contests, they are obliged to undergo a long and arduous course of training, denying themselves luxuries, foregoing pleasures, and holding themselves down to a rigid system of mechanical exercises for an ultimate object—the winning of a foot race, boat race or a ball game. If one man in a hundred will practice self-denial and undergo hardship in order to win a prize in a fleeting pastime, is it not an insult to the remaining ninety-nine to assume that they have not sufficient morale to make a similar effort in preparing to win the higher prize of life.—Prof. D. A. Sargent, in Scribner's Magazine.

Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets Possess Powerful Potency, Pass Painlessly, Promote Physical Prosperity.

TIMELY GRACE.—With new responsibility comes new grace. When God had met Moses in Pisgah, and kissed him to sleep, and buried him in the valley over Beth-peor, then, and not till then, was it said, "Joshua, the son of Nun, was full of the spirit of wisdom, for Moses had laid his hands upon him."

Elisha was a great and good man when he followed his plow in the valley of the Jordan, and when, as the servant of Elijah, he ministered to that mighty prophet for eight eventful years, but he never received the grace which made him distinguished till "his master was taken from his head." When Elijah seated himself in the fiery chariot, and was about to be carried to heaven on the wings of the whirlwind, he dropped his mantle at the feet of Elisha, to indicate that he was now to become the master prophet in Israel; but when Elisha inherited the mantle and office of Elijah, God at the same time endued him with a double portion of Elijah's spirit.—Rev. T. C. Read.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now so Perfectly Made That No One Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.

It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.

It restores the functions of the tear passages.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.

It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.

Mr. W. DOANE, our Optician, has made a specialty of selecting and inserting them.

Brother Steadypull.

When the Bishop read off the name of Bro. Steadypull for ——— charge, his heart suddenly sank within him. He felt the charge was plenty good enough for him; in fact, a little above his grade. But Bro. Rocket was preacher in charge last year, and though report said he had rather petered out near the close of the year, yet he was accounted a brilliant man; and Steadypull was not brilliant, and he knew it. The people were of like opinion after he had finished his first sermon. He gave them a plain gospel message, with no flourish of trumpets, and no promises of great things. The "outsiders" nudged each other, as much as to say, "Well, there's not much style about him, anyway." The church members did not say much, only that the brother seemed to have no time for nonsense nor rhetorical flourishes, and was terribly in earnest. Rocket had left him the inheritance of many empty seats, and for a time they remained empty. Three months pass—empty seats still look lonesome. Six months—beginning to fill up, and signs of a revival. Nine months—sanctuary full, fifty received into the church as partial result of steady pastoral pulling; social and financial affairs of the church growing finely. Ten months—people getting uneasy lest Bro. Steadypull shall be wanted to follow the brilliant Rocket, and call another church together. No cause for fear though, for the "elder" knows the blessed man pulls better the second year, and best the third. Do you imagine we have written of a fictitious character? Not so. Such a man lives, moves and has his being not a thousand miles from this sanctum, and we have given you a bit of actual church history.—Michigan Advocate.

How Some Lives Have Been Extended.

In a physician's office in Philadelphia are filed numerous letters with expressions like these:

"My mother and self have been greatly benefited by the use of your Compound Oxygen. It has undoubtedly preserved and prolonged her life these two years past." "I have improved in health using your Compound Oxygen. I can ride without much fatigue. As I am in my eightieth year, I suppose I can not expect to be entirely relieved." "It has almost made a new man of me at nearly three score and ten." "I will be eighty-two years old the fifth day of next November. The dropsy has left me, and my legs are all right. Every one that sees me says, 'How well you look!' I tell them Compound Oxygen saved my life and cured me." For a full explanation of how such marvels are possible, write for brochure, which they send free, to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

THE CRY OF THE PERISHING.—A beautiful incident is told of a little child upon a lately wrecked steamer. The boats were taking the passengers away as fast as they could, every one crowding forward intent on his own salvation. One after another was passed down, while the neglected child stood waiting for her turn. The vessel rocked to and fro, on the eve of going to the bottom. Seeing no chance of escape, the little one stretched out her hands, and cried, "Save me next." It is a cry that ought to go up from millions of hearts. The bark of life will go down some day, and if we are not saved in Christ, we must be eternally lost. It is a cry that those of us who are saved might hear on every hand.

How to Select a Wife.

Good health, good morals, good sense and good temper, are the four essentials for a good wife. These are the indispensables. After them come the minor advantages of good looks, accomplishments, family position, etc. With the first four, married life will be comfortable and happy. Lacking either, it will be in more or less degree a failure. Upon good health depends largely good temper and good looks, and to some extent good sense also, as the best mind must be effected more or less by the weaknesses and whims attendant on frail health. Young man, if your wife is falling into a state of invalidism, first of all things try to restore her health. If she is troubled with debilitating female weaknesses, buy Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It will cure her.

There is everything in a spirit of fair play. It disarms ill-temper. Some people who are very ugly so long as you are slightly so, are "too sweet for anything" as soon as you show sweetness and light. Most of us don't want things half so much as we thought we did the moment we can have them for the choosing. Your way isn't half so sweet the moment you can have it. Abram was a close student of human nature. He got all he wanted by not selfishly wanting anything. To him that gives, a lot more is added. There is almost no quarrel but one man can mend if he sets about it with Abram's spirit.—Chr. Union.

The Grant Memoirs.

The following statistics in regard to the printing of General Grant's Memoirs were recently read by Mr. S. L. Clemens (Mark Twain) before the annual reunion of the Army and Navy Club of Connecticut:

"In binding the cloth books there were 44,259 square yards of cloth used, or, if put in one piece, it would make a strip one yard wide and 25 1-5 miles long. The gold used in stamping lettering, etc., on all styles of binding, if coined, would make $15,446 47. The price paid the gold-beaters for this gold was $21,639 50. There were 276 barrels of binder paste used, weighing about 69,000 pounds. There were 27,892 sheepskins used, 7,221 goatskins, and 138 calfskins. As none of these skins were split, it represents, of course, the killing of an equal number of animals. There were about 302,310 reams of paper used in the printing, which weighed about 1,813,880 pounds, or 806½ tons. This, put into one piece, would make a strip two feet wide and 1,682⅛ miles long. If the books were piled up in a row, the narrowest way—that is, the same as they would stand in a bookcase—it would take a shelf 19½ miles long to hold them. If the pages of the books were joined together, it would make a strip of paper 6 inches wide and 6,729½ miles long. Forty-one steam presses were working day and night; over 1,000 operatives were employed, and over 9,000 agents engaged in distributing the book. To these latter—who were mainly old soldiers and the widows of soldiers—was paid in commissions for selling the book considerably more than $1,000,000 in cash."

Dear Sir: I was agent for the sale of your Antidote for Malaria at Elisabethtown, Ky., when chills were almost universal every season. The medicine cured when all else failed. It was my habit to say that I could live in a frog pond without danger to myself, but that conceit has been taken out of me, for last fall I had a violent attack of chills. I remembered the Antidote, procured a bottle, and was cured immediately. I now say to every one suffering from Malaria, don't fool with quinine; it may be good, but Schallenberger's is better, and don't make you deaf, either.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Mr. Blaine and family are in Ireland.

The "Glenn Educational Bill," introduced into the Georgia Legislature, and passed by the Lower House, has created intense excitement North.

Great disaster has been caused by the forest fires in the West. Owing to the long-continued drouth, water can not be obtained. Everything is suffering for it, and great loss has been sustained throughout Wisconsin, Michigan and Illinois.

The President will visit Memphis, Tenn., during his Southern and Western tour.

The American Photographers' Association is now in session in Chicago.

On account of the drouth, a milk famine is predicted for Illinois.

John Clay, the only remaining son of Henry Clay, died at his home, near Lexington, Ky. He possessed but few of the characteristics of his illustrious father.

A grand reunion of Confederate soldiers was held, this week, in Grenada, Miss.

A fearful disaster occurred on the Peoria, Toledo and Western railroad, August 11. A heavily laden excursion train, bound for Niagara Falls, fell through a burning bridge and was ground to splinters. More than 100 persons killed, and 500 wounded.

The rice crop in Lower Carolina has been almost destroyed by the freshets of a week ago.

Mr. Carlisle, of New Orleans, is a candidate for the Bolivian Mission.

The yellow fever epidemic is dying out in Key West.

Amite county, Miss., has been carried by the prohibitionists.

The President has declined to visit Little Rock, and, unless the route is changed, there is a very slim prospect of his coming to New Orleans.

It is reported that Hammond, of Georgia, will succeed Secretary Lamar.

An American schooner was sunk in the Gulf of St. Lawrence by a shot from the guns of a Canadian cruiser. This story is, however, discredited by the Dominion Fishery Department.

FOREIGN.

Great Britain has demanded of France the evacuation of the New Hebrides. This France refused, until she should be informed of the nature of England's policy in regard to Egypt, and as to the neutralization of the Suez Canal.

Prince Ferdinand has been permitted to retire from the Austrian Army.

The cholera is prevalent in Naples, Messina, Syracuse and Malta.

A number of Tory peers threaten to reject the amendments to the Land Bill introduced into the House of Commons, especially the clause providing for a revision of judicial rents. The attitude of these lords has paralyzed the Cabinet's action in further amending the Land Bill to satisfy the Parnellites.

The new Captain General of Cuba, Salamanca, has become involved in a quarrel. Premier Sagasta is trying to effect a reconciliation between Salamanca and Balogner, the Minister of the Colonies.

Bismarck has dispatched his thanks to Gottlugen, for placing his bust in the university.

Prince Ferdinand has arranged to land and receive addresses as the new ruler of Bulgaria at all but Garvan ports between Orsora and Rustchuk.

Prince Krapotkine protests against France's enthusiasm for M. Katkoff.

The speech made by Salisbury at the Lord Mayor's banquet is held to foreshadow the proclamation of the Irish National League.

The firm of Kudrin and Company, of St. Petersburg, has equipped and started for Central Asia an expedition which will establish cotton plantations and make an analysis of the soil of Turkestan and the Transcaspian territories.

The French press is urging the government to ally itself more closely with Russia, so as to be enabled to despise the Central European alliance.

Prince Ferdinand believes that the opposition of the powers to his acceptance of the Bulgarian throne is directed solely to the manner of his election.

The French agents in Bulgaria have been instructed to avoid all intercourse with Prince Ferdinand and his government.

An arrangement has been effected for the protection of the neutrality of the Suez Canal.

While in Ireland the Lord Mayor tendered Mr. Blaine a banquet. Having arranged to leave for the Continent, Mr. Blaine regretfully declines the honor.

Prince Ferdinand has been installed as the ruler of Bulgaria. The people received him enthusiastically. It is reported that Turkey's attitude is becoming more friendly. The legality of his election has been affirmed by an identical vote of England, Austria and Italy.

Mr. Parnell has had a relapse. When the Land Bill dispute has been settled, he will then go to Ireland to spend the recess.

BOOKS.

CHRIST IN THE CAMP; OR, RELIGION IN LEE'S ARMY. By Rev. J. William Jones, D. D.

This book is introduced to the reader by Bishop Granbery. It is a history of the efforts of the churches to afford religious instruction and gospel preaching to the soldiers of the Army of Northern Virginia during the war. It is a most interesting record, and shows that the religion of Jesus is adapted to meet the wants and assuage the miseries and buoy up the hopes of men in military life. Dr. Jones has given us a good history, and B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., have put it in good shape.

ONLY ME. By Thomas L. Baily, D. D. Lothrop Company, Boston. Price, $1 25. For sale by Eyrich, Canal street.

It is a book for boys, and deals with some phases of boy-life unknown at the present day, but common half a century ago, when many a lad of poor and struggling parents was "bound out" to serve "until twenty-one." It shows that energy, honesty and civility bring, in the end, success. It is especially intended for the Sunday-school library.

REAL FAIRY FOLKS; EXPLORATIONS IN THE WORLD OF ATOMS. By Lucy A. Rider. D. Lothrop Company, Boston. Price, $1 50. For sale by Eyrich, Canal street.

This book is true to chemical facts and principle. It treats, in a very attractive way to the young, of the wonders of chemistry. It is an honest effort to make children love that beautiful science.

Children Starving to Death

On account of their inability to digest food, will find almost marvelous food and remedy in Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Very palatable and easily digested. Dr. S. W. COHEN, of Waco, Texas, says: "I have used your Emulsion in infantile wasting with good results. It not only restores wasted tissues, but gives strength and increases the appetite. I am glad to use such a reliable article."

Just as we go to press we received the following note from Bro. Lewis:

MR. EDITOR: Rev. J. L. Forsythe, of the Mississippi Conference, is very low. It is hardly expected that he will live through the night. But his faith is unwavering, and the gospel he has preached for more than fifty years is quite sufficient to sustain him in this trying hour. Let the church he has served so long and so well remember his stricken family in their great sorrow. W. B. LEWIS.

Biliousness and Sick Headache are cured by the delightful preparation known as Tarrant's Seltzer Aperient. There is not a drug store from the Atlantic to the Pacific, nor from the Lakes to the Gulf that does not keep a large stock of this old and valuable medicine. A journey should never be undertaken without a bottle being carried in one's valise. In fact, it ought to be in the houses of those who don't travel, for time and experience have proved it to be one of the most valuable family remedies extant. The head office is in N. Y. City.—N. O. Picayune.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

HUGH JAMIESON, JR., Publisher.

Lectures will begin at the Memphis Hospital Medical College, on the first Monday in October. Send for catalogue.

THE BLESSED BROOD.

Gather them close to your loving heart;
Cradle them close to your breast;
They will soon enough leave your brooding care,
Soon enough ascend youth's topmost stair—
Little ones to the nest.

Fret not that the children's hearts are gay,
That their restless feet will run;
There may come a time to the by-and-by
When you'll sit in your lonely room and sigh
For a sound of childish fun;

When you'll long for a repetition sweet,
That sounded through each room,
Of "Mother! mother!" the dear love-calls
That will echo long through the silent halls,
And add to their stately gloom.

There may come a time when you'll long to hear
The eager, boyish tread,
The tuneless whistle, the clear, shrill shout,
The busy bustle in and out,
And pattering overhead.

When the boys and girls are all grown up
And scattered far and wide,
Or gone to the undiscovered shore
Where youth and age come nevermore,
You will miss them from your side.

Then gather them to your loving heart;
Cradle them on your breast;
They will soon enough leave your brooding care,
Soon enough ascend youth's topmost stair—
Little ones in the nest.

Some Early Methodist History.

BY REV. D. W. MITCHELL.

While recently visiting the Seashore Camp Meeting, I met with one of those rare, stalwart pioneer Methodists. One who had known him long, said to me: "Bro. Evans is a solid, practical servant of Christ, who has been doing valiant service for his Master on this coast since boyhood."

Finding he had been acquainted with the birth and growth of Methodism, I thought its history too valuable to be unrecorded, and so I penciled down his statements concerning same as follows:

He stated that his father, Thomas Evans, moved from Marion District, South Carolina, in about 1808, settling near old St. Stephen's, on the Tombigby river. From there he removed to Chickasawhay, Green county, Mississippi Territory, where his son Westley was born, September 16, 1818.

"My father now settled in Lawrence county, on the eastern side of Pearl river, opposite Monticello.

"I recollect, among my earliest reminiscences, my father's removal to Harrison county, Miss., (then Hancock) near Red Creek, there being then no preaching-point nearer than fifty miles, and but two other Methodist families in the vicinity, who resided ten or twelve miles below on Red Creek. Their names were Ramsey and Holder.

"The settlements on Red Creek were ten or twelve miles apart, and consisted of from two to five families. Occasionally itinerant ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, whose acquaintance my father had made while residing in Lawrence county, would stray down to this region and preach. Among these were the pioneer preachers, Miles Harper and his brother, Edward Harper.

"After a few years, as a result of these visits, a large circuit was formed from Columbia, on Pearl river, extending southward to Pearlington, and eastward nearly to the State line, while its northern limit was up Leaf river, following the old military trace.

"I think," continued Mr. Evans, "that the first preacher in charge of this circuit was James Applewhite. This district continued to be served by preachers for several years, after which the circuit was divided, throwing out a large portion of the southern line of the circuit.

"My father removed, about this time (1831), to his place on Biloxi river, where he built a water sawmill, which is said to be the first of its kind in this region, there having been but one within the limits of Harrison county, which was constructed, on the west side of Wolfe river, by a French settler. This mill supplied the lumber for the first frame buildings—such as houses, stores and hotels—in Biloxi. The edifices erected previously by the French were constructed of dirt and stick.

"In my boyhood days I often came to Biloxi, and I remember that there were numerous settlers on the Gulf coast, among whom were Maunsell White, Burns, Peter de Buys, and others.

"The lumber was mainly rafted from the mill to Biloxi. Occasionally a schooner-load was shipped to Bay St. Louis, there being then few schooners on that coast. For several years there was no preaching along the coast, save occasionally at my father's mill on Biloxi river.

"This continued until the separation of Hancock from Harrison county, about which time I was licensed to exhort by Rev. Mr. Ramsey, who came to my father's to hold a two days' meeting and organize a church, which was the first Methodist Church established near or on the coast. After two or three years the work gradually extended into Mississippi City and Biloxi. At the former place the citizens worshiped in the frame building used as a court-house, and built for the office of the Brandon railroad. The place of worship in Biloxi was a small vacant private house.

"The settlement of Mississippi resulted in the influx of an intelligent, but irreligious people, interested in the railroad movement, while that of Biloxi continued to partake of the nature of the first settlers brought from France by Iberville and Bienville, many of whose descendants still reside there.

"This Methodist movement had continued gradually progressing until incomers had made various changes along the Gulf coast, resulting in the permanent circuits on the sea coast of Harrison county, while north of this the former circuit has become a prosperous circuit, with five regular appointments, besides several wayside preaching stations, and a large permanent camp ground, known as Farmer Camp Ground, which is located on Farmer Creek, about two miles north of Big Biloxi. Here annually are large assemblies, and during the four meetings of its existence there have been scores of conversions and numerous accessions to the church, while the entire religious sentiment of the community has been signally elevated.

"The Rev. Charles Gillespie was preacher in charge of the circuit at the time of its organization. He was succeeded by Rev. T. Price, and the latter by Bro. Rockers, and he by Rev. Relius Cox, the present incumbent."

Rev. Mr. Evans, while not in the itinerancy, has served in this work at its various exigencies for five or six years, and is now preaching as an itinerant local preacher, filling up each Sabbath with an appointment. He was licensed when about twenty years of age, and has been constantly engaged for forty-eight years, having, during this time, enjoyed the blessing of God as to health and spirituality, and promises to have many years to his God in this broad field.

Many years ago, when Rev. W. G. Evans, then quite a youth, began his ministry, a noted infidel, born of Methodist parents, who resided on this coast, and following the Gulf as captain of a vessel, said that "the devil had laid an egg on this Gulf coast as big as a mountain, and that little Westley Evans would never be able to turn it over." "But," said Rev. Mr. Evans, "when I saw Bishop Keener, Dr. John Matthews, Rev. Dr. Andrews and several other Methodist preachers camping here in the summer of 1871, in canvas tents, under this forest, and preaching the gospel, I thanked the Lord that the powers of God would turn over this egg infidelity had assembled."

Here is something on a line of thought which has several times been placed before our readers. We really believe that this subject is of vital importance to our church schools. We are glad to give our readers this graduating address, copied from Zion's Herald.

The Study of the Bible as an English Classic.

BY H. E. PEABODY.

It is my purpose here to advocate as a college study a classic which is more universally read, quoted and alluded to than any other book in the language. I mean the English Bible. Its worth as a religious guide, or as the basis of theological learning, I shall not consider, but as a classic of our literature I believe its study to be a proper part of a liberal education. The vast majority of students, whose vocation does not lead them to a study of the Bible, should have an opportunity of learning to know their Bible at least as well as they know their Shakespeare. And yet is it not true that men have abundant opportunity after graduation to become familiar with this hand-book of English-speaking peoples? It is assuredly true; but that these opportunities are not improved, is equally true. The Bible is subjected to more desultory skimming, and is favored with less vigorous study, than any other classic in the language.

What, then, are the causes why the Bible has come into this anomalous position? The first is, that reverence tends to prevent an object of worship from being an object of investigation and criticism. This is a natural state of mind, though not a desirable, and certainly not a necessary, one; for that a thing is beyond the understanding by no means implies that it is contrary to the understanding. Another cause is that since the Bible is a book that lives in men's minds and hearts, its study often leads to sectarianism and dispute.

The first of these causes careful thought should cancel. The second will be obviated by having in the instructor a man who will lead the study to a scholarly consideration of that literary worth which all men of any religion or no religion are forced to recognize. Again, repetition has dulled our ears to appreciation of the beauties of the Bible before our minds were old enough to comprehend them, so that we often pass them by unheeded; but to a critical, appreciative reader, the Bible's literary strength and excellence are at once apparent.

Our English Bible was translated in much the same spirit in which it was written, by men full of religious enthusiasm and profound conviction of the importance of their work. Our authorized version was made with but few changes from the translations of Tyndal and Coverdale, who wrote, it may be said, with the pen in one hand and the sword in the other, with their lives often in danger for the service they were doing for their countrymen; so that our Bible retains its original vigor and has "the ring of a set of martyrs translating a set of prophets." The possession of this spirit, together with the accuracy of the translation from its great original, give it its place as one of the foremost of English classics, and perhaps the purest example of the English language in existence.

A famous Catholic divine of England declared that the uncommon beauty and marvelous English of the Protestant Bible had been one of the strongholds of heresy among his countrymen. "It lives on the ear," said he, "like a music which can never be forgotten, like the sound of church bells which the convert hardly knows how he can forego. Its felicities often seem to be almost things rather than mere words." English-speaking peoples have felt the spell of its power and beauty, and its influence over our language has been, and is, most profound. For over two hundred years the English language has conformed to the biblical mode of expression, and certain forms of speech have at times become almost obsolete, only to be called back into use by their presence on its living pages.

The Hebrew Scriptures occupy a place in literature as distinct as the place of the Hebrew nation in history. They mirror, by their strong simplicity and their deep and passionate earnestness, the character of this strange people. The poetry of the Hebrews contains "the most ancient coherent record of the human mind and heart." It sprang from simple minds, but these minds were animated by the sublimest emotions that can stir the human soul. Its lines are full of strong, majestic beauty, and need not the elaboration of art to make them inspiring. The poetry of Job sings of the God of nature with a simple grandeur which no language can excel. He sings of the day when the foundations of the earth were laid, when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy; when God made the cloud the garment of the new-born sea, and thick darkness a swaddling-band for it. And listen to the triumphant song of Moses: "Sing unto the Lord, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea. The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake, I will divide the spoil. Thou didst blow with thy wind, the sea covered them, they sank as lead in the mighty waters. Who is like unto thee, O Lord, glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders?" And what shall I say more, for time would fail me to tell of the sublimity of the songs of Miriam, and of Deborah, and of Barak, of the grandeur and pathos of the Psalms, of the rich and fervent eloquence of the prophets.

The beauty of the New Testament is of another kind. The ragged picturesqueness is gone, but there is greater clearness and directness. The beautiful simplicity of the gospel narratives and the force of the teachings of Jesus are only slighted because of the overshadowing importance of the truths which they convey. The powerful arguments and glowing oratory of Paul present the thoughts of a great mind; of a man inspired with a noble purpose and gifted with a wealth of language almost unequaled.

And while the Bible's force and elegance of expression claim for it high honor, the majesty and beauty of its conceptions as well commend it to the study of a college student. A comprehensive knowledge of the volume upon which rests the moral and religious life of our country would obviously seem to be a part of a liberal education. What other men can you name that have moulded our civilization and thought as have Moses and Paul? Contact with them must be broadening and ennobling. The Bible is for us the centre of a great part of our life. "It is," as Frederick Faber says, "a part of the national mind and the anchor of national seriousness. The memory of the dead passes into it. The potent traditions of childhood are stereotyped in its verses. It is the representative of man's best moments; and all that there has been about him of gentle and pure and penitent and good speak to him forever out of his English Bible."

These, then, are the reasons why I would see the Bible studied as an English classic—the marvelous strength of its diction, the vigor and purity of its style, the grandeur of its conceptions and the ennobling influence of its pages. I can not here speak of the old philosophy of the Hebrews; but we are told by a venerable professor of our university that if we reject it, there is nothing left us but the philosophy of despair. I can not speak of the value of its ancient histories; yet in view of its literary merits alone, I claim the right of the majestic simplicity of the Bible to a place in college class-rooms beside the quaint conceits of Chaucer, the varied gems of Shakespeare, and the glowing imagery of Milton.

From Home.

MR. EDITOR: The second of August I left my good wife and two babies in the care of God, and started for Moundsville Camp Meeting, situated about eight miles from Wheeling, West Virginia. I reached the place, after about 1,100 miles travel, on the evening of the fifth, and found the good whole-souled Methodist friend who paid my expenses waiting at the depot for me. I passed through a very interesting part of the country, and saw much to delight the eye of one who has been caged up in New Orleans in brick and mortar. The passage was through about twenty-five tunnels between Chattanooga and Cincinnati. It was truly a sublime thing to see the train dashing along a bee line as if to dash us into eternity, down a precipice, and all at once dart around a curve with a speed that seemed dangerous. The Cumberland and high bridges of Kentucky were very interesting indeed, showing us the wonderful power of the human mind to put into material shape some of the laws that holds the world in its place. We truly enjoyed the scenery. But more than anything else are we enjoying the demonstration of the Holy Spirit as we see it bringing strong men and women into the marvelous light and freedom of the grace of God during the progress of this meeting.

We have the pleasure of private association with Bro. Small, who has the meeting in charge. He was born a man into the kingdom of God, and his development is rapidly tending to make him a giant of power to spread scriptural holiness throughout this country. He is one preacher that can preach Christian perfection and not feel too holy to hurl from the pulpit the most bitter and yet effective truths against the whisky traffic. He is one who always knows his latitude and longitude, and just how to reach any people. He has effectually turned Jeff Davis' own letter against anti-prohibition.

The writer was never more warmly received by any people than those of this place. We have been preaching, exhorting and praying until, thank God, we feel tied to this place not only by friendly, but spiritual cords of love. We preached on Sunday last to the convicts in the penitentiary of West Virginia, and it seemed to have a strong effect for good. We were very much moved when the convict choir sang, as we bade them adieu, "God be with you till we meet again," and then handed us a copy of the song, written by one of their number, who was a graduate of Yale College.

We have enjoyed the company of Bro. Bright, from the Southeast Indiana Conference, who is our room-mate, and the assistant of Bro. Small in the meeting. He is a powerful preacher, fearless in the denunciation of vice, and often rises to considerable heights of eloquence.

Oh, Mr. Editor, if those white cravat, overly precise and unduly timid ministers who are afraid to preach against liquor lest they be called political demagogues, could only associate with such men as Small and Bright, I think some courage would be infused into them, and the fight against the soul-enslaving whisky devil would be made more powerful.

We have been blessed by this trip, and hope to make capital from it for future use. We will go from here to Bentleysville, Penn., to assist in a camp meeting, and will doubtless be at home before this appears in the ADVOCATE. God bless you, Doctor, in the continuation of your soul-stirring management of our grand old paper. It is a power for good to all who read it.

(Dr. Chalmers.)

To make this out, that there is no God, he would need to travel abroad over the surrounding universe till he had exhausted it, and to search backward through all the hidden recesses of eternity; to traverse in every direction the plains of infinitude, and sweep the outskirts of that space which is itself interminable, and then bring back to this little world of ours the report of a universal blank, wherein he had not met with one movement of a presiding God. For man not to know of a God, he has only to sink beneath the level of our common nature; but to deny him, he must be a god himself; he must arrogate the ubiquity and omniscience of the Godhead.

(Dr. Hitchcock.)

Education, we may well insist upon it, is a great word and a great thing; far greater than mere encyclopedists have any idea of. It takes account of the whole constitution of man—body, soul, and spirit. It aims at rugged health, alert intelligence, well-rounded, staunch, and forceful character; not a sound mind only, but a sound heart also, in a sound body. It undertakes to teach men not only what to think, but how to think, and how to take care of themselves for time and for eternity. It can rest content with nothing short of sound, wise, pure manhood and womanhood; robust, self-supporting, self-respecting, self-defending. Sobered by experience and history, it still hopes and still expects some day to make an end of all quackeries, all demagogisms, and all fanaticisms, of every grade and of every sort—domestic, social, and religious.

(Dr. Phillips Brooks.)

Our human life which we are living to-day is a very great thing, if we are able to comprehend it. It is possible for us to make it very great, or make it very little. Do you not see how it is possible for me to live either in that power of continuous existence, or in the special incidents or accidents which form themselves upon it? Most men live almost altogether in the special incidents or accidents; the business which they do, the intercourse which they have with one another, the sickness through which they pass, and finally death. But these are only incidents upon the surface of our lives. Our life all the time is deep below, imperishable and unchangeable. It is possible for a man to live underneath these incidents, to make the real thought of his life, that which is continually inspiring and shaping all the real issues of his existence, the thought that he belongs to God. Men forget that and live merely in the power of their accidents and under the impulses of their perishable nature.

(Dr. Carlisle.)

To make the most of an individual life, with all its peculiar limitations and possibilities; to redeem scattered, desultory particles of time; to look intelligently at the wonderful object lessons which the humblest life presents as tests of our reason or faith—this is a great work. To be a healthy influence in the home, and minister to its life, growth, and purity—this is a great work. Let us adopt the simple, yet sacred words of the Great Teacher, "It giveth light to all that are in the house." Such is the office of a household lamp when put in its place. And such is the mission of every member of the household. To be a healing influence in the church and social circle, to be a peace-maker, a healer of strife, a promoter of every good work within our reach. To invest a life wisely and profitably, to touch other lives kindly and healthily—this is a great work; and blessed is that bond, or organization, which helps a man or woman to do it well. Faber says: "It is an immense mercy of God to allow anyone to do the least thing which brings souls nearer to him."

PATIENT WITH THE LIVING.

Sweet friend, when thou and I are gone
Beyond earth's weary labor,
When small shall be our need of grace
From comrade or from neighbor;
Passed all the strife, the toil, the care,—
And done with all the sighing,
What tender ruth shall we have gained,
Alas! by simply dying?

Then lips too chary of their praise
Will tell our merits over,
And eyes too swift our faults to see,
Shall no defect discover.
Then hands that would not lift a stone
Where stones were thick to cumber
Our steep hill-path, will scatter flowers
Above our pillowed slumber.

Sweet friend, forbearance both thou and I,
Ere love is past forgiving,
Should take the earnest lesson home—
Be patient with the living.
To-day's repressed rebuke may save
Our blinding tears to-morrow;
Then patience—e'en when keenest edge
May whet a nameless sorrow.

'Tis easy to be gentle when Death's silence shames our clamor,
And easy to discern the best
Through memory's mystic glamour;
But wise it were for thee and me,
Ere love is past forgiving,
To take the tender lesson home—
Be patient with the living.

The Sunday-School Lesson for September 4, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

TRUST IN OUR HEAVENLY FATHER.

Matthew vi, 24-34.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Casting all your care upon him; for he careth for you."—I Peter v, 7.

CONNECTIVE.

Our National Sunday-school Committee in assigning lessons have seen fit to pass over between the last lesson and the present one several very important subjects discussed in our Lord's Sermon on the Mount. One subject left out is fasting. Minute directions are given for its observance. It is very desirable that the Sunday-school world should have been directed to the study of this subject, for the reason that this means of grace seems to be much neglected. A distinguished minister, whose life and teaching did much towards encouraging a careless Christianity, said in a sermon: "The New Testament does not mention fasting except to put a gloss upon it." The Methodist peoples of the olden time used frequently to practice it. It is still in their Discipline, but it is the exception, not the rule, for the pastor to "see that a fast be held in every congregation on the Friday preceding every quarterly meeting;" and those pastors who try to have "all the ordinances and regulations of the church duly observed," find but little encouragement from their members. Fasting as the hypocrites do is worse than no fasting; but when the Savior was cautioning against that kind, he did not mean to discountenance it altogether, any more than he discountenanced prayer a few verses before by guarding against the prayer of the hypocrite. Still another subject passed over is one of very great importance—"laying up earthly treasures." No one thing interferes more with the spread of Christianity than the selfish withholding of treasure from the claim of God and humanity. To enlighten them upon this Christian grace men need "precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little and there a little."

MAN'S CARES.

Verse 24. "No man can serve two masters." The service of God and the service of the world are utterly irreconcilable. Men very often try to carry both along, but they only deceive themselves. The pure Spirit of God will not occupy a heart polluted by the indwelling of mammon. Mammon or money-worship is idolatry, placed in the same category with bowing down to stocks and stones, and God pronounces his direst anathemas against all such.

25. "Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life." The Master is very far from inculcating an improvident, thriftless spirit in his followers. This would be utterly at variance with the general tenor of Scripture teaching. Men are taught therein to provide for one's own, to be diligent in business, and to gather up fragments. The teaching intended is to guard against a spirit of carking care, which not only dishonors God, but which also prevents true success. The want of an assured faith, that one's efforts to provide meat and drink will be crowned with success, will have a paralyzing effect upon energy. "Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?" Our Father shows the folly of unbelief, as much as if he had said: If I have given the life, will I be careless of the food to sustain that life? If I have given the body, is it reasonable to think that I would fail to give food for its comfort?

26. "Behold the fowls of the air." A species of argument is here employed, called by logicians the a fortiori—from the less to the stronger reason. The birds are of so little value, some of them, as two of them to be sold for a farthing, and of so little skill or foresight as to be unable to reap or to gather into barns; yet God feedeth them. Then is not the unbelief most stupid which for one moment would doubt God's care over his favorite creature, man?

27. "Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?" The word here rendered "stature" is in other places in the Bible translated "age." This latter would be the better here. The Savior is here speaking about least things, and a cubit, or twenty-one inches, is considerable when added to a man's stature, whereas cubit, or span, or hand-breadth, when compared to the length of life, is inconsiderable. The illustration forcibly shows the folly of one being over-anxious about a life which, by the utmost diligence, he can not prolong a single span.

28, 29, 30. "Why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies. * * * Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." Gorgeous water lilies and brilliant wild flowers of the daffodil and tulip species abounded in Palestine. No human dyes could approximate their magnificent beauty, even though the wealth and ingenuity of Solomon should be taxed to their utmost. If God should be at such infinite pains to paint "the grass which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?"

GOD'S CARE.

Verse 31. "Therefore take no thought." This form of expression occurs five times in this lesson. Jamieson, Faussett and Brown, in their commentary, say: "The English word 'thought,' when our version was made, expressed the idea of 'solicitude,' 'anxious concern'—as may be seen in any old English classic; and in the same sense it is used in I Samuel ix, 5." The uninformed English render sometimes stumbles at this passage. "Anxious solicitude," not prudent concern, is forbidden. "Eating," "drinking," "being clothed," or, in other words, the provision for the outer man, constitute the all-absorbing inquiries of those who live without God in the world.

32. "For after these things do the Gentiles seek." A very strong reason for a devout Jew, or a Christian, not to live thus. The Jews regarded themselves as the chosen people, and Christians can sing, "I am the child of a King." Now, for either one to follow the example of the heathen who had no God, whose highest philosophy said, "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die," would certainly be a most shameless prostitution of their high calling. "For your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things." The attributes of God are harmonious. He knows the need of his creatures, and if he knows their need his love will not fail to yearn towards the objects suggested by his knowledge, and if his love goes forth to them, his power will be assuredly equal to every demand made by his love.

33. "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you." Seek the most important thing; others will come in naturally. A quaint old preacher said in illustration of this: "They shall be cast in as an overplus, or as small advantages to the main bargain; as paper and pack thread are given when we buy spice and fruit."

34. "For the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself." To-morrow belongs to God. He only knows what it may bring forth; therefore, anyone who is anxiously solicitous about to-morrow is guilty of presumption as well as of unbelief. He proposes to interfere with God's prerogative, and to appoint the future according to his poor, ignorant conception. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Provide for the trials of each day as they come up in their turn, and hope for better things for to-morrow, or for grace to bear what the good Lord sends. He who neglects the present for the future is reversing God's plan, and, at the same time, is acting contrary to the best teachings of man's philosophy.

From the Work.

FOREST, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The above address is dictated by the formulated rules of etiquette, while the heart, overflowing with sweet memories of the delightful gospel feasts enjoyed by me, under two years of your ministry, at the old Felicity Street Church, would address you as "Dear Doctor."

The pastor here has not sent you a line about his work, whether restrained by modesty or the principle of not letting his right hand know what his left is doing. However, be the reasons what they may, I presume to send you an account, though it should find its way into the waste-paper basket.

December last Bishop Duncan hurled us from a Summit to the most delightful little Forest, on the Vicksburg and Meridian road, where it has been our good fortune to pitch our tent among dear old friends, who threw open heart and hand to make us welcome. The first few weeks at our new home we passed under the vine and fig tree of childhood friends until the parsonage was made ready.

All things pertaining to the church has been moving up steadily, but surely; and we have just closed a glorious meeting of nineteen days, "waiting patiently" in the courts of the Lord's house. Great blessings have been dispensed to us and the church from the bounteous hand of the Father.

The meeting began by Bro. Paul Jones, of Morton, a local preacher of splendid intellect, and of great promise to the church, and who will yet make his mark. Then Bro. B. F. Lewis, of Summit, came, and preached earnestly and zealously for two weeks. Not only did he preach with great acceptance, but visited from home to home, thereby deepening the impressions for good upon the hearts of the people. As this was his starting-point in the ministry, his wonderful development was truly a sweet surprise.

At the end of two weeks the church was greatly revived, and a number led up to a full consecration to the divine Master. "Let the meeting go on," was the cry: and so Bro. Lewis was joined by Bro. Peebles, Selby and N. B. Harmon, from Natchez, to whom we are indebted for effective service. Bro. Little, our sweet-spirited and consecrated presiding elder, was with us from time to time, Rev. A. D. McVoy, president of the East Meridian Female College, unexpectedly dropped into the meeting, and gave us two splendid revival sermons that left a fine impression upon all.

The meeting was not gauged by the number who joined, being only eight, but with the upbuilding of God's people, and the spiritual results that will be sure to follow such a meeting.

Thirty-nine have been received into the church during the year, a number of adults baptized, family altars erected, and prospects bright for a full report at the end of the year. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

CLARA BELLE.

ADAMS CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: We have held meetings at Ebenezer, Adams and Bethel. At Ebenezer we had ten conversions and five accessions. At Adams, sixty conversions and forty accessions. At Bethel, thirty-two accessions, and about the same number of conversions.

The spiritual state of the circuit is greatly revived. Many have taken up the cross of family prayer. I trust much lasting good has been done. We have received up to date, by certificate and profession, ninety-eight members, and baptized forty-two infants. The Lord has blessed us abundantly, and I pray that blessings may be continued. Pray for us.

M. L. BURTON.

AUGUST 9, 1887.

WAYNESBORO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed a splendid meeting with sixteen accessions, and all professed conversion. Twenty-eight have been received up to date. The work is advancing all along the lines. The foreign mission collection has been sent to Dr. Kelley, and other collections are being taken. The young ladies do most of my collecting. Bro. Norsworthy is doing fine work on the district; none are more watchful as to the financial and spiritual interest of the church than he. I heard a brother say he was made for a presiding officer. I hope to see the Lambuth fund reach its thousands.

J. M. MORSE.

AUGUST 15, 1887.

WEST MELVILLE.

MR. EDITOR: On last Monday, at 8:40 P. M., I boarded the west-bound passenger train for West Melville, en route to assist Bro. Landrum in a meeting at that place. After about three hours' run I was safely landed in West Melville. I spent several days preaching for Bro. Landrum, and we had a good time. Several joined the church, and some souls were saved.

West Melville is a new railroad town, located on the west bank of the Atchafalaya. It has about one hundred and fifty inhabitants, composed of mill-men, trappers, rafts-men and railroad men. It is a thriving little town—good deal of money in circulation. West Melville is the place for some enterprising sawmill man to locate. Cypress timber, the very best, and in abundance, is accessible. The lumber can be shipped by boat and railroad. The wonder is that some mill-man has not seen that money could be made, and located there some time ago.

Bro. Landrum has the credit of preaching the first sermon in this town. He went there last November, and found it what some would denominate as a "God-forsaken place." Whisky-drinking, gambling and dancing were carried on at a fearful rate. There was no church, no membership—in fact, nothing but people who were working for money, and ignorant of the gospel of peace. He saw at once that these people should have the gospel, and, therefore, he began preaching and exhorting them to "flee the wrath to come, and be saved from their sins." God blessed his preaching, and sinners were convicted and converted; so now he has thirty-five members of the Methodist Church in that town, and they are converted, substantial working members.

Of course, I will not fail to mention Sister Landrum in connection with the work. "She hath done what she could," and that was a great deal. As a rule, I do not believe the itinerant's wife gets the credit that is due her; but I think the most of them will wear bright crowns in the good world.

Bro. and Sister Landrum have both worked hard in their place, and, indeed, they have met with great opposition—have suffered for the cause of Christ; but, thank God! the victory is won.

A beautiful lot in the center of the town, and lumber on the ground, has been purchased and paid for; so it will not be long before there will be a Methodist Church with its steeple pointing to heaven, and a sweet-toned bell chiming and ringing for the people to come up to the house of the Lord.

W. WIMBERLY.

HAYNESVILLE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I commenced a protracted meeting at Colquitt Church, on the sixth instant, which lasted until the tenth instant, resulting in the most glorious revival that they have had at that church for many years. The Holy Spirit came down on the congregation at the first service, and continued to perform his office on the minds and consciences of the people who composed the large congregation until the close of the meeting. Several young men (head of families) made their first start to praying in public and talking in the experience and praise meetings, and said they would erect their family altars and keep the sacrifice thereon until death. The communion service, which was held on the last day of the meeting, was very solemn—all the members, I believe, partaking thereof. Rev. J. M. Davies was with me from Saturday night until Monday, at noon, and preached three very acceptable sermons. I had to close the meeting before it ought to have been closed, in order to go to another church to begin another protracted meeting on to-morrow. Your brother in Christ,

C. R. GODFREY.

STARKVILLE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: We just closed a most gracious meeting, on Starkville circuit, at Pearson's Chapel, formerly called Bell's School-house, which resulted in about thirty conversions. It was a union meeting. Preachers of different denominations assisted in the meeting. We have not opened the doors of the church yet. The different pastors will attend to that duty at their next appointment. To God be all the glory!

We are now in the midst of another gracious meeting at Steel's Chapel. Pray for us.

B. P. FULLILOVE, P. C.

MOORINGSPORT, LA.

MR. EDITOR: God has been so gracious to us till we feel like speaking. The fire was kindled at our District Conference. Oh, such a love-feast as we did have! I know those good people think that the Methodists are a noisy set. But they like it, for some of them wanted the next District Conference.

We have just closed a camp meeting. It lasted four days. Oh, such a precious time! More than twenty were converted; and many of them would get up and say so. This meeting was held in the extreme northwest corner of the State. It was a new appointment added to my work this year. Many shouted for joy, and some of them were Baptists, and they did well for the first time. Bro. F. J. Jones, a local brother from Atlanta, Texas, did us faithful service. The gospel proved to be the power of God unto salvation. The larger part of those converted were young men—the most prominent in the country. We pressed the great importance of taking up the cross, and then called for all the young men who would meet once a week and pray together. Thirteen came. We then called for older ones who would meet with them and help, and the altar was full. When seated, we called for all who would pray in their families. About fifteen rose up. We asked, "Do you want another camp meeting next year?" They were soon organized, and had enough help promised to build a good shed, and set the time to embrace the second Sunday in August, 1888.

We presented our claims for missions and widows and orphans, and we received, in cash and subscription, $24 25. This is the most liberal response I have had in this country. I have received up to date sixteen members. I expect to go far over that, and hope I shall be able to bring up my collections very well by Conference. We are expecting a good time during the summer. Will send $5 in answer to Dr. Lambuth's call. $2 50 was given by three of my members. We give God the glory, and take courage.

J. S. SANDERS.

AUGUST 12, 1887.

LAUDERDALE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: The good Lord is smiling on and blessing us here on Lauderdale circuit. Last year I labored and toiled, preached and prayed, urged and pled—all seemingly with small results. Only a few conversions and accessions. So far this year our labors have been crowned with more or less success. We have had to date twenty-five or thirty additions to the church, and many bright conversions. Several family altars have been erected. I have sold a large number of Bibles and hymn books, and some Disciplines.

We are now in the midst of a protracted meeting in Lauderdale, which bids fair to result in much good. We have here, in Lauderdale, some of the purest and best, most thoroughly consecrated women I ever saw—Bible-reading, prayer-meeting-going and class-meeting-loving women. The godly women are great help and strength to their pastor. Pray for us, Bro. Carter, that we may have a sweeping revival all over this country, for it is greatly needed. We have many among us who are greatly interested in the idea of heart-purity. God help us to ever do the clean thing!

H. P. LEWIS.

AUGUST 12, 1887.

BOGUE CHITTO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The work in the Brookhaven district is moving on nicely. The brethren are hard at work, and are succeeding. We held the third Quarterly Conference for Summit charge at this place yesterday, and to-day, at eleven o'clock, Bishop Galloway preached one of his best sermons; and at the close of the service the self-denial offering amounted to $26 15. I think this good, as our membership here is only about eighteen. I think the offering to this fund in this district will be creditable.

J. M. WEEMS.

AUGUST 14, 1887.

CARROLLTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Yesterday Carrollton gave, as the result of the week of prayer and self-denial, $140 40. Membership is 126. One brother gave $50. Praise the Lord! We had service every day during the week. A sister gave her gold bracelets.

T. W. LEWIS.

AUGUST 15, 1887.

YAZOO CITY, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I held two services daily through the week of prayer and self-denial. I preached, lectured, talked and prayed on the subject of mission until I think our people are thoroughly aroused and furnished with information. Visible results: $40 25 paid on self-denial fund; a Woman's Missionary Society, a Juvenile Society and Young Men's Christian Association organized with good prospects, and an enthusiasm unusual to our city. I hope and pray that larger results yet will follow. Fraternally,

R. S. WOODWARD.

AUGUST 16, 1887.

EAST BATON ROUGE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Another glorious revival for this work. Have never seen a more powerful manifestation of divine power. Fourteen accessions, fifteen or twenty conversions. Many backsliders reclaimed, and the church in a flame of religious zeal. Our worthy presiding elder, J. A. B. Jones, was with me, and preached seven sermons, which were blessed of God. Bro. Jones is very highly appreciated by the people throughout the circuit. To God be all the praise for past blessings! Pray for us.

GEO. D. ANDERS.

BUENA VISTA, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I write to record another good meeting. We closed on Thursday night a glorious meeting at Concord, of five days' continuance, resulting in a revival in the church, eighteen professions and seven accessions, with a number to follow. The collections ordered by the Annual Conference promised in full. We were assisted by Rev. W. D. Bass, who preached with great acceptability. To God be all the glory. Yours in the gospel.

HESLEP R. TUCKER.

AUGUST 15, 1887.

BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have just finished our week of special prayer and self-denial. The last service was more fruitful and delightful than the first. As the results of the week's work, I would report the church aroused on the subject of missions, spiritual life quickened, and $90 raised toward the payment of the missionary debt. I am glad the church had a missionary debt, or at least glad the call has been made upon us. Yours,

A. F. WATKINS.

AUGUST 14, 1887.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: "Praise God from whom all blessings flow!" The week of prayer and self-denial was observed. The collection taken yesterday. Amount, fifty dollars, which we send to Dr. I. G. John this morning. Collected twenty cents per member. General collections all coming up. Added ten or twelve members this year.

Fraternally,

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

AUGUST 15, 1887.

PLEASANT RIDGE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have had a glorious meeting at old Siloam Church, on the Pleasant Ridge circuit, North Mississippi Conference. I did not keep an account of the number of conversions. I took thirty-five into the church at one time. I think it was the best meeting I ever saw. Praise be to God, and to him be all the glory!

M. E. TUMLIN, P. C.

GREENSBURG CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed several good meetings with reasonable success—fifteen accessions, and churches edified, encouraged and built up in the faith once delivered to the saints. Most everybody in this circuit in the church.

J. W. ELLISON.

CLINTON, LA.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord has been with us of East Feliciana circuit. I have received seventeen new members into our church in protracted meetings lately. The church greatly blessed and revived. Glory to God!

Fraternally,

P. A. JOHNSTON.

NORTH WILKINSON CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed two meetings with twenty-eight additions, and about twenty conversions; and still the good work goes on, with more to follow. Pray for us.

N. J. ROBERTS, P. C.

Through Different Eyes.

BY W. H. ANDERSON, D. D.

Everyone has a pair of individual eyes; but their benefit manifestly depends on their proper use. All forms, colors, sizes remain fixed in themselves; but they are variously estimated by the eyes examining them. The eyes are but the inlets, the messengers to the minds where the decisions are made. Thus, what is beautiful or disfigured, harmonious or discordant, beneficial or injurious, is determined equally by the correctness of the standard and its proper use. We form views, we accept opinions more or less carefully; these, in their turn, become our rules for estimating the values of things, whether material or immaterial, ourselves or in others. These opinions are often mere prejudices, hereditary or self-acquired; but the longer they are cherished, the dearer do they become, though experience and reason, and even Scripture, may oppose and condemn.

In examining our own conduct often, though there is the sense of disapprobation and conscious regret, we let self-love look through our eyes and find palliation and excuse of admitted wrong. How different they look through the same eyes at the same objects at different times! The attraction may address our apparent self-interest, and may offer large advantages. If there is the apparent infringement of the rights of either man or God, while the judgment is unbiased and the conscience unfettered, we hesitate, we shrink away. The eyes telegraph danger, and the mind is alarmed. If, however, passions begin to glow, desire is inflamed and the attraction increases its power, the evil conceals itself and clamoring desire influences purpose and decides action. For the time everything of duty, responsibility, danger may be lost in the one all-influencing idea of personal immediate gratification. How different the look when sense of self-degradation covers the soul with sackcloth and ashes!

Two great classes of objects address our eyes: the temporal and the spiritual, the earthly and the heavenly. They are, under divine arrangement, harmonious in claim and action. Sin, the great disturbing element in God's universe, has made these two objects antagonistic in themselves and their influences. God has left his lovely image on our earth, though for centuries wicked feet have rudely endeavored to deface the lingering loveliness of our Father's impress. Cæsar and God should never appear opposed or contradictory in their mutual claims. Society, in its united or individual capacity, is refined, safe, happy, only as it obeys divine law and is under divine protection. The same is true of human property, character, government. "Thieves break through and steal" except where our valuables are protected in the safety-vaults of true piety.

Since sin is in the world its footprints are seen in sad human hearts, as well as in daily new-made graves. If our eyes look out for distress, to soothe and relieve it in Christ's name, "for Jesus' sake," human sorrow has an elevating influence; it makes Christ's character and religion seem dearer, and we prize redeemed humanity more because, like its Christ, we can "go about doing good." Human passions put on their true value and dress as means not of selfish gratification, but of alleviation of human distress. On the other hand, if our eyes look on distress but to sneer at it, or to attribute it to wrong causes, or to magnify our personal prudence, economy and thrift, while the hungry are unfed, the sufferer unaided, we but increase the amount of offerings at the altar of the golden calf: we cut ourselves off still wider from the holiest offices and sweetest pleasures of life—the imitation of Christ, in spirit and, in effort, for others' good.

How different the same eyes at different times! During a genuine revival of religion, when denominational shibboleths lose their force, and partisan peculiarities are lost in the grander, nobler idea of true brotherhood in Christ, how near hearts approach each other, and all draw nearer the blessed bleeding cross of Christ! We wonder that what were mountains of separation are only mole-hills, and large rivers are really so shallow that the weakest child of God can wade unscared—yea, but ankle-deep. We are astonished that the manner of a rite or the use of a term in Christian technology had divided the followers of Jesus, co-heirs with him of God.

When true charity is the light of pious eyes, how little censoriousness, how unfrequent unchristian criticism! True humility, arising from sense of personal liability, dependence and the unmerited grace of God, will make all possible allowance for human weakness, until sin is present in spirit or act. Even then, with a sad heart at a brother's fault, it "goes and tells Jesus," and tries to keep the sad secret in its own breast till Jesus shall exercise his saving power over the erring one.

Eyes that wander, "like fool's eyes, over the earth"; in search of something to suspect, materials of uncharitable mention and decision, are not in the true Christian's head, or else they have for the time been perverted by sin. True, loving eyes are ever busy to find out difficulties, anticipated or incipient, with motherly love to prevent or heal. The church is one family, and the links of the chain should be all of sincere, divine love.

Through different eyes. How manifest this is when the vital cause of missions is presented! The liberal heart feels it is a blended pleasure and duty to give all possible donations for the salvation of souls now wrapped in the heathen night. Others deny practically personal obligation, and their gifts are not noble, grateful indices of appreciation of the blessings and privileges of Christianity, but, rather, unwilling charity bestowed on Christ himself.

See the different eyes directed to the minister! Some minds look on him as a hired servant, for a year, at the smallest possible sum. Whatever his talent, learning or experience, he is the proper subject of criticism as to manner and matter by all who choose to attempt it, regardless of the character or amount of knowledge of the critic. Purse-proud importance must patronize God's servant, and Dives, in purple, may throw Lazarus, at the gate, an occasional scrap dinner; or to shed a sunbeam over him, invite him to dine. At the eleven o'clock service God may be complimented by ornamenting His house with presence in "our pew," provided the day and the Sunday dress be suitable. With such, Christ's gospel is held as a greatly minor matter of importance to the laws of trade and the code of fashionable society.

How different the intelligent, correct appreciation of true ministerial sacrifice and labor, cares and anxieties—all "for Jesus' sake!" His love of souls, his toils for the purity and success of the church of Christ, his consecration to his office, are not measured by meagre salaries unwillingly and often imperfectly paid. The cultivated genuine Christian properly esteems the ministers of Christ in their relations to the church and to society. The minister has the feelings of a man: his love for his family, his care for their present welfare and their future condition. He and his appreciate the courtesies of life and fully prize those delicate Christian marks of social kindness received from his people. He carries a double care: that of his own personal piety and the care of souls; his own people, and the conversion of sinners. He has a double claim on the sympathy, love, prayers and co-operation of his people. Perhaps nothing binds hearts together more tenderly in Christ than those of the Methodist preachers and their charges.

Through different eyes. We shall appreciate this difference of view when sorrow pays us a long personal visit, we bury our dead, we pass through the fiery furnace, look into the tomb or on Jesus on his judgment throne. Our probation ends here. Human character and conduct while on earth decide our eternal future. How different our eyes when we gaze on heaven! May writer and reader have that blessed experience through divine mercy!

Ministerial Education—Another Side.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. Weems' note and your remarks recall a recent conversation with a young minister—one who is already useful, and who is all the time improving. When he felt called to preach he was almost without education. His father, being an itinerant, could help him but little. The district proposed assistance; but a young friend who had been thus aided said, "Don't accept it; you will be often humiliated." By his own efforts he succeeded in getting a good foundation, and while he preaches and saves souls he goes on building. I would not keep back one dollar that the church might raise for this purpose; but those young men, and others who are called, should help themselves. It will give them a spirit of manly independence that will win respect. It is a notable fact that characters deteriorate under too much help. The son of a minister, or one preparing for the ministry, can have free tuition at any of our institutions of learning. A little labor with one's own hands can secure money for plain board. When enough advanced they are helped at Vanderbilt, and their independence preserved by giving their note for the money when able to refund.

If these young men were called to be lawyers or doctors, they would not call on the State to help them. They would make their way. Prominent men in public life in Mississippi could be named who attained education by their own efforts. Let not those the Master has called to preach his Word wait supinely to be helped.

I know a young man trying, under difficulties, to get a medical education. When lectures were over he got a mule and made a cotton crop, giving late hours to the study of his profession. A call to preach should inspire a man with as much energy. It may be a longer and harder way: but there will be satisfaction in feeling, "It was chargeable to none of you." The finest men our church has been blessed with have not received any help from her pecuniarily, and I confess when I see in the papers calls for aid for young men while at college it pains me for them. If the church undertakes their education, it should be managed more delicately. Their self-respect should not be blunted. A minister of God should be a perfectly developed man. W.

Moss Point's Offering.

MR. EDITOR: Gratitude to God and a good people dictates my writing this, that others may rejoice with us for the exceeding grace of God manifest in our little congregation, Sunday, August 14. We had not neglected the assembling ourselves together nightly for prayer and exhortation. Facts and figures were fully given; needs and methods suggested; a free interchange of thought between pastor and people. Various forms of self-denial were practiced, and the result in money laid on God's altar. The people, whose hearts God had stirred, offered willingly and generously, according to their number and means. Out of a membership of barely one hundred and fifteen, we have received, and to-day forwarded to Dr. Kelley, $114 05. Small sums are still coming in. This is wholly a free-will offering, all our missionary assessments for the year having been fully met previously. Instead of the required ten cents per member, we will exceed one dollar per member for this grand occasion.

One generous offering, which represents self-denial of a peculiar and tender nature, I feel like mentioning, that others may join me in asking our Father's special blessing upon the giver and her dear ones left behind: Several hills found in the purse of a dear son, after his death, had been kept as a sacred relic by the fond mother. These are now offered for a holy cause. Bedewed with the tears and fragrant with the incense of prayers from a stricken mother's heart, may we not look on it as a sacred obligation, and one more likely to be owned and blessed than any ordinary gift to his treasury?

Praising God from whom all blessings flow, we go forward encouraged to "work and pray and labor every day" in the vineyard of the Lord.

Thanking you for your stirring battle-cry, which helped us much, I am, Yours cordially,

J. P. DRAKE.

MR. EDITOR: What is to be done about our missionary to Japan? Eagerly do I watch the ADVOCATE from week to week to ascertain the amount raised, and, with a depressing feeling upon my heart, turn away with the heavy load to await—what?

I have long ago contributed my mite; but the mites are not sufficient, so now send a larger donation, and if that is not sufficient, must try to do better still.

Surely we Methodists can not afford to sleep at such a time as this; and yet if their earnest cries for help have not aroused us from lethargy, surely there is no hope for us. I am afraid we shall hardly be able to hear when the trumpet blows on that great and awful day. What we need is to wake up to the fact that we are not our own, and that what we have is not ours. We are but stewards. What a responsibility! And yet how easily this would be met if we would only give a tenth of our Lord's possessions to his cause. We need to be converted to the spirit of giving. As our beloved and sainted Bishop Parker has said: "We must give until it hurts."

Now, if you can suggest any plan, I will gladly co-operate, giving my time and strength for six months, if need be, for the money must be raised. As I can not go, I would speed those who can. My heart is too full for me to keep silence. May God have mercy upon us!

Yours in earnest,

A METHODIST.

Living Witnesses!

Ask anyone who has used Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets as to their merits. They will tell you that pimples, blotches and eruptions disappear; that constipation—that breeder of disorders—is relieved; that the appetite is restored; that the whole system is renovated and regulated beyond any conception by those little wonder-workers. Being purely vegetable, they are perfectly harmless; being composed of concentrated, active ingredients, they are powerful. Purge and purify the system and disease will be unknown. Of all druggists.

Do to-day's duty, fight to-day's temptation, and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things which you can not see, and could not understand if you saw them.—Charles Kingsley.

Southern Antidote for Malaria.

It is generally known that Simmons Liver Regulator is relied upon to secure immunity from all malarial disorders. This is proven by its popularity, and anyone who has lived in the South has seen its curative effects and the protection it gives against this weakening and dangerous malady. It acts more promptly than calomel or quinine, without any of their injurious consequences.

I have been benefited by praying for others: for, making an errand to God for them, I have got something for myself.—Rutherford.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes a derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of sedentary habits are subject to Headache, Defective Vision, Jaundice, Loss of Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this consummation as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the fact enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. Flesh can never become sound when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Briefs.

Here is a case of self-denial that will provoke thought, if nothing more. And is it not a thing to provoke emulation as well? It may be that our "week of self-denial" will result in many Methodists imitating thus Baptist sister:

It is reported from Richmond, Va., that a pious Baptist of that city has rented her fine home and moved into cheaper quarters, that she thus might be able to give $1,000 a year more to charity than she otherwise could have done.

At a public meeting in Nashville, Tenn., July 8, Dr. Fitzgerald made a capital speech, showing why the preachers are for prohibition. By the unanimous request of the audience the address has been published, and the tractate of seven pages lies before us. It is a good campaign document, and may be used efficiently wherever the question of prohibition is agitated. Published at Nashville. Price, five cents a copy; $2 per hundred.

The Chicago Advance has this note on the result of the Texas election:

With an unlimited corruption fund to draw upon, the ignorant prejudices of the colored people to appeal to, every saloon a recruiting station on the devil's side, and, in the higher circles of political policy, the spirit of Pontius Pilate always ready, at the last moment, to consummate the treachery of a Judas, the malicious envy of the political sanhedrim, and the frenzy of the mob beguiled by demagogues and maddened by whisky, the good cause has, for the hour, seemed to go down in defeat. Nevertheless, the end is not yet. The tremendous popular awakening and the universal discussion can not fail of fruitful results.

Our President is not as well paid as some other rulers; but it occurs to us that with a little economy he may be able to worry through his term, if the following is true:

The salary of the President, as everybody knows, is $50,000. His official and household staff, including private secretaries, clerks, messengers, doorkeepers, steward, firemen, etc., cost for salaries, $33,864; for the "contingent expenses" of the executive office, on official account, the sum of $8,000 is provided; for "care, repair and refurnishing the Executive Mansion" $16,000 per year is granted by Congress, to be expended as the President may direct; fuel for the Executive Mansion greenhouses and stables cost $3,000 per annum; for care and necessary repair of greenhouses there is a regular annual appropriation of $4,000.

The Louisiana State Prohibition Convention was the largest of the three so far held. The first one, three years ago, in Shreveport, had about forty delegates; the one last year, at Minden, about eighty delegates, and the one, on August 17, at Alexandria, had about 120 in attendance. The prohibitionists, like unto Georgia and elsewhere in the South, adhere very properly to local option and non-political and non-sectarian lines of action. The State Committee is as follows: W. H. Goodale, chairman; A. M. Green, S. H. Werlein, M. C. B. Mason, Capt. J. W. Pharr, E. W. Wells, G. W. Boton, Dr. A. E. P. Albert, A. C. Calhoun, J. W. Rankin, Dr. D. W. Foster, A. M. Newman; and for the State at large: John T. Sawyer, J. W. Nicholson, W. A. Sanders, J. Y. Gilmore, Dr. W. S. Penick, W. J. Douglas, M. J. Hamilton, J. A. Parker, T. K. Fa... Leiloy, S. C. Wickliffe and I. W. Phyc...son.

After Self-Denial, What?

Our readers will remember that we have spoken several times about the week of self-denial being a testing time in our church, and that we have expressed the fear that many of our people did not understand the scope of this thing at all. The week has come and gone. Many of our people, perhaps the majority of them, entered upon its services in "godly sincerity," and truly denied themselves for the single purpose of advancing the kingdom of Christ by paying off our missionary debt. Taking the contributions that were brought in by the Methodists of this city as an indication of what has been done in other places, we think the amount contributed must have been more than enough to pay the indebtedness of the Board. Now, that is very good, and we are ready to rejoice over the fact that the wheels of our mission car can now roll on with comparative ease. It is a good thing to pay a debt, especially a church debt; and the payment of such is a genuine cause for genuine rejoicing, and we hereby join with our readers in giving praise to God that once more the clear light shines upon an open way.

But we have several times, in these columns, called attention to the fact that the raising of this money was not the only purpose for the appointment of the week of self-denial. It may have been the only purpose in the minds of the Board of Missions when they passed the resolution appointing the week. It may have been the only purpose in the minds of the Bishops when they recommended it. But God has something to do in church affairs, and we have said several times that we believed he was going to use that week to test our church. He has done it; and, while we may well rejoice that the incubus of debt has been lifted from us, we "rejoice with trembling," because God has taken this time to show us what we can do when we try. He has tested us, and proved us before the eyes of the world. And now the awfulness of the result stares us square in the face. It is this: The unvarying teaching of the Bible is that we are bound to do what we can do in spreading the gospel. This obligation is never intermitted, and never loses its force. Duty has no periodicity. It is a daily, hourly thing. A brother remarked in his prayer meeting the other night: "If this week of self-denial is simply to be a spurt, and we are to fall back upon our old jog-trot next week, then it has been a harmful thing." In a tone which surprised everybody, a brother said, in the preachers' meeting, a few days ago: "I am really afraid that our church will now go to the devil." It is an awful thing for God to show a man what he can do, for that man can never have God's approbation if he falls below that line of duty. The brother had that in mind when he expressed the fear that we "will now go to the devil." If the money that has gone into the missionary treasury from this special effort represents truly the measure of our self-denial for one week, it as truly represents it for all weeks to come. God has shown us what we can do, and the plain law of his Word is, the measure of ability is the measure of work. If the offerings of self-denial week represents, as far as such things can, our love to him, shall we give less evidence of that love now than we did then? Shall we permit the selfishness, from whose miserly grip we wrenched such a glorious victory during that week, take possession of our souls again, and run us off the field like a pack of craven cowards? We have shown what we can do, and thereby brought ourselves under obligations to keep on doing that thing. Did we not say rightly that this whole business was a very serious thing—the very turning-point in our destiny as a church? May the Lord have mercy on us!

Civil and Ecclesiastical Courts.

BY BISHOP C. B. GALLOWAY.

The question as to how far civil tribunals may inquire into ecclesiastical proceedings occasionally requires investigation. Its importance grows out of the relation between Church and State, and involves the integrity of religious liberty. The subject has quite a history in English jurisprudence; but decisions have rested upon widely different principles from those that obtain in the United States. We have no Established Church as in England. The Lord Chancellor, in some sense the representative and head of the Church, may and does decide "cases of heresy and ecclesiastical contumacy." But the civil courts of our country are prohibited from such judicial determinations by certain fundamental and jealous constitutional principles. The Supreme Court of the United States aptly and tersely says: "The law knows no heresy, and is committed to the support of no dogma, the establishment of no sect."

The only matters of ecclesiastical controversy that can come under review by civil courts are cases that involve rights of property. This doctrine is distinctly stated by the Supreme Court of the United States, in Bouldin vs. Alexander (15 Wallace Reports): "It may be conceded that we have no power to revise or question ordinary acts of church discipline, or of excision from membership. We have only to do with rights of property."

And in cases involving rights of property, the jurisdiction of civil courts is limited. If the right of property is dependent on the question of doctrine, discipline, ecclesiastical law, rule, or custom, or church government, and that has been decided by the highest tribunal within the organization to which it has been carried, the civil court will accept that decision as conclusive, and be governed by it in its application to the case before it. This position is thus clearly set forth by the Supreme Court of the United States, in Watson vs. Jones (13 Wallace): "We think the rule of action which govern the civil courts, founded in a broad and sound view of the relations of Church and State under our system of laws, and supported by a preponderating weight of judicial authority, is that whenever the question of discipline or of faith, or ecclesiastical rule, custom or law have been decided by the highest of these church judicatories to which the matter has been carried, the legal tribunals must accept such decisions as final, and as binding on them in their application to the case before them." In other words, if the church deposes a minister for heresy, or relegates him to some subordinate rank, according to the provisions of ecclesiastical discipline, the civil court will not review such action. The Court of Appeals of South Carolina, in Harmon vs. Dreher, quoted approvingly by the Supreme Court of the United States, says: "It belongs not to the civil power to enter into or review the proceedings of a spiritual court. The structure of our government has, for the preservation of civil liberty, reserved the temporal institutions from religious interference. On the other hand, it has secured religious liberty from the invasion of civil authority. The judgments, therefore, of religious associations, bearing on their own members, are not examinable here. * * * When a civil right depends upon an ecclesiastical matter, it is the civil court, and not the ecclesiastical, which is to decide. But the civil tribunal tries the civil right, and no more, taking the ecclesiastical decisions out of which the civil right arises as it finds them."

This much, then, is settled by the highest judicatory of the country:

(1) Civil courts can only interfere in ecclesiastical affairs when rights of property are involved.

(2) If the right of property is dependent upon doctrine, discipline, or ecclesiastical rule or custom, the decision of the highest church court is accepted as final.

It follows, therefore:

(1) That civil courts can not determine the membership of ecclesiastical bodies. In the case of Shannon vs. Frost the Chief Justice, delivering the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States, said: "This court, having no ecclesiastical jurisdiction, can not revise or question ordinary acts of church discipline. Our only judicial power in the case arises from the conflicting claims of the parties to the church property and the use of it. We can not decide who ought to be members of the church, nor whether the excommunicated have been justly or unjustly, regularly or irregularly cut off from the body of the church."

(2) Civil courts can not take cognizance of alleged wrongs in ecclesiastical discipline. It is not competent for such a tribunal to restore an excised member to his former official status. The Supreme Court of Illinois, in the case of Ferraria vs. Vasconcelles, adopts the language of the Supreme Court of the United States, in Shannon vs. Frost, that "the judicial eye can not penetrate the veil of the church for the forbidden purpose of vindicating alleged wrongs of excised members: when they became members, they did so upon the condition of continuing or not, as they and their churches might determine, and they thereby submit to the ecclesiastical power, and can not now invoke the supervisory power of the civil tribunals." The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in the case of the German Reformed Church vs. Seibert, is equally emphatic: "The decisions of ecclesiastical courts, like every other judicial tribunal, are final, as they are the best judges of what constitutes an offense against the Word of God and the discipline of the church. Any other than those courts must be incompetent judges of matters of faith, discipline and doctrine; and civil courts, if they should be so unwise as to attempt to supervise their judgments on matters which come within their jurisdiction, would only involve themselves in a sea of uncertainty and doubt, which would do anything but improve either religion or good morals." The following from the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Watson vs. Jones, states the case lucidly, and supports it with the strongest argument: "The right to organize voluntary religious associations to assist in the expression and dissemination of any religious doctrine, and to create tribunals for the decision of controverted questions of faith within the association, and for the ecclesiastical government of all the individual members, congregations and officers within the general association, is unquestioned. All who unite themselves to such a body do so with an implied consent to this government, and are bound to submit to it. But it would be a vain consent, and would lead to the total subversion of such religious bodies, if anyone aggrieved by one of their decisions could appeal to the secular courts and have them reversed. It is of the essence of these religious unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance, subject only to such appeals as the organism itself provides for. Nor do we see that justice would be likely to be promoted by submitting those decisions to review in the ordinary judicial tribunals. Each of these large and influential bodies (to mention no others, let reference be had to the Protestant Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal, and the Presbyterian Churches), has a body of constitutional and ecclesiastical law of its own, to be found in their written organic laws, their books of discipline, in their collections of precedents, in their usage and customs, which, as to each, constitute a system of ecclesiastical law and religious faith that tasks the ablest minds to become familiar with. It is not to be supposed that judges of the civil court can be as competent in the ecclesiastical law and religious faith of these bodies as the ablest men in each are in reference to their own. It would, therefore, be an appeal from the more learned tribunal in the law, which decides the case, to one which is less so."

The Supreme Court of Louisiana has also affirmed the doctrine that a mandamus will not lie to compel a religious society to restore to membership one who had been expelled by a decree of the legally constituted church judicatory. Chief Justice Manning, delivering the opinion of the court, says: "The judicatory provided by those laws has acted upon the matter, and we can not go behind its action to inquire whether it acted rightly or wrongfully, justly or unjustly. It is the tribunal to which he submitted himself when he accepted membership of the congregation, and its action is not examinable in a civil court."

(3) Civil courts have no jurisdiction over the salary or perquisities of ministers or ecclesiastical officers. They are not competent to compel church courts or ecclesiastical bodies to reimburse members or officers for alleged financial losses. The Supreme Court of Illinois, in Chase vs. Cheney, affirmed this doctrine. Judge Lawrence, who dissented on some points, stated the opinion of the court as follows: "We understand the opinion as implying that, in the administration of ecclesiastical discipline, and where there is no other right of property involved than the loss of the clerical office or salary, as an incident to such discipline, a spiritual court is the exclusive judge of its own jurisdiction, under the laws or canons of the religious association to which it belongs, and its decision of that question is binding upon the secular courts." And that opinion the Supreme Court of the United States quotes approvingly in the case, above referred to, of Watson vs. Jones.

Not So.

On Sunday last an article appeared in the New Orleans States headed thus: "To the Rev. C. B. Galloway, Bishop of Mississippi." There being no Established Church in this country, neither Bishop Galloway nor any other man is "Bishop of Mississippi."

The following statement in the article is not correct:

And, finally, you will find in Jeremiah xxxv, 2, that the Lord God, on one occasion, commanded the order of Rechabites to drink wine.

We turn to that chapter, and find that God said to Jeremiah: "Go unto the house of the Rechabites, and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the Lord, into one of the chambers, and give them wine to drink." Jeremiah did as the Lord commanded him, and "pots full of wine, and cups" were set before the Rechabites, and they were invited to drink the wine. Wi... what result? "But they sai... We will drink no wine; f... Jonadab the son of Rechab o... father commanded us, sayin... Ye shall drink no wine," et... The fact of the case is not th... "God commanded the order ... Rechabites to drink wine," b... that God tried them in the ma... ter of their conscientious obed... ence to the precepts of the... forefathers. Having found the... true, God, by the conduct of t... Rechabites, convicted "the m... of Judah and the inhabitants ... Jerusalem" of ingratitude a... rebellion.

The chapter quoted by th... writer in the States recounts tha... while the Jews were condemne... for disobedience, God honore... the Rechabites. We find it thus... "And Jeremiah said unto th... house of the Rechabites, Th... saith the Lord of hosts, the G... of Israel, because ye have obeye... the commandment of Jonada... your father, and kept all his pre... cepts, and done according to al... that he hath commanded you... therefore, thus saith the Lor... of hosts, the God of Israel... Jonadab the son of Rechab shall... not want a man to stand before... me forever."

So far from the writer in the States being correct, it does look from the above language as if God had actually indorsed those ancient prohibitionists.

Notes.

Amite county, Miss., has gone dry, but whisky won in three wards of Webster parish, La. The prohibitionists in the latter did much better than two years ago. They will likely win next time.

Those who write for the press, like those who listen to the gospel, need "line upon line, precept upon precept." Here is a "line and precept" from a high authority:

"It's a good rule," says Mr. Cyrus Field, "to put all you have to say on one sheet of paper." When he framed the first letter to be sent to the British government on the subject of the Atlantic Cable, he covered a dozen sheets. But, thinking it over, he said, "It's too long, no one will read it;" so he kept cutting it down till he got it all on one sheet of paper. Those who write for the newspaper—please remember.

From the Richmond Christian Advocate we take this, and commend it to our pastors who know where the "grub" is:

The clumsy, unreading, heavy unit on the church register is not exactly a cipher. He does indeed increase the statistics by one, but that is about all. Bring him under the influence of his church journal. It wakes him up. He begins to count for something. His conversation takes on a different tone. He has found out about missions, the college and Conferences. He has been forced. He was a grub, crawling lubberly, helpless. He is winged, alert and quickened.

A writer in the Nashville thus claims Old Hickory as a prohibitionist:

Every intelligent man knows, or may know, that Jackson built a church, embraced the Christian religion, and died in the faith of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, June 8, 1845. The proof is abundant that he was a strong prohibitionist, and were he among us to-day his religion and his democracy would strongly support the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State of Tennessee, which, if adopted, will remove the saloon, the greatest curse to the family, church, society and State that now afflicts the country.

May the prohibition spirit of Gen. Jackson be abroad among the Democrats of Tennessee, and, in September, may the Jacksonian type of democracy prevail to the rolling up of a handsome majority against the saloon!

When we remember that one-third of the inhabitants of this country are church members, the following from George Frederic Parsons is a most terrible arraignment:

"The principle of business is selfishness in its most open and undisguised form; selfishness ministering to its own rapacity by a hundred base and shameful tricks and chicaneries; selfishness assisting itself with deceit and fraud, with overreaching and misrepresentation; selfishness pluming itself upon superior intelligence when it effects a roguery by playing upon the trustfulness of another; selfishness hardily sneering at integrity and scoffing at honor as an outworn imbecility. There is really nothing too base to be perpetrated in the name of business. It knows no conscience; witness the dispatch of shiploads of rum to poison uncivilized races. It knows no patriotism; witness the eagerness with which in all war traders have supplied their country's enemies with arms and munitions; and witness, in our own time, the manner in which rebellious Indian tribes have been repeatedly furnished by American citizens with arms wherewith to fight American soldiers.

Personals.

Wilmot H. Goodale, Esq., of Baton Rouge, has been chosen chairman of the State Prohibition Executive Committee. Rev. John T. Sawyer has held the position heretofore. Mr. Goodale will prove a worthy successor.

Bishop Galloway passed through the city, Friday, on his way to dedicate Bro. Isbell's new church at Robeline, on the T. and P. R. R. He is looking well, and speaks encouragingly of the results of self-denial in Mississippi. We feel sure that the reports when in from our three patronizing Conferences will show that Mississippi and Louisiana have heard the call to self-denial.

Rev. S. M. Thames, presiding elder of the Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, has removed his family from Grenada to Sardis, and they are occupying a district parsonage which has been purchased this year.

Dr. Philip Schaff is to be appointed to the chair of church history in the Union Theological Seminary, made vacant by the death of Dr. Hitchcock.

Dr. Marvin R. Vincent is to take Dr. Schaff's former place, the chair of New Testament Greek, in the same seminary.

The Brazilian Parliament has under consideration a bill for the emancipation of the slaves in that empire.

Henry George, Dr. McGlynn, et al., have run John Swinton's paper to the wall. Four years ago, John Swinton left a $7,000 salary on the Sun, to start his paper, and after sinking over $50,000, concludes he had better give it up.

It is said that Mr. Moody is contemplating an extended evangelistic tour through India.

A movement has been inaugurated at Mansfield, La., to build a monument to the memory of the Confederate soldiers killed in the battle of Mansfield, fought April 8, 1861, and in furtherance of the movement the ladies of DeSoto parish will soon organize a memorial association.

Sam Jones Camp Meeting, near Gloster, Miss., begins August 26. Large preparations have been made in improvements. There are mineral springs for the health of the body, and the gospel river of life will be easily accessible to all sin-sick and penitent souls. It will do you good to go.

Our city is trying to get on a boom in artesian wells. Several have been sunk with success, and several more are in contemplation by the City Council. The people by hundreds visit those already running, and believe them to be possessed of healing virtues. We would be glad to see them sunk all over the city, and then a thirsty individual would not be compelled to visit a saloon in order to get a drink of water.

Hon. J. Floyd King, ex-Congressman of the Fifth Louisiana District, is now vice-president and treasurer of the Tortilla Gold and Silver Mining Company; office 57 Broadway, New York.

The celebration of the anniversary of prohibition in Lincoln county, Miss., last week, at Brookhaven, was a success which shows that the prohibitionists there are keeping their camp fires burning and wide-awake sentinels on guard.

Armstrong's Brigade, of the late Confederate Army, had a reunion recently, at Grenada, Miss. Fully 4,000 visitors were present, and Senator Walthall, the orator of the day, delivered a grand oration.

Dr. T. B. White, our pastor at Homer, La., spent last week in preaching gospel temperance sermons roundabout in Claiborne parish.

In regard to Jefferson Davis' letter in favor of anti-prohibition, the Alabama Christian Advocate uses these strong words: "We can never forgive him until he confesses his great crime and sets himself right before an outraged and disappointed public."

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate has opened a subscription list to raise money to build a monument to Bishop Pierce. Georgia Methodists ought to respond heartily to that call.

In regard to one of our preachers, the Southwestern Methodist says this:

Rev. J. Pipes, a superannuated preacher of the Louisiana Conference, did good service at the Marvin Camp Meeting, and seemed greatly to enjoy the occasion.

In regard to the success of prohibition, the Brookhaven Leader has this argument:

Prohibition does prohibit. Last Monday was the first day we ever saw a meeting of circuit court and not a drunken man in town. Heretofore, on such days, there have been a number.

The Richmond Advocate has the following about a man well known to the people in this section:

Col. George W. Carter, of Washington, D. C., has entered the temperance field. He made an address in his native county of Loudon last week.

One who heard him describes his speech as "thrilling." From the highest point of pulpit success he fell into the depths of political and personal degradation. He has had much experience and can talk knowingly of the monster curse of strong drink. Having joined the cold water army, and taken the pledge of total abstinence for life, none are more capable than he of doing noble work in the grand cause. May this reformation lead to his complete religious restoration!

Rev. C. B. Faris, a member of the Tennessee Conference, died August 4.

Rev. H. C. Kimball has returned, and talks in eloquent strains of the kindly treatment he received from the Northern brethren while at their camp meetings.

POPULARIZING PROHIBITION.—The enemies of any good cause often overreach their aims in the methods employed in opposing it. Their domineering, tyrannical spirit becomes so apparent in these methods, that even those who have been with them on voting day become so disgusted and aroused, that they lose all true friendliness to their view of the question in debate, and array themselves staunchly as their opponents. The whisky assassinations of Haddock and Northrop, both brutal in the extreme, have done more to turn the tide in favor of absolute prohibition than anything that has transpired in all the campaigns in which war has been waged against the liquor traffic. These assassinations have aroused the people from their drowsy attitude and have demonstrated that a tyrant is arrayed against them whom they have nourished, dandled, petted and courted until his spirit has become brutalized and demonized, and ready for the perpetration of any enormities in wickedness for the spread of his iniquitous traffic and the fortressing of his liquid reservoirs of destruction. God speed the day when Christian vocalists of every political type shall join hand in hand for the total abolition of all alcoholic beverages. But if more martyrs are required, we shall still be encouraged by the words of the burning Latimer to his fellow-sufferer in the flames: "Be of good comfort, Master Ridley; play the man. We shall this day light such a candle, by God's grace, in England, as I trust shall never be put out."—Pulpit Treasury.

The "insane prohibitionists" have the temerity to publish the following as an argument against the saloon:

One argument of the whisky interest, viz., that saloons promote the prosperity and growth of communities, has been unswered in Kansas by the convincing logic of facts. In 1880 the population of this State, as shown by the census, was 996,096; in March, 1886, as shown by the State census, it was 1,406,738, and it is now fully 1,550,000. In 1880 Kansas had only 3,104 miles of railway within her borders. On the first of March last the State Board of Railroad Assessors reported 6,208 miles for taxation, and from 600 to 800 miles will be added to this aggregate before the close of the year. In 1880 the assessed value of all the real and personal property of the State aggregated only $160,891,689. On the first of March, 1886, the total was $277,575,363, and for the present fiscal year the returns thus far received indicate a total of $300,000,000. In 1880, there were 5,153 school-houses, 2,514 churches and 317 newspapers in Kansas. There are now fully 8,500 school-houses, 3,500 churches and 700 newspapers. In 1880, only 55 towns and cities had populations in excess of 1,000 each. In 1887, more than 200 towns have each over 1,000 inhabitants, fully 25 have each over 5,000, and four have each over 20,000. In 1880, only 8,868,000 acres were planted in crops. This year the area planted is 16,000,000 acres. In 1880, the value of the farm products of Kansas was only $81,521,000; for 1886 their value was over $264,000,000. For the fiscal year of 1880 the percentage of State taxation was 5½ mills; for the present fiscal year the total percentage levied for all State purposes is only 4½ mills.—Gov. Martin, in Interior.

Gov. Martin expresses the opinion that of the 300,000 male voters in Kansas only about 75,000 would vote for the reinstatement of the saloons. They see that prohibition pays.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA.

Dyspepsia Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA by cleansing and purifying the blood, tones up the digestive organs, and relief is obtained at once.

Rheumatism Is undoubtedly a blood disease caused by an excess of the lactic acid in the blood. Where there is perfect filtration of the blood there can be no rheumatism. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA will remove the poison, supply the acids and relieve the pains.

Scrofula is caused directly by impurities in the blood, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, blotchy eruptions on the face or neck. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA, by purifying the blood, forces the impurities from the system.

Kidneys Through the Kidneys flow the waste fluid containing poisonous matter. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained and poisons the blood, causing pain in the small of the back and loins, flushes of heat, chills. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA acts as a diuretic, causing the kidneys to resume their natural functions.

The Liver By irregularity in its action or suspension of its functions, the bile poisons the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, weak eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling. These are relieved at once by the use of BULL'S SARSAPARILLA the great blood resolvent.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm infections, made more than the surprise of preventing the disease, have been manufactured all over the country, but their short lease of life is generally exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and expose the most frequently the cause of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are unable and feverish, sometimes crying loud and eating ravenously, again refusing whatsoever in fact seeming restlessly to seem, moaning and grinding the teeth, these are the most common symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observant of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its unfailing success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children with a safe purgative and suggesting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged, and immediate relief afforded. Great caution need to exist by every purchaser to be his own judge in the selection, and to see that every bottle he buys of it. The absolute genius of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, Howard Co., Mo.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. V. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, Md.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

THE HOUSEHOLD BABY.

What a joy to human eyes
When it laughs or when it cries!
What a treasure, what a prize,
Is the household baby!

Be its temper rising, falling,
Is it ruling, crowing, squalling,
Still the same dear precious darling
Is the household baby.

If the scene without be dreary,
If the hearts within grow weary,
Baby wakes and all is cheery—
What a rush for baby!

Mamma's eyes grow bright with joy;
Grandpa laughs, and "grandpa's boy"
Gladly leaves his last new toy
To play "bo-peep" with baby.

Sisters from their music run;
Maud has caught the "sweetest one;"
Grave heads down in girlish fun
To make a horse for baby.

Up the everything we know,
Hands and feet "upon the go,"
What a funny creature, though,
Is the household baby!

Bring the puppy and the cat,
Let her pull and pinch and pat;
Puss and pup were made for that—
Made to please the baby.

Bring the china vase, mamma;
Get "the mirror and the hammer;"
Anything to make a clatter
And delight the baby.

Let it clang and clash away
Let it laugh and shout and play,
And be happy while it may,
Dear, mischievous baby!
What a joy to human eyes!
What an angel in disguise!
What a treasure, what a prize,
Is the household baby!

MR. EDITOR: Mother has been taking your valuable paper for seven years. I read letters in the ADVOCATE every week from the children; so I concluded to write one also. I seldom see a letter from Woodville, I have three sisters and no brother. We have been going to school since last September. Our teachers were Rev. J. W. Turner, the Episcopal minister, and Miss A. M. Elder. We are having vacation now. These are my studies: grammar, reading, mathematics, composition, geography, scholar's companion, history. We go to Sunday-school every Sunday. My teacher is Mrs. G. Y. McGehee. Capt. G. Y. McGehee is superintendent. Rev. B. F. Jones is our pastor. We love him very much. Our presiding elder is Rev. J. A. B. Jones. I will close my letter by asking and answering questions. I will answer Sadie E. Neblett's question: "Jubilee" is mentioned fifteen times in twenty-fifth chapter and six times in thirty-second chapter of Leviticus. I will answer Mary R. Anderson's question: The longest chapter in the Bible is Psalms cxix. I will answer Lillie Frisby's question: "Myrrh" is mentioned six times in the Bible—Psalms xix, 8; Solomon's Songs v, 1; v, 13; Genesis xxxxii, 25; Exodus xxx, 23; Matthew ii, 11; Mark xix, 23. I will answer Stella Harkness' question: "Footstool" is found in Hebrews i, 13. I will answer Ida Lee Turner's question: Elisha's father was named Shaphat. It is found in II Kings iii, 11. I will answer Harvey J. Murff's question: A "time to sew" is found in Ecclesiastes iii, 7. Where in the Bible is ice, Philadelphia, snow, golden mice, island, apothecary, gold ring, summer and winter found? Who was Rebekah's nurse? How many times is cypress, pine, and bay tree mentioned in the Bible? With good wishes to the ADVOCATE, I remain,

Your little friend,

JAMES L. MORRIS.

WOODVILLE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter from here, I will write one. My great-grandmother took your paper before she died, and it still comes in her name. We have one of your papers that was printed in 1832. Our protracted meeting has begun. Bro. Lagrone is our pastor, and Bro. Mitchell is our presiding elder. I will answer your question: "A quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog," is a sentence that has every letter of the alphabet in it. I will answer Cora Bennett's question: Belshazzar was the wicked king that saw a hand writing on the wall; and Zedekiah was the king of Israel that had his eyes put out, and he was carried to Babylon. I will ask the little folks a question: Who was beaten to death because he would not eat swine flesh?

Your little friend,

JOE APPLEWHITE.

VAIDEN, Mississippi.

(The editor doubts if any of the cousins can make a shorter sentence containing all the letters of the alphabet than the one Cousin Joe writes above.—ED.)

MR. EDITOR: As you were so kind to publish my last letter, I thought I would write. We are having gloomy weather. It has been raining nearly every day for three weeks. The crops are very pretty. Bro. Johnson is going to commence a protracted meeting near us. I wish you could come and help him. We would like to hear you preach. I hope I have found the answer to your puzzle: "Gold, silver, iron, tin, lead, copper, zink, diamonds, rubies, sapphires, amethysts, coal, quicksilver, jasper and emeralds are minerals which are extracted from the earth. It is all the alphabet. It is the shortest sentence I could think of. I hope it is right." Mr. Judson Harel, our Baptist Sunday-school superintendent, died Sunday morning. He was a good man, and everybody loved him. I will close by asking a question: What king spoken of in the Bible was, head and shoulder, taller than the people?

BERTIE C. FELPS.

GRANGEVILLE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I thought I would write to the ADVOCATE as so many girls and boys are writing. I am a little boy ten years old. I go to Sunday-school. Mrs. Stinson is my teacher. I like her very much. Bro. Patterson is our preacher. We all like him very much. I will answer Mary Hodge's question: Christ's first miracle was turning water into wine. It is found in St. John ii, 43. Stella Harkness', "footstool" is found in St. Luke xix, 43. Where in the Bible is the prophecy concerning dry bones? What was the result? Wishing your ADVOCATE much success.

Your little friend,

PERCY HOLT.

GIBSLAND, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As you are so kind to give the little folks a column in your paper, I will help to fill it. The elder came out here Saturday morning and preached at eleven o'clock, and held Conference in the evening. He preached a splendid sermon Sunday morning and Sunday night. The elder's name was Bro. Kernan. We had a love-feast Sunday evening. It was the first one I ever attended. I will answer Mary Anderson's question: The longest chapter in the Bible is Psalms cxix. I will also ask a question: How many books in the New Testament? Many good wishes to the ADVOCATE.

Yours very truly,

OSCAR E. DAVID.

SUMMERFIELD, Alabama.

A Great Battle in a Sugar Hogshead.

Now I am going to tell you the most astonishing story about cats that I have ever heard. I could hardly believe it, but the gentleman who told me was one of the best and most truthful men I ever knew and he said he knew it was so. It might be true, and I think it is true, but it is wonderful. This gentleman was in the grocery business, and there was a big hogshead of damaged sugar down in the cellar in a dark corner. The sugar was not fit to sell, and the hogshead was left there. A family of rats got into it, and lived there and grew and increased until there were eleven rats of different sizes in the hogshead. They ate up the sugar. They could not climb up the smooth sides of the hogshead, but they made a great noise, and the owner went down and found them. Then he got the store cat and put it on the top rim of the hogshead.

It looked down on the eleven rats for about five minutes. Then it went away and was gone about a quarter of an hour and came back with another cat, and they sat on the edge of the hogshead and looked down for about ten minutes, but they didn't jump in. They went away and were gone a long time and then came back with a third rat, and the three looked down the hogshead for about five minutes, and then jumped in and made an attack on the rats.

But they had miscalculated. The rats fought desperately for their lives; they killed the two strange cats and almost killed the store cat. Its master took it out after it had lost one eye and was terribly bitten. Was it not strange that those cats could calculate in this way and think about it? Nobody can tell how much animals know or how much they can do. To hurt them unnecessarily is cruel, wrong, and has a bad effect on the temper and disposition of the boy or girl who does it.—Presbyterian.

Household.

House-Work.

The drudgery of house-work is often mentioned regretfully. Unremitting toil of any kind may be called drudgery, particularly if the toiler has no heart in the work. And society in many cases has placed a false estimate—an underestimate in the present instance—on certain kinds of labor; a lingering relic of past ages, when all labor was considered degrading, and only the man who did no work, living off the labor of others, was considered a "gentleman." So an erroneous view of the dignity and utility of house-work may have something to do with the idea of drudgery as applied to it. But the happiness and well-being of the family depend on a well-ordered household; and ability in this department is no mean ability. Keeping a house in order, sweeping, dusting, washing, ironing, cooking, baking—to do all these well, and without fretting or complaining, is one of the best gifts and choicest acquirements. And the man or woman who rightly appreciates this ability shows that he himself has passed to a higher plane of intelligence.

Here, as elsewhere, love lightens labor. True, the labor may be, and doubtless many times is, excessive. This should be avoided; yet even then the task will not always be an easy one. But while duties often have their difficulties, they always have their rewards. The human weakness and shortsightedness, which more or less belongs to all, may have now and then overtaken the mothers of Washington, Otterbein and the Wesleys in the quiet of their secluded homes; and at times they may have sighed for a "congenial sphere." But they toiled faithfully, hopefully on; and the great reward came at last—a blessing to them and their offspring, and to all coming ages. To place the subject on the true foundation, the work must be done heartily; there must be a more reasonable and better treatment of those engaged in household labors—more consideration toward them; and there must be a just and proper understanding of the great value of such work in advancing human happiness and well-being.—Religious Telescope.

She Disliked His Invitation.

Bob Burdette insists that he overheard a woman lecturing her husband as follows on board a train: "Now, I'll tell you why I wouldn't go into the restaurant and have a cup of coffee with you while we were waiting for the train: I didn't like the way you asked me. Keep quiet. I have the floor. Not half an hour before you said to Mr. Puffer, 'Come, let's get a cigar,' and away you went, holding his arm, and not giving him a chance to decline. When we met John O'Howdy on our way to luncheon you said: 'Just in time, John; come take lunch with us.' And then, to-night, when we found the train an hour late, you looked at your watch, turned to me, and said, in a questioning way: 'Would you like a cup of coffee?' And I did want it. I was tired and a little hungry, but I would have fainted before I would have accepted such an invitation. And you went away a little bit vexed with me, and had your coffee and bread and butter by yourself, and didn't enjoy it very much. In effect you said to me: 'If you want a cup of coffee, if you really want it, I will buy it for you.' You are the best husband in the world, but do as nearly all the best husbands do. Why do you men seem to dole things out to your wives when you fairly throw them to the men you know? Why don't you invite me heartily, as you invite men? Why didn't you say: 'Come, let's get a little coffee and something,' and take me right along with you? You wouldn't say to a man, 'Would you like me to go and buy you a cigar?' Then why do you always issue your little invitations to treats in that way to me? Indeed, indeed, my dear husband, if men would only act toward their wives as heartily, cordially, frankly as they do to men whom they meet, they would find cheerier companions at home than they could at the club."—Exchange.

Luxuriant Hair

Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dandruff, and the body in a healthful condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, promotes the growth of the hair, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

Frederick Hanly, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, restored my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

Ten Years Younger.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dress cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but now I gladly lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my senses when I first found my hair growing; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."

A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prescott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie H. Bellue, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.

The loss of hair may be owing to impurity of the blood or derangement of the stomach and liver. In which case, a course of Ayer's Sarsaparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the Vigor, may be necessary to give health and tone to all the functions of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly urged that none of these remedies can do much good without a persevering trial and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.

MOORE.—MRS. JANE E. MOORE was born in Bertie county, N. C., December 14, 1822, and was converted and joined the Methodist Church at about the age of sixteen, and from that time to the end of her life, which occurred in Trenton, La., August 2, 1887, she was ever the faithful, consistent, pious Christian who won the esteem and confidence of all in every circle in which she lived. In 1842 she was married to Mr. Washington Moore, with whom she lived in peace until in 1870, when it pleased the Lord to take him, and leave her, with nine children, to fight the battle of life; two sons having preceded the husband and father to the spirit world. These afflictions fell upon her quite heavily; but, with Christian faith and patience, she bore them, trusting that "all things work for good." But the cup of affliction had not yet been emptied: One son after another was buried until she had seen five laid away to await the "last trump." And add to this, that for the last ten years of her life she was an invalid, scarcely hoping to live to see her children grown. But it was in this furnace that she showed the virtues of a consecrated life. She was the sweet, loving, true, devoted mother and Christian—stainless, charitable, patient, hopeful to the end. She said: "I do not want to be impatient; but I am ready. I do not fear death. Pray that I may abide the Lord's time." This prayer was most signally answered, as this bright light faded gently and calmly away, and left this hitherto happy home saddened by a darkness that knows no breaking until the hearts of these sorrowing children and the heart of this sainted mother are reunited in the sinless home of the sainted dead. May you meet again!

T. H. M'CLENDON.

FERRY.—MATILDA PERRY was born January 7, 1813; died in Wilkinson county, Miss., November 5, 1886; was married to George Perry, October 24, 1833. In the year 1843 she was happily converted to God, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which she remained a consistent member until the day of her death. She was a good woman, a good wife, a good mother and a devoted Christian. She loved her God, his ministers and his church. Sister Perry often rejoiced in Christ, her Savior, and praised God for having adopted her into his family. Sister Perry lived well; therefore, she died well.

Her mind was clear to the end. Just before she breathed her last she called her family around her bed; then she bade them farewell and said to them, "Meet me in heaven." She leaves a husband and four children and a large circle of friends to mourn her loss. The community is bereaved, and her once happy home is desolate. The influence of her godly life will long be felt in the church and community where she lived. She has gone to her reward, and the luster of her many Christian virtues lures us onward and upward to join her and the many dear ones who have preceded her to the better land. Yes, after all her trials and sufferings, she is now at rest, and is standing, with God's angels, around the great white throne.

N. J. ROBERTS, P. C.

PURCELL.—Born May 28, 1880; died June 18, 1887, MABEL NAOMIE, daughter of G. W. and M. M. Purcell, Black Hawk, Miss. Weep not, fond parents, that your little darling has preceded you to a beautiful world above. While her little body is quietly sleeping in the churchyard, her spirit is basking in the sunshine of a Savior's love. You have one broken link in the chain that binds you to earth, one golden chord to draw you to the Savior, who says, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." H. H.

MOORE.—Departed this life, on July 29, 1887, LENA MAY, little daughter of A. J. and S. A. Moore, aged seven years, one month and twenty-one days. Though great was her suffering, she bore it like an angel. Little May was a member of the Brandywine Sunday-school, and always loved to be present with a good lesson. May the God of all grace comfort the bereaved ones!

L. O.

MERRITT.—JEROME MERRITT departed this life, October 19, 1886, aged thirty years. He was a member of Pipkin's Chapel, and loved and esteemed by all. Those who knew him best loved him most. The witness of his victory over death have the comforting assurance of a happy reunion in heaven.

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

MCLEAN.—Died, in East Feliciana parish, La., June 30, 1887, MERTIE AUSTIN, infant daughter of R. W. and Sarah McLean, aged ten months and twelve days. "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." C. A. M'LEAN.

HILLIARD.—D'ed, near Belmont Station, Bolivar county, DANIEL HUNT, son of Mr. John I. and Mrs. Mary E. Hilliard. Little Dan was born May 8, 1878, and was dedicated by this writer a disciple to Christ by holy baptism in his very infancy. He came to his death from a wound received from the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of his older brother. All that could be done was done to save his precious life. He bore up under the treatment from knife and needle with a heroism unsurpassed by old or young. Under great suffering at different times, he was heard to say, "O Lord, have mercy on me!" but bore up under it without flinching. When laid upon the table for the fearful operation, he kissed his brother, and said to him: "Ed, I am not mad with you. I know you did not go to do it." Then he looked up at the surgeons, as much as to say, "I am ready now." When dressed and laid in his bed he said, "I shall not be well enough to go to school to-morrow." Within seven hours after receiving the shot his young spirit was released from his frail body. He died July 26, 1887, aged nine years, two months and eighteen days. J. D. NEWSOM.

COLTON.—MRS. MALINDA M. COLTON was born in Amite county, Miss., May 19, 1817, and departed this life in New Orleans, La., July 22, 1887. She was married to Bro. Ethan Colton, September 14, 1839, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church about the same time. Sister Colton was one of that class, who, without any particular demonstrative emotions in religion, exhibited all those private and unobtrusive graces of Christianity which constitute the great basis of true piety, and help to wield a silent, yet constant influence for good; which make up the great strength of religious influence in our world. As a wife, mother and guardian of a family, she was faithful in all their requirements, and long will her virtues tell upon her children. When asked in her last hours, if all was right with her soul, she answered, "Yes, I have not served my God so long for nothing." May all her children meet her in the skies!

A FRIEND.

A Remarkable Recovery that has Added an Idiom to the English Tongue.

In Wheeling, W. Va., there is a colloquialism that is universally understood and almost hourly used. It is heard on the streets when friends meet, and at the railroad stations and steamboat landings when citizens return home: "Can this be Mrs. Kelley?" The episode which these words recall is a touching one. Mrs. Kelley is the daughter of Colonel and Mrs. James Hornbrook, and during the Civil War she was a Florence Nightingale in the strongest, noblest sense. Her arduous labors broke down her health and she became totally paralyzed from the hips to the feet. The trunk of her body was the seat of violent neuralgic pains. After many years of suffering she was brought to Philadelphia on a bed, enduring indescribable agonies in the cars. There she was placed under the Compound Oxygen Treatment of Drs. Starkey and Palen, then on Girard street, and now at 1529 Arch street, in that city. Her home physician regarded her case as hopeless, and it appeared so to her Philadelphia doctors. But at the end of a few months she was restored to the use of her limbs, and at the end of a year was completely restored. She then returned home, married, and has enjoyed life ever since. And when her friends meet her they ask: "Can this be Mrs. Kelley?" A pamphlet giving full details of this and many other cures sent free on application.

Few mercies call for greater thankfulness than a friend safe in heaven. It is not everyone that overcometh.—Dr. James Hamilton.

SICKNESS comes unlooked, and strong men and women are forced to employ means to restore their health and strength. The most successful of all known remedies for weakness, the origin of all disease, is Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier.

One of the rarest of Christian virtues is patience amid unjust, unkind remarks about one's self.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now so Perfectly Made That No One Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.

It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.

It restores the functions of the tear passages.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.

It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.

Getting Hold of People.

There is a question among good people regarding the propriety of many forms of amusement used in connection with Christian work, and it is often noted that such amusements absorb time and thought and energy that should be devoted to definite spiritual work. There is, however, one principle which is worthy of attention, and that is this: amusements, if used by spiritual Christians for religious purposes, may be made of great advantage; but, if they are left in the hands of the worldly and irreligious, they are very likely to be worse than useless.

In some way we are to get hold of people. A certain professional gambler used to make it his business to get hold of the men whom he met, gamble with them, and fleece them. He tried all sorts of ways and methods. Sometimes he would go as a commercial traveler, and offer to sell them goods. He had no goods, and sold none; but he would talk with them until he became acquainted with them, and would get them in his power. If earnest Christians would use amusements to save men, they might make them profitable.

Instances have been cited where Christian men have, by the use of simple methods of amusements, enticed men within the reach of gospel influences; but probably more instances could be found where worldlings have by the same means led unwary souls astray. Christians have no time to be lost in frivolity, and they are to beware how they come down to the level of the world. Still there are ways to find entrance to hearts which at first seem to repel all advances. We must study to find them, and to become in reality fishers of men.

A woman begged her minister to talk with her husband, a stolid, worldly farmer. "What is he interested in?" asked the minister. "Nothing but his cattle and his fiddle." The minister called at his house and talked with him about his cattle. By and by the conversation turned on the fiddle, and it was found the minister could draw a bow, and after trying the instrument he told the farmer he thought he had a better one at his house, and invited him to come and see it. He came and tried the fiddle, and the upshot of it was the minister fiddled him into the church and led him to the Lord.

Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves. Use every right means and method to accomplish the salvation of men. Amusements thus used may glorify God and be an instrument of saving the perishing; but if used by worldlings for worldly ends, they have no part nor lot in the work of the church of the living God.—The Christian.

A Good Investment

is that which yields large returns from a small outlay. Reader, the way is clear! No speculation, no chance, big returns! If you are like most of mankind you have somewhere a weakness—don't feel at all times just as you'd like to—headache to-day, backache to-morrow, down sick next week—all because your blood is out of order. A small outlay and what large returns! You invest in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and soon pure, fresh blood courses through your veins, and you are another being!

CONDITIONS WHICH SHORTEN LIFE.—The most important of the general conditions which shorten life in our day is excessive expenditures of vital force. This may occur in various ways. In the young, if food is improper, or clothing insufficient, renewal does not take place at an age when the expenditure for growth is greatest, and exhaustion rapidly follows. At maturity the passions ripen into activity and their full play, and, if not suitably controlled, cause large and exhaustive expenditure of vital power. Among the poor life force is often exhausted in the struggle for food, and among the rich in the struggle for luxuries, wealth, position and power. Here, owing to wear and tear from anxiety, loss of sleep, and the concomitants, defective digestion and assimilation, waste exceeds supply and exhaustion exceeds renewal.

A Great Legacy

to bequeath to your children, is a strong, clean, pure constitution—better than wealth, because it will never prove a curse. You can not give what you do not possess, but mothers will find in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a wonderful help—correcting all weaknesses, bringing their systems into perfect condition, so that their children, untainted, shall rise up to call them blessed!

There is not a druggist in all the land But always keeps a stock on hand.

WHERE WE FOUND GOD.—The spot is hallowed in memory where the heart was first poured out in real prayer, the closet or the congregation; the shadow beneath the fig tree or the solitary Bethel-stone where quickening came; the Bible, through the transfigured lines of which the soul first saw the opening arms of a heavenly Father, and the unfolding gate of the city of the skies. And if these views of God have come through living men, the tie of friendship begins which makes men friends for evermore. It surely had its part in that appeal of Ruth to Naomi: "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God;" in that parting cry of Elisha after the great prophet when he went up in a whirlwind to heaven, and he saw him no more: "My father, my father! the chariot of Israel and the horsemen thereof;" and certainly in that strong affection of the Galatian Christians, when the apostle bears them record that "if it had been possible, they could have plucked out their own eyes and given them to him."—Dr. John Ker.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

WOMAN'S POWER.

BY JANET JONES.

A man can build a mansion
And furnish it throughout;
A man can build a palace,
With lofty walls, and stout;
A man can build a temple,
With high and spacious dome;
But no man in the world can build
That precious thing called home.

So, 'tis a happy faculty
Of women, far and wide,
To turn a cot or palace
Into something else beside,
Where brothers, sons and husbands tired,
With willing foot-steps come,
A place of rest, where love abounds,
A perfect kingdom—home.

Letter from California.

MR. EDITOR: If the divine art of the old masters had lurked in my finger tips, I should have painted a picture, August 10, and bought immortality.

I saw "the maddest, merriest" crowd of tourists board the San Diego train at Los Angeles, and steam out of the city under the happiest auspices; the bluest of skies above them, the balmiest of breezes playing about them, and the gay talk and laughter sounding above the rattle of the train; but suddenly a crash, a bang, a jar, as if the earth had opened beneath us and the mountains had toppled in, the passengers were hurled into the middle of the car, the air was filled with flying splinters, bolts and bars of steel, and sheets of iron. We had collided with another train, and chaos reigned. It was ascertained that no one was hurt, excepting an engineer with a sprained ankle, a 190-pound Shreveporter with a stitch in his back. A golden-haired Creole (?) from the same locality was convinced that she had not a muscle strained nor a bone broken; so we all went up to view the wreck. There were the mighty engines piled one on the top of the other, like angry giants that had fought each other to the death. The tenders and baggage cars were completely demolished. Nothing was left standing on the track but the passenger coaches; so my faith in special providences was greatly strengthened, for I think nothing but the hand of a loving Father could have saved us in the midst of such destruction. I shall never forget how those faces changed from expressions of joy and happiness to consternation and despair. So my picture would have been one of those turning pictures the old writers tell us of, which were painted "one ways a Psyche, and t'other ways a Gorgon." A rescuing engine came out from Los Angeles and carried us back, whence we took a fresh start on the morrow.

Some parts of this route are very picturesque. Temeculah Canon has long been favored for its austere grandeur of scenery; but, of late years, it has taken on a fresh interest as being the scene of that pretty Californian romance, "Ramona." The Arrowhead Springs is always pointed out to strangers. A huge stone arrowhead, supposed to have been hewn out and set in its place on the mountain-top by the aborigines, points, like a guide-post, to the springs near by. To these healing waters the dusky savages brought all the sick ones of their tribes, and thither still resort hundreds of invalids for the mud baths, which are supposed to be greatly beneficial to debilitated persons. Baldwin's Ranch is almost Eden-like in its peaceful beauty. It stretches away, away, in orchards of oranges, olives, apricots, and acres of grapes: beautiful green meadows of Alfalfa, alternating with the grain fields. Five hundred blooded horses are stabled here, and groups of fat, sleek cattle browse or rest under the live-oak shade. This tasteful and enterprising proprietor has taken one especially commendable step. All the roads in and about his ranch are covered with straw to keep the dust down. If everybody else would do likewise, it would greatly alleviate the greatest bane of this country, which is the dust. We sped over green valleys, long stretches of sandy plains, tunneled mountains, or skirted their rocky sides to such dizzy heights, that it seemed like tempting fate, until we finally reached San Diego, by the sea. The climate here is simply perfect, being remarkably equable, varying but little during the year, and is far milder than any place further north. The city seems half unbuilt. Hundreds of houses are going up, the streets are thronged, the hotels so crowded that one gets a meal under difficulties. A steam-ferry conveys you across San Diego Bay, in four minutes, to Coronado Island. I think Coronado bids fair to be the finest watering-place in the world. The site for the new hotel has been most happily chosen. From the front it overlooks the broad Pacific, and from the rear the calmer bay. The hotel has five hundred rooms, and every one taken for the winter. There is a glass parlor for invalids, fronting the sea, where they can sit and enjoy the grandest of ocean views without encountering its sometimes too stiff breezes; but I'll attempt no further description of the hotel, for one must, indeed, have a clue to thread its labyrinthian passages and corridors. They have also erected bath-houses and boat-houses. We climbed the narrow winding stairs that led up to the Coronado observatory, and the lovely view spread out before us amply repaid us for the wearisome ascent. The "Queen of the Pacific" was steaming into the peaceful, inviting harbor, while the sea beat against the bar just outside in the most menacing manner. The city was teeming with life and animation, and the little island by at our feet embowered in flowers which exhale perennial perfumes. I thought if Ponce de Leon had touched here, he had not coasted further in search of that fabled fountain of youth. I sat me down to enjoy it all, and—

> "I heard, or seemed to hear, the chiding sea
> Say: Pilgrim, why so late and slow to come?
> Am I not always here, thy summer home?
> Is not my voice thy rain, thy wind and sea?
> My breath thy healthful climate in the trees,
> My touch thy medicine, my day thy bath?"

We took seats in the motor-cars one day, and rode far into the interior, through National City to the terminus of the railroad. This was not so entrancing. The whole country was a sandy desert, the only production a thick growth of cactus; and the dust was simply appalling. London smokes and tissue veils offered no obstacle to its penetration.

They say this soil is rich, and will produce anything if they could get water here; but to one accustomed to the moist lands and luxuriant fields of Louisiana this seemed barren indeed. They are preparing to bring water here. They have enterprise enough for anything. These vast plains show a net-work of ditches, and the water-pipes are stacked about in heaps, ready to be laid. Water is a great item in this country. I was told that it cost the city of San Diego $1,300 to sprinkle the streets nine days when the G. A. R. held their reunion there. With the great Pacific washing these shores, this cry for water reminds one of that piteous moan in "The Ancient Mariner:"

> "Water, water, everywhere,
> And not a drop to drink."

From this point we took a bird-like flight to San Francisco. This railroad is said to be the finest piece of engineering skill in the world. They showed us "The Loop," where the train passed over (above) its own track four times in the ascent of a mountain, two engines pulling all the way. "The Castle Gate" was a succession of tunnels.

Here, as elsewhere in the Golden State, there were long stretches of sandy deserts, but the general aspect of the country was more fertile. The valleys looked like emerald isles in sandy seas. Some of the mountains were cultivated to their very summits. Many of the rivers were dry rivers (?), but a few held their floods through the summer, and looked like silver threads winding over the plains. We were completely frozen when we reached San Francisco. That little trip across from Oakland was like an Arctic expedition to us. When we reached the Palace Hotel, beautiful clean wood-fires were burning in the parlor grates, and it was really amusing to see all the poor shivering Southern birds hunt the chimney-corners. Our first move here was to procure warmer clothing. Then we were in a condition to enjoy San Francisco, and I think it the loveliest city I ever visited; and all the land is a goodly land, and much to be desired of men. Nature has certainly been lavish of her endowments here—the majestic ocean, the quiet harbor, the dizzy heights and level valleys. Fruit reaches absolute perfection here, and the parks look as if they were freshly adorned each day with flowers plucked from the upper gardens. No wonder that those early explorers shouted "Eureka! Eureka!" when they first beheld these lovely shores. But my letter assumes a formidable length, and I must desist, although the "half has not been told." Chinatown deserves a chapter to itself alone, so this is only an earnest of what I shall say in another letter: so adieu for the present. Yours,

SHREVEPORT.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., Aug. 20, 1887.

Seven Doors.

MY DEAR BISHOP WILSON: Standing in the midst of this wonderful work, it is impossible for us to realize and adequately grasp the situation. A mighty religious revolution is upon us, or, better, a mighty awakening and impulse toward Christianity. It is God-given, divinely inspired, and, beginning in the middle classes, is both reaching up and ramifying below. We are insufficient for these things. New plans, new methods, new organizations, fresh combinations, self-denial, apostolic zeal, an advance all along the lines is, and must be, the order of the day. The lines of this mission must be laid upon a different plan from any other in which we have labored. The demands upon us, the crisis upon this country, the genius of this people, the spirit and faith of the workers require it. We need the prayers of the church daily. I can not give you an adequate idea of the changes which have taken place since you were here better than by a frail enumeration of the calls made upon us during only the past six weeks.

First opening. My father was written for twice by teachers in a private school of seventy pupils at Shonbara, forty-five miles from Hiroshima. He found a town of three thousand on mountain-tops; twenty earnest seekers after Christ reading the Bible there on Wednesdays and Sundays. Result of visit: Seventeen probationers, Bible introduced by trustees into school, and a pressing invitation to send a native missionary—place never visited before by any Christian worker that we know of.

Second opening. I was written for, and then two weeks afterward was telegraphed for, by a lawyer, two hundred and fifty miles west on the Inland Sea. Wanted a preacher of the gospel. My father went. Result: Was met at the landing by fifty bright young men and several local officials, besides teachers and the lawyer. He held several Bible classes in the school, where twenty-six voluntarily gave their names as desiring to search the Scriptures to see if these wonderful things were so. He was importuned to address the public in the only large hall in the town—a theater—and had an audience of over one thousand of the most intelligent men and women of the city. After hearing him respectfully for one hour and a half, all sitting in the meantime upon the hard pine floor with nothing under them but coarse meal sacks, they thanked him warmly on behalf of the whole city, and earnestly requested he would come again. As an earnest of their sincerity, he was put up at the best hotel, and not permitted to pay one cent of his expenses, even jinriksha hire about the city. I will send you a copy of the letter written by the principal of this school. They ask us to visit them at least once every two months. Not one foreign missionary in all that region.

My dear Bishop, these calls are of God! Will not the Baltimore Conference send a missionary, and without delay? Let individuals send individual missionaries, or clubs of three, or five, or even ten, agree to send and support a single man or woman.

OSAKA, Monday, 7:15 A. M.

I am writing this morning in the school where I am teaching, hoping some one will come by every mail to my relief. At this very moment a pupil, a young man of eighteen, comes to my side for the third time in a week: "Teacher, when will your father go again to my native town of Uajima? My people write me many letters." Do you wonder at our enthusiasm? Our very surroundings inspire us! Christianity is on the aggressive. We are face to face with the enemy—yea, verily, in his very camp. A Buddhist priest sits writing upon this same table which holds my paper, and within short arm's-reach. Idols grin and scowl at me on all sides in this great temple where I am teaching daily; but they are doomed. The Buddhists all over the empire are making preparations to resist us, but it is only a death-struggle. All Buddhism is on its death bed, but there are signs upon the horizon of a gathering storm which might strike this country from center to circumference. There is a modern phase of this religion—a new Buddhism, one of whose institutions you saw in Kyoto, which is aggressive, intelligent, on the alert, and powerful. It has wonderful adaptability and is most strikingly politic, in that it is fathering all the institutions peculiar to Christianity, and reproducing them for the benefit of the ignorant masses, as though the natural and legitimate offspring and outcome of its own paternity. Such a movement upon the part of the Buddhists is both remarkable and dangerous. The increasing intelligence of the people will soon clear away the mists and clouds in the midst of which old Buddhism has flourished; but the thorough reorganization of the new sect, and the rapid spread of efficient Buddhist schools for children upon the best American and European system, means a desperate fight yet to come.

Third opening in the past six weeks. My father, while in Hiroshima during his last visit, was requested by the wealthy founder and president of two private schools to take over bodily his girls' school of twenty-five pupils, incorporating it into one institution with our own, McDonald Institute, of thirty women. This gives us a mission-school for women and girls of over fifty pupils, and entirely self-supporting, and even more; the rent of the chapel is paid by the school as well. A number of these pupils are wives and daughters of physicians, lawyers, and officials in Hiroshima. At least ten are probationers. We want a lady from home immediately for this school.

Fourth opening. The same gentleman, Mr. Kihara, at the same time made this remarkable statement: "I have established these schools in my native city in order that my countrymen might become intelligent citizens. We need to help the government in educating the people of Japan. I am convinced that the people will be most benefited by studying the Bible. I want to do the very best thing for the citizens of this city. I am resolved, therefore, to have the Bible taught daily in my school. Will you (Dr. J. W. Lambuth) come and teach us the holy book an hour a day? I know there will be some opposition at first upon the part of teachers and parents, and I will lose some pupils, but others will come. I want to do the best thing. Will you help me?" These are very nearly his words to Bro. Sunamoto and my father. This, dear Bishop, is very wonderful! These are no human impulses. There is the throb of divine momentum here. Result: My father began teaching the Bible an hour daily. A few pupils left immediately, but the teachers, even to Mr. Kihara's surprise and delight, unanimously agreed to the plan, and some joined the class. There are now, after four weeks' teaching, a number of earnest inquirers among both pupils and teachers, and Mr. Kihara himself has handed in his name as a candidate for baptism. His wife spent two months with us all in Kobe, studying Christianity, expecting to go back and teach the women of Hiroshima. More, Dr. Dukes went down and took father's place, and now he says the desire is to have the school a distinctively Christian institution under the auspices of our church and with a missionary at the head. All this without one cent outlay upon our part. Why should we not have a theological class there under daily instruction? What should prevent our seeing, with an eye of faith, great possibilities foreshadowed in such openings? Let us follow them up! I call for more men immediately! Send us five single licensed preachers—ordained, if possible. If individuals or churches will pay their passage, say $350 each, with $150 more each for outfit here and contingent expenses, I will undertake to see them supported; provided, always, they will be content to put up with what they can get, never less than fifty yen a month. The Board, by approving the men first, could take them up as soon as it was able. Japanese could be studied daily while thus teaching and supporting themselves, so that in two years' time they would be ready for work without expenditure upon the part of the Board, and at the same time accomplish no small amount of Christian work.

Fifth opening. While Dr. Dukes was engaged in teaching Mr. Kihara's school, he was invited by over forty local officials to teach them English an hour a day. This he did, and now they voluntarily request that they be taught the Bible! We need two men and two women in Hiroshima to-day! Who will come and help us?

Sixth opening. I have been requested to furnish a teacher for three schools in Osaka, twenty miles from Kobe, to teach elementary English two hours each day. Salary, ninety yen a month. A Japanese residence provided, and also a house for a chapel. I am teaching here now, holding the place, and anxiously awaiting help from home, that I may be free to assist elsewhere. I am carrying this in addition to two hours' work every night in Kobe. Am only teaching four hours a day in Osaka, however, as two hours are lost in going and coming. Result: Already there are three probationers from these Osaka schools; and how do you suppose I instruct these? Ten minutes each day upon the street walking from the one school to the other. Each member of my peripatetic Bible class has a Testament, and I explain one verse each day. Am not allowed to teach Christianity in the school-hours, of course, except as it comes naturally out of the lesson; hence my street Bible class. You see, sir, we mean to teach an evangelic, aggressive Christianity. The trustees of this school (the commercial school) are said to be some of the most enterprising men in Japan. Chinese (the Mandarin dialect) is taught daily, in view of prospective commercial relations with China.

Seventh opening. Last week an official and wealthy citizen of Kobe (whose son, by the way, graduates this year from De Pauw University, Indiana) called upon me. He intends opening a large private school for over one hundred women here in Kobe, and asks if I will help him secure three lady teachers. He says, moreover, that he would be under great obligations if we would give our personal supervision and counsel.

Can any mission field in the world show such an opportunity for intelligent, evangelical, aggressive Christian enterprise as does Japan at this juncture? Remember the above seven wonderful doors have been thrown wide open in less than seven weeks. My facts might well be questioned if I could not add a hundred more wonderful in the experience of other missions. You can not doubt me when you remember that when you were here only nine months ago we had not one single member or even a probationer. To-day we have thirty-one native members and eighty-five probationers. Besides these, we have five hundred young men and young women under our daily instruction. Three hundred of these are taught the Bible daily. One self-supporting school of fifty women and girls, and one school of one hundred and thirty young men under the immediate auspices of the church. If the Southern Methodist Church can read these facts and refuse the aid which we ask in this, the hour of Japan's great need—the most critical moment in all her history—then our church will be directly responsible for the fate of thousands, if not millions, who are fast drifting into infidelity and agnosticism. This is a country without a religion, so far as the great middle class is concerned. Let us look at France and tremble for Japan! Let us look at Japan, still plastic and warm, stretching out her hands across the Pacific for help, yet at this very hour beginning to crystallize into a permanent shape, and let us, as one man, prompted by inspiration divine, leap to her aid. God help us!

WALTER R. LAMBUTH.

KOBE, JAPAN, June 10, 1887.

MY DEAR BISHOP: You will certainly excuse me one more page after having read so many. Within the thirteen days which have elapsed since the beginning of this letter, two more calls have come to us. First. Eleven of the most prominent physicians of Kobe have asked me to teach them. They are coming two nights in the week. While my instruction is in English and upon medicine, it is an excellent opportunity to present the claims of the gospel, and I shall not be slow to urge these claims. Second. We are asked to furnish another missionary teacher for an important town. We can only pray for help. Third item. A note just in hand from my father: "Baptized ten adults and two children at Shonbara. The people all along the road asked me to come back and preach to them next time." I leave for Hiroshima in two hours to attend Quarterly Conference.

TRUST IN GOD AND DO THE RIGHT.

BY NORMAN MACLEOD.

Courage, brother! do not stumble
Though thy path be dark as night.
There's a star to guide the humble.
"Trust in God and do the right."

Let the road be long and dreary,
And its ending out of sight,
Foot it bravely, strong or weary,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Perish "policy" and cunning,
Perish all that fears the light,
Whether losing whether winning,
"Trust in God and do the right."

Trust no party, church, or faction,
Trust no "leaders" in the fight;
But in every word and action
"Trust in God and do the right."

Trust no lovely forms of passion;
Friends can look like angels bright;
Trust no custom, school, or fashion;
Trust in God and do the right."

Some will hate thee, some will love thee,
Some will flatter, some will slight:
Cease from man and look above thee;
"Trust in God and do the right."

Simple rule and safest guiding,
Inward peace and inward light,
Star upon our path abiding,
"Trust in God and do the right."

The Sunday-School Lesson for September 11, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

GOLDEN PRECEPTS.

Matthew vii, 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."—Matthew vii, 12.

CONNECTIVE.

No verses are omitted between this lesson and the last. There is no connection between them in similarity of subjects discussed. The moral topics treated of are wholly independent of each other. The last lesson taught the impossibility of serving two masters, in the first verse: and all the other verses were directed toward a beautiful and impressive enforcement of the lesson of God's providential care over all his creatures. The present lesson begins with cautions against censorious judgment; then guards against a prostitution of holy things; then most touchingly and encouragingly exhorts to the prayer of faith. In the closing verse, the Golden Rule is set forth.

CENSORIOUS JUDGMENT.

Verse 1. "Judge not, that ye be not judged." The thing forbidden here is not the simple judging of another's character or conduct, whether unfavorable or not, but the rather that disposition to put the worst phase upon a matter, or to think evil, when there is any chance to think good. Uncharitable judging is the thing forbidden. Evidently to be without a different estimate of good or bad conduct would be at variance with the entire teaching of the Bible. For example, the twentieth verse of this same chapter teaches, "by their fruits ye shall know them." One is to judge humanely and kindly, lest a different kind of judgment be shown to him.

2. "For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged." Even in intercourse with his fellows, a man who is actuated by a purpose to deal harshly, and to put the worst construction on conduct, will most surely bring down upon himself unfavorable criticism. If he escapes his just desert in this world, the Bible teaches in Mark iv, 24; Matthew xviii, 24-35; Luke vi, 38, and in many other places, that the great Judge will mete out to man the very measure which man has meted to others.

3. "Why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, and considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?" There is a readiness to see in another's eye a "mote," or "splinter" (which is a better rendering, and contrasts more appropriately with "beam"), than there is to consider or observe well a "beam" in one's own eye.

5. "Thou hypocrite." The hypocrisy consists in the purpose of exposing another's fault under the guise of friendship. The sympathy is feigned, but the gloating over the exposure of the fault is the real motive. "Cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." The most thorough promoter of charitable feelings towards others is to be conscious of our own weakness. "A fellow feeling makes us wondrous kind." Alexander Pope, in his Universal Prayer, expresses what ought to be felt and practiced by everyone, viz.:

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me."

PROSTITUTION OF HOLY THINGS.

Verse 6. "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you." A dog was considered by Jew and Gentile as the most repulsive of all animals. They went in herds in the East, fed upon carrion and garbage, and were coarser and fiercer than others of their species. So also swine were ceremonially unclean, and were considered gluttonous and stupid beyond all beasts. Christianity is brought into contempt when it is forced upon those who ridicule and contemn it. But while there is danger of doing harm in this direction, caution should be exercised lest, in the fear of making religion despicable, we should neglect to urge it upon all, even the lowest of the low, those whose sins are as scarlet. Doubtless, many an opportunity to benefit sinners, neglected through carelessness, has been justified through a perversion of the Scripture, "neither cast ye your pearls before swine."

ENCOURAGEMENT TO THE PRAYER OF FAITH.

Verses 7, 8. Although special instructions in the matter of prayer had been given in this Sermon on the Mount, including a perfect form of prayer, still here the subject is again adverted to, and most impressive illustrations are given to cause men to engage in prayer, and to expect decisive answers. "Ask," "seek," "knock," seem to express increasing intensity of feeling. If one's desire is sufficiently strong to prompt him to ask sincerely, he will go a step farther and diligently seek; and, not content with this, he will try to effect an entrance into an enjoyment of what he seeks and asks. That it might not seem to be sacrilegious for one to entertain this importunate intention to obtain the blessings God has to give, our Father himself encourages them by repeating: "For everyone that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened." Here is an emphatic and unqualified assurance from the all-truthful, the omnipotent One. It is dishonoring to him not to believe it. Of course, the terms must be taken in their real meaning. No man can claim to "ask," whose heart is not in his words; no man can really be a seeker, who does not prove his sincerity by his actions; no man will be thought by God, or even man, to be really knocking unless he should use his utmost endeavors to arrest the attention of the keeper of the sacred domain into which he would enter.

9, 10. "Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?" Wondrous condescension of our heavenly Father to encourage faith in his people, and a most striking illustration is used. No man, whose heart has ever throbbed with the experience of parenthood, would not repel, as a cruel injustice to him, the least intimation that he would neglect to provide for his children when hungry. The New Version has "loaf" instead of "bread." The change seems suggestive, as there is resemblance between a loaf and a stone. So also some fish resemble serpents.

11. "If ye then being evil know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?" Unbelief is not only dishonoring to God, but it is a serious reflection upon the good sense of man. He who thinks that the Father of all would turn a deaf ear to the cry of his creatures, ascribes to him an absence of sympathy and affection which are possessed by even depraved mortals. He who looks around him and reflects how God has created man in his own image, and how he has placed all earthly things under his dominion, and, above all, that he has given his only begotten Son to die for him, and then permits harassing doubts as to God's kindly providence, is guilty of an unbelief which is not only unreasonable, but absolutely stupid. The expression, "good things," is, of course, to be construed according to the divine standard. As children might ask for edged tools because of their glitter, so children of an older growth might ask for those things which are seemingly desirable, but which would in the end prove ruinous. Hence there ought to be understood to every prayer, "Not my will, but thine, O Lord, be done." Luke, writing on the same passage, has a different rendering. Instead of the expression, "good things," he has, "the Holy Spirit"—"How much shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." There is no danger of asking amiss according to Luke, and the gift of the Holy Spirit comprehends all good things. He who has the help, the guidance, the ministration of the Holy Spirit, has the blessed assurance that "no good thing will be withheld from him."

THE GOLDEN RULE.

Verse 12. "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets." Here is the conclusion of the whole matter after all that has been said about the mystery of the Bible, Old Testament and New. It is all contained in this royal law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." How this commends the Christian religion as immensely superior to any system of ethics that this world has ever given! How grandly simple; how admirably adapted to man under all circumstances; how confessedly and beautifully true is this epitome of all the law and all the prophets! An unanswerable argument as to the authenticity of the Christian is that practical one, that it is exactly adapted to man in this life, and that if every individual would be governed by its precepts, peace and good-will would reign universally, and sorrow and sighing would flee away.

"A Complete History of Methodism in Connection with the Mississippi Conference."

MR. EDITOR: We are highly gratified with your editorial notice of our "Methodism in Mississippi," in the ADVOCATE, of August 4. As I am mainly depended on to engineer the sale of the first volume as fast as possible, to obtain means to publish a second volume with but little delay, I ask leave to inform the preachers and others of the terms on which the book may be purchased at our Publishing House. The retail price is $1 50 per copy. The scale of discount is as follows: Less than 12 copies in one order, one-fourth off; 12 to 25 copies in one order, one-third off; 25 or more, 40 per cent. discount. These are the terms adopted by the Publishing House, and I accord with them as equitable.

Here is an opportunity for preachers, and others who may sell the book, to make a handsome profit for themselves. The volume has only been out of press three or four weeks, and I know one preacher whose percentage already amounts to between twenty and thirty dollars. I would be glad to see all my brethren in the itinerancy add to their small salaries in a similar way. I would have the members of all the Conferences which have been set off from the Mississippi Conference to bear in mind that, as all our journals were lost by fire soon after I had completed their use in writing our history, they are dependent on it almost entirely for the history of their own Conference up to the time it was set off. I took as much care in writing the history of all those Conferences as I did our own.

The Nashville, Alabama and Texas Advocates will confer a favor by publishing the above.

Week of Prayer and Self-Denial.

MR. EDITOR: In accordance with the printed program, we observed the week of prayer and self-denial at Crystal Springs. Every night, except Saturday night, we held services in the church, and on Friday morning services for the children. Every service was well attended, and the people manifested great interest in the cause represented. The people were requested to bring anything they might find in their papers, or suggest anything from the Bible on the subject of missions which might prove edifying or encouraging to the work. Many responded, and at every service communications, letters and paragraphs on the subject of missions were read. You would have been delighted in hearing the seven or eight little children, Friday morning, read their selections. It was a week of feasting to many of us, unsurpassed, if equaled, by any in all my experience. These days of prayer and thought and study were crowned by a day of much rejoicing, on last Sunday, the fourteenth.

The collections in all amounted to $50, of which the Sunday-school contributed ten cents per member, and the general aggregate for the church was twenty cents per member. This amount has been sent forward to Dr. John as a free-will offering, and is fully understood and appreciated by the church, and is in no way to interfere with our regular collections, which we now expect to bring up in full.

During the year we have had twelve necessions to the church. The church is in general good condition, and our people rejoice in their abundant and remunerative crops.

Fraternally,

T. H. HOLLOMAN.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, MISS., Aug. 19, 1887.

Dr. Talmage Mistaken.

MR. EDITOR: Dr. Talmage, in his sermon on last Sunday, made the following reference to the Methodist Church:

"The name of the church was given in derision and as a sarcasm. The critics of the church said: 'They have no order; they have no method in their worship;' and the critics, therefore, in irony, called them 'Methodists.'"

(The italics are ours.)

Now, as to the "no order" and "no method," the Doctor is greatly mistaken. Just to the reverse of this, it was "perfect order" and "perfect method" which gave them their name. I could give you numerous quotations to prove this, but do not consider it necessary.

Respectfully,

B. S. RAYNER.

ENTERPRISE, MISS., Aug. 18, 1887.

From the Work.

WAYNESBORO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The week of prayer and self-denial has been faithfully observed on this charge. Prayer meetings were held, and appropriate talks and exhortations given each night during the week at both Waynesboro and State Line. The occasion was highly enjoyed, and proved to be, what we earnestly strove to make it, a season of great faithfulness and spiritual power to the church.

The financial result for the cause of missions was as follows: Waynesboro, $22; State Line, $13. Total, $35. This amount will be forwarded at once to Dr. Kelley.

The third Quarterly Conference for this charge was held at this place, August 13 and 14. Reports were full, and gratifying. Finances all up to date.

Our much-esteemed presiding elder, Rev. R. D. Norsworthy, is an officer of very fine executive ability, and a preacher of no ordinary type; and I dare say that no charge will die a financial death where he goes. His sermon on Sunday was one of extraordinary power. Old gray-headed men wept as little children, and earnestly sued for mercy. That sermon will not fail of its glorious results, nor will it ever fade from the minds and hearts of those who heard it.

Sunday evening, at five o'clock, Bro. Norsworthy gave us a stirring talk on missionary enterprise, emphasizing woman's work, which resulted in the organization of a Woman's Missionary Society of ten active and nine honorary members. Officers: Mrs. E. W. Hand, president; Mrs. J. V. Pitts, vice-president; Mrs. E. J. Davis, secretary; Mrs. A. Lou Edgar, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ada Bradly, treasurer.

Verily, we are progressive.

Yours truly,

E. F. EDGAR.

BLACK HAWK, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: The congregation at Black Hawk met every night during the week of self-denial. Many were greatly blessed; much light was thrown on the missionary work of the church, and we raised forty-eight dollars on the debt, and six dollars on Dr. Lambuth's call. We have not heard, as yet, from the circuit. Yours truly,

J. F. EVANS, P. C.

AUGUST 18, 1887.

VAIDEN, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: At the District Conference I promised to go and see what could be done for a Methodist Church in a community where it was long thought to be needed. We began preaching on August 13, and closed August 19. Organized a society with twenty-seven members. Will proceed to build a church. The Lord was truly with us in demonstration and power.

W. S. LAGRONE.

ALEXANDRIA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I am happy to report some progress in every line of our work. There is, however, a sad need of laborers in this part of our Conference. If the balance of the Conference approximates this part in this respect, then we need at least fifty young men more than we have in the Louisiana Annual Conference. My charge will give to four missionar, industrious, intelligent, earnest, consecrated men as much work as they possibly can do; and if they do as much as they ought, it will handsomely support them. Alexandria, with its adjacent territory, demands a man's whole time and energies; so of Boyce and Lemoth's; so of Lecompte and its territory; so of Pineville and the country around—say, for eight miles. I am working, or rather attempting to work, four times as much as it is possible for me to work, consequently I am nearly or quite worn down all the time, and the work poorly done. I wish our Bishop would call for fifty volunteers this fall—say ten from Tennessee, ten from Georgia, a few from the Memphis, some from Holston, Alabama, Kentucky and Mississippi, each to come to this inviting field for young men. Of course, we need just such men as they need at home—intelligent, refined, consecrated, working men—such as Mr. Lambuth wants in Japan—men that will work as long as they can stand on their feet, and then as long as they can sit or lie down. A pastor for Alexandria, for instance, would preach in Alexandria every Sabbath morning and night; hold the Sabbath-school; lead one or two class meetings, and hold one prayer meeting each week. He would preach at four places, within six miles of Alexandria, each, once a month, on Sabbath afternoon, taking the gospel to the aged, infirm, the poor and the children. I remember very well that I filled twenty-eight pulpits every four weeks; held class at each place, and preached at probably twenty different private houses during the round, and did not think myself overworked when I was a young man. Young men can do it now, and ought to do it, many of them. Mr. Editor, just suppose we could get the men and do the work in this manner, how rapidly would our prayers be answered in the coming of the kingdom! How grandly would we move forward in all the various lines of work assigned us!

I believe this Conference will compare favorably with any other for health. It is doubtless the most needy of any of the older Conferences. We especially need men trained in the customs, usages and doctrines of our church from their childhood. Can we get them?

Yours in Christ,

B. F. WHITE.

LAUDERDALE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Our meeting here, in Lauderdale, closed last night, August 17, with fine results. Fifteen were added to the church, and quite a number converted. The church was greatly blessed and encouraged. Bro. Cunningham, of North Mississippi Conference, helped us two days; Bro. Selby, of West End, Meridian, helped three days. Both did faithful work. The godly men and women of Lauderdale and vicinity did good service. Your humble correspondent is wonderfully helped up. All praise and glory be unto our Father in heaven!

H. P. LEWIS.

STARKVILLE CIRCUIT, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed two most gracious meetings—one at Steel's Chapel, and one at Providence. Bro. N. G. Augustus, of Starkville, assisted me at Steel's Chapel. At that point we received nineteen members. At Providence I had no ministerial help. Results: ten accessions to the church, and more to follow at each place. To God be all the glory! Pray for us.

CENTREVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. Cecil and I closed a good meeting at Gayden, La., a few days since, resulting in several conversions, three accessions, and a general building up of the church.

Bro. Cecil did all the preaching up to the closing sermon, which was delivered by Dr. Adams, so I need not add that we had the best of preaching all the time.

Thanks to these brethren, but all the glory to God!

P. HEWASEE.

BEE LAKE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: By the help of the Lord we have builded him an altar in this benighted, semi-heathen swamp country, and already we can perceive the operations of the approaching kingdom. We believe in a millennium, and that it is not far off, and we want to come to the help of the Lord, so that we may have part in the Master's plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant." We believe Christ has not died in vain, and that he can accomplish all his purposes without us; but we also believe his purposes in our creation was that we be co-workers with him, and we, therefore, do what we can.

We have a little Sunday-school—a very little one; but we feel the Master is ever saying of it, "Harm it not, for there is good in it." We have only one child in our Sunday-school; and this child, until recently, never heard of Sunday-schools, and hardly knew that a Christ had died in expiation of man's offenses, or that there was a people who knew less of God than where he was. Last Sunday I heard this child recite the whole of the First Catechism, Apostle's Creed and Commandments without break; and, after school, he gave my wife, his teacher, fifty cents, which he said he had made himself by not eating his chickens, and which he wanted sent to Japan to help other little children learn their catechisms and get Sunday-school papers.

We feel, Doctor, that we are in line of duty here, searching in the corners and byways for the little wandering sheep. We have not much ambition to crowd others in their work, but feel we can find plenty of the Lord's work where there is no competition. In our lonely walks we meet with the Lord every day, and get new orders and fresh encouragement and strength; and we have learned from the depths of our heart to pray for all men everywhere.

I will have the fifty cents handed you in a few days. Have the name of our little Sunday-school boy, Tewdy Thornton, grandson of a Methodist preacher, put down for fifty cents on your Lambuth call.

Yours truly,

PETER JAMES.

HENNINGTON CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The annual convocation was held at the Hennington Camp Ground from July 28 to August 3—one week.

Many predicted a small attendance; but the various committees on improvements and accommodations had faith for greater things. The preachers' tent was renewed and refitted. The tabernacle was re-covered and made more comfortable, and all the other comforts and improvements necessary to pleasure and success were provided. Twenty-eight or thirty preachers in all were in attendance during the week, among whom was Dr. C. K. Marshall, now past his three-score and ten, who preached with his usual spirit and energy, greatly to the delight and edification of the people. Dr. C. G. Andrews was also with us some days, preaching the opening sermon Thursday night. Dr. C. F. Evans, of New Orleans, and Bro. J. S. Oakley, from the North Mississippi Conference, did us good service. These were the only brethren present from other Conferences.

The preaching was good to edifying. The preachers were in the spirit, and earnest in their appeals to the people. The number of conversions were reported at thirty-five or forty, though the number of accessions to the church was comparatively small. The congregations were large at every service. On Sunday the audience was larger than for many years, the great tabernacle, which seats nearly 4,000, being unable to accommodate the crowd.

On Monday evening the Woman's Missionary Society held a mass meeting. No camp ground association was formed, but many members were added to various societies in the surrounding county and towns. The propriety of establishing a high school on the camp grounds is now under consideration by the association.

T. H. HOLLOMAN.

FANNIN, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: My meeting at Andrew Chapel, embracing the fifth Sabbath in July, resulted in quite a number of conversions, and eight accessions. The church was revived, and there was the most wonderful awakening I ever witnessed.

Where Shall the Line Be Drawn?

The most thoughtful Christians all admit that a great conflict between the principles of pure religion and its emasculated type, known as continentalism, is being rapidly projected upon us in this favored land. The point of attack and defense most salient seems to be the great temperance reform, including prohibition as the head-centre. I have seen no one more anxious to forward this cause than myself: but alongside of the "matchless evil," and measurably sustaining it, is the weakening and breaking down of Sabbath observance. In its flagrant form this is generally recognized as propagated by the same agencies and individuals as is the liquor traffic. But just as Dr. Howard Crosby ands and encourages the whole business by his lax notions about wine drinking and high license: just as the moderate drinker is a constant decoy for making others drunkards, and often becomes one himself: just as high license is utterly delusive, and serves only to involve the State more deeply in complicity and crime, even so do the utterances and practices of many Christians, as sincere as Dr. Crosby (perhaps, more so) encourage and lead on to the lowest forms of Sabbath desecration. The more exalted the functionary, and the more influential the organization that practices or winks at any form of this sin, the greater the evil done.

I know that it is difficult amid our railroad "environments" and connections to know where to draw the line. But in the peculiar and imminent danger that now threatens to overwhelm our land churches and Christians had better be too strict than too lax in their own conduct. Specially ought our preachers, Conferences, camp meeting associations, etc., representing most eminently the posture of the church, to avoid every occasion of offense. These ought to draw the line close up to the path that Jesus trod.

By the way, Christ's justification of his disciples for plucking and eating the wheat that overhung their path on the Sabbath has been often twisted wholly out of its true meaning. It is made to exonerate the laborious preparation of sumptuous meals on the Sabbath. It were more reasonable to make it teach us to live more simply, and with least labor possible, on this holy day. Much less toil in rubbing wheat in the hands, and so eating it, than in preparing and cooking the simplest hoe-cake. Another Scripture in same connection, and equally misused by church members, is, "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." Query: What makes the chief part of man? His bodily appetites and whimsies? Or is it not rather his spiritual being? This demands the improvement which a Sabbath of rest and worship alone can give.

There can never be any true, general observance of the Sabbath as a day of quietness and rest so long as railroads run their trains on this holy day. We, as preachers, have done much to sanction and encourage this ungodly practice by using the said trains. True, it is generally in the line of our holy calling. But every Christian's calling is, or ought to be, holy to him if he be where God would have him. Now, when a Christian merchant sees his minister board the train, Sunday morning, to reach an appointment, he has strong warrant for being equally economical of week-day hours; and so he sets out for New York to add to his gains, so that he may give more to his preacher, help build that church or pay for that costly organ. Is God well pleased with such sacrifice from preacher or merchant? I trow not! Even our Bishops fail to realize that by appointing our Conference opening on Wednesday, instead of Thursday, they bring nearly one-third of the members into the dilemma of neglecting committee duty or traveling on the Sabbath to be on hand one day before the opening of Conference.

Our camp meetings along thoroughfares generally keep open gates on Sabbath, thus encouraging Sunday excursions, buying and selling tickets—leading directly to forgetfulness on the part of restaurant keepers that Sabbath has arrived. So the sale of cigars and many luxuries proceeds, breaking down the "Sunday law" these very Christians have, with great difficulty, procured to be enacted. Presently a prominent preacher, led off by the whirl of business arrangement, steps up and purchases a cigar from a lay brother. The world looks on and laughs, the scoffer sneers, and the train rolls on. Where this overflowing tide will sweep us to God alone can foresee. Where shall we draw the line? My own conviction is that nothing less than a strict adherence to the divine command, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," will avail. Halfway and compromise measures will not answer God's just demands. I am credibly informed that many camp meetings keep rigidly shut during the twenty-four hours recognized as Sunday, and are abundantly blessed. Let us follow God's command. He can and will overcome minor difficulties. The Sunday attendance might be less, and yet the real result far better in all that the church is ordained to advance. This is written with the utmost charity and good-will to those who differ with me.

Prohibition in Mississippi.

The friends of temperance in Panola county, on July 18, last, achieved a signal victory in favor of prohibition. The whisky element insisted upon an election to decide for or against license. They secured the requisite number of petitioners, and the election came off at the time above mentioned. The result was a majority of 1,275 in favor of prohibition. The whisky traffic in Panola county has thus been buried more than a thousand fathoms deep, counting a fathom to the vote. Several lessons are to be learned from this victory which may be useful to the friends of prohibition who have yet to win the battle.

1. The canvass was a short one. Only two weeks intervened between the time the election was ordered and the time it came off. This was arranged by the Board of Supervisors at the suggestion of the prohibitionists, who thought it would be a wise plan. The result proved the wisdom of the plan—a short canvass.

2. It was an earnest, spirited canvass, entered into with a purpose to win, and yet it was conducted in the spirit of kindness, without bitter crimination and violent or demmeciatory language toward those who favored the whisky traffic. "Fortiter in re, suaviter in modo," is a good motto, and suggests a winning policy in this great temperance revolution.

3. The preachers of the county took an active part in the canvass. At a preacher's meeting, held on the day of the county prohibition convention, it was resolved to utilize the pulpit and the pastors' influence in favor of prohibition. A number of colored preachers took part, and entered heartily into the spirit and plan of this meeting. It was further suggested that all the preachers of the county be invited to co-operate in the work prescribed by the meeting. Accordingly, on the very next Sabbath, a number of pulpits opened fire, as from masked batteries, upon the ranks of the astonished enemy, and in favor of prohibition. "I do not understand this Sunday work," said one of the friends of whisky. Let the preachers all be put to work—not one or two great preachers only in the towns and cities, but the home force throughout the county with their own congregations.

4. The colored people are getting tired of the reproach, that "a bottle of whisky can lead the negro," and are coming over to the side of prohibition. Let their preachers, teachers and other leading characters be judiciously managed, and they can and will do much toward controlling the masses of their race. Panola county has a majority of colored voters: yet a number of their leading characters did effective service for the cause of prohibition, and by their earnest efforts contributed largely to victory in the late election.

5. Prohibition argues cogently its own cause. Local prohibition had been in force for some time, there being but one beer saloon in the county. The good effects of this state of things were plainly seen and felt, and public sentiment was steadily growing in opposition to the liquor traffic. It is estimated that only sixty-five white men in the county voted for whisky.

6. The vote by counties is the best plan; especially in those States which are doubtful, and all are doubtful at the outset. The grand old commonwealth of Mississippi is falling into line by counties, and joining the triumphant march for "God and home and native land." We hope our Legislature will postpone submitting a constitutional amendment until a large majority of the counties have given their voice for prohibition. Then we can enter hopefully into the contest on a larger scale, and by constitutional amendment give the coup-de-grace, the finishing blow, that shall destroy the deadly traffic throughout the entire State.

T. C. WIER.

From Kentucky.

MR. EDITOR: As my many friends among your readers feel an interest in my welfare, please allow a small space for this letter. By the direction of my physician, after convalescing from my long spell of sickness, I left home on July 6 to recuperate my health in the pure air of my native State. Under the blessing of God, the trip has proven wonderfully benefitial, and my health and strength have rapidly returned. I now weigh 170 pounds, and hope to return about the first of September, in my usual good health, and enter the Master's work with renewed energy and thankfulness in my humble sphere.

Having extensive relations here, I have traveled around considerably in this, the central portion of the State, and am glad to find Methodism alive here. Have had the pleasure of worshiping with Bro. Caudiff, of the Springfield circuit; Bro. Caywood, of the Mackville circuit, and Bro. Speer, of Perryville station. In the person of Dr. Speer I found an old Mississippi pioneer preacher who had piloted Bishop Soule through the swamps of Mississippi and Louisiana, and preached for a number of years, commencing back as early as 1839 and '40, in the Conferences of Mississippi and Louisiana. I felt like I had met an old friend when he told me he had labored with Winans, Drake, J. G. Jones, and other pioneer preachers of the Mississippi Conference; and when he began to inquire about Drs. Hunnicutt, Lintield, Watkins, Bro. Ben Jones, Bro. Thomas Reid, and others, both laymen and preachers, some living and some dead, and told me to remember him kindly to all that were living, I felt like I had met a brother from home. The old Doctor is hale and hearty, is doing a good work at Perryville, and I found him to be a man of learning as well as deep piety—a man full of faith and abounding in good works. In 1863 he transferred to the Louisville Conference, but is now a member of the Kentucky Conference (called here, the upper Conference).

I am glad to find that in this old whisky State prohibition is getting a foothold and is engaging the minds of the people. I am sorry to see such a large majority in Texas against the prohibitionists, but am not discouraged. I am still of the opinion that local option is all we can expect just now, and that we had better work on that line for the present without asking constitutional amendments by States, prohibiting the manufacture and sale of whisky. I fear our convention at Jackson made a mistake in asking the Legislature of Mississippi for the submitting of such an amendment to the people.

Health is very good in this portion of the State, and all the watering-places are largely attended. Praying the blessing of God upon the ADVOCATE and upon the labors of all the brethren of the Mississippi Conference, as well as elsewhere, I will close.

IRVIN MILLER.

ALTON SPRINGS, Kentucky.

A Generous People.

MR. EDITOR: As many of our preachers are telling, through the dear old ADVOCATE, of their poundings and successes, etc., I thought it right also for this scribe to say something for his people. We came to the parsonage the last of December, 1886, and found it ready for us, with a good supply of the things necessary for the physical man. The parsonage was comfortable, and the people, especially the ladies, received us with warm-hearted and generous expressions of kindness and appreciation. Ever since that time there has been a gentle breeze. Besides this, we have had two storms; one about three months ago, and one about two weeks since. The pounds and packages are too numerous to mention, but were all that was necessary for the larder, besides a good supply of cash for our pocket. One feature of the storms was that there was not the slightest intimation given to the pastor or any of his family, that any such thing was thought of until it was upon us in all its force. This preacher feels that it is a delightful service to give the people the best things from his treasury, new and old. Graceful appreciation by a congregation is rewarded by a loving and grateful ministry of spiritual things, or ought so to be. Well, we have had some drops from the shower of spiritual good which we are expecting constantly.

At one of my appointments (in the country) I held a protracted meeting for five days, and, as a result, we have received seven from the world and four by letter, with more to follow. We have three more meetings to hold at our prominent churches. If the Lord favors us with a revival, I will give you some notes of it.

We are all in sympathy with our neighbor, Bro. I. W. Cooper, who has so recently been bereaved of his dear little daughter, Florence: but the Lord knows how to comfort his servants. Since the Savior has said, "I will send the Comforter," we know only to pray that the Lord will verify his promise.

Ministerial Education.

Since my note in the ADVOCATE a brother writes me he will support one of our young preachers at Centenary for one year; another that he will board two of them at Kavanaugh College for $100; another has sent for a note for himself and one for a friend; and still another, from Louisiana, says, if his Conference has no educational association, he will give ours his note for $50.

We are going to educate these young men. If the brethren will only deny themselves a little, or realize more perfectly their obligation, the burden will be light; but it must be borne. What church will undertake the education of one of them? Write to me, naming the young man and the college to which you will send him.

Briefs.

The papers give an account of a wealthy church member who paid ten dollars a day while away from home to have his favorite dog cared for. When he returned home, he went to church, participated in the Lord's Supper, and gave five dollars to the collection for missions. Ten dollars a day for his dog, and five dollars a year for the salvation of the heathen!

Here is the great argument, the irresistible argument, in a nutshell:

"Something now is, something always was, or some time nothing was. If some time nothing was, then something began to be. Then something created itself; but to create is to act, and a thing must exist before it can act. Therefore, if something created itself, it existed and did not exist at the same time, which is absurd." Hence something has always existed, and that something is God. Since supreme intelligence has superintended the organization of the universe, the evidence of this august power is stamped upon every part and portion of the celestial organism.

The prohibitionists of Maryland have brought out a State ticket, of which the Baltimorean has this to say:

The ticket, then, is one well worthy of support, viewed in any aspect. Its moral status is absolutely indisputable; its ability none can question, and its claims upon all who wish the cause it represents success are as strong as the most ardent advocate of prohibition could desire. If with such a ticket temperance can not win, it will at least receive such a support as will cause its opponents to tremble for the probable consequences in 1891. It appears to have been everywhere received with approbation, accompanied by an expression from its adherents to do all that within them lies to secure its triumph. Such unanimity is an augury, the meaning of which can not be misinterpreted.

Canon Wilberforce said many wise and strong things during his sojourn among our people. He worked well for the prohibition cause, and his utterances always commanded attention. Among other things which he said, we call attention to this:

At an address delivered by Canon Wilberforce, at Chickering Hall, New York, the Sunday before his departure for England, he said: "If I were to add anything to the supplications in the prayer-book, I would add this: 'From all the paralyzing cant of an unfelt devotion; from all the God-defying hypocrisy of an uplifted voice and a down-hanging arm: from all the miserable mummery of a grand external ritual and a selfish, unChrist-like daily life, good Lord, deliver us!' The only thing that Christianity wants just now is Christians."

The following from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate is one of the many kind things written of the editor by his brethren of the Methodist press:

We are sorry to see that another gifted editor has surrendered to the heat and overwork of the tripod. Sooner or later the editorship of a great church paper, where there is but one editor, the man of all-work, will kill out the incumbent. The last NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE says:

> The editor, acting under the advice of his physician, left yesterday morning for the Hot Springs, in North Carolina, where he hopes to regain the health that has been gradually going down for several months.

We have more faith in the cool breezes of North Carolina, and the absence from the editorial room, to heal and restore Dr. Carter, than we have in the Hot Springs. But by whatever means we wish him a speedy recovery.

Off and Away.

When I concluded to visit the Springs, I also determined to take the most direct route. This was over the Northeastern to Meridian; thence over the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad to Hot Springs, N. C.

From New Orleans to Meridian, in daylight, one sees the progress that has been made in that pine-woods region in the last five years. Two great industries are being rapidly built up—the lumber business, and the pitch and turpentine trade. The resources in these directions seem to be inexhaustible, and the people seem to be developing them with commendable zeal. Quite a number of thriving little towns have sprung up along the way, there being about twenty-five from New Orleans to Meridian. The church of Christ seems to be keeping pace with the progress made in the material development of the country, for in almost every town I could see the church-spires pointing upward, reminding the people that there is a God over all, who is to be served here below. How wonderful is that zeal which prompts the preacher of the gospel to put himself in the front of civilization, and move along ahead of its advancing tides, that the people may have the benefit of the news from Heaven! This missionary character of our religion is one of the clearest evidences of its supernatural origin. Our wide-awake presiding elders and pastors have planted the banner of our Zion on many hill-tops along the route, and built up quite a number of congregations, who worship God after the fashion of "the people called Methodists."

I did not stop long enough in Meridian to see anything of the town, or of the brethren who lived thereabouts.

From Meridian to Rome, Ga., I was snugly tucked in a sleeper, enjoying a refreshing rest, and preparing for the sights and scenes of the coming day. In the little corner of Georgia, across which we ran into Tennessee, I saw nothing specially worthy of mention. That part of Tennessee through which I passed from Cleveland to Morristown is a very different country from what I expected to see. Instead of a rugged and broken and mountainous region, I found a country of gently rolling hills and most beautiful valleys—a country in which a landscape painter would be perplexed at the profusion of material for his pictures. The Hiwassee, the Sweetwater, the New Market Valleys photograph themselves upon my mind; and there they remain as gems of beauty. I was continually reminded of the words of the Psalmist while looking out upon the scenery of East Tennessee. His words appear to be a perfect description of much that I saw: "The little hills rejoice on every side: the pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn." From what I saw of Knoxville, from the train, I judged it to be a progressive city. Very many houses I counted in process of erection, and the signs of thrift apparent in all directions.

Sometimes a traveler can tell where he is by the talk he hears as he passes along. I was not long in finding out that we had passed out of Georgia into Tennessee by the drift of the conversation on the cars. The prohibition movement became the general topic of talk. The people are evidently stirred on this question. I heard one clerical-looking individual declare that the preachers, by entering into this contest, had done more harm than whisky drinking had done in five years. I did not believe any such absurd statement, though I knew nothing of his point of observation. I was quite sorry to come to the conclusion that he was a Methodist preacher: but the evidence was conclusive—he carried a pair of saddlebags.

At Morristown I left the main line, and we were soon winding along the banks of the Pigeon river, a broad stream of sluggish-looking water running through a rich valley, which was covered over with a very fine prospect of an abundant harvest of corn. Then we came to the French Broad, a river that dashes its waters over the obstructing rocks in a way that attracts attention immediately. Here the mountains began to appear, lifting themselves for hundreds of feet up towards the sky. To a Louisiana mud-sucker a mountain is such a strange thing that it has to be studied before anything can be said in regard to it.

At 7:15 o'clock P. M., the day after leaving home, I landed at these famous Hot Springs, of Western North Carolina, where I hope, with the blessing of the Lord, the needed recuperation for both mind and body will be found. C. W. C.

Is It Demoralization?

Twice during the past month I have been at services in the church where the pastors have expressed the hope that, the commencements all being, over the church would recover from its demoralization and attend regularly to religious duties again. One of the pastors was a D. D., and the other expects to be. The one got his dub at a college commencement, and the other expects to. The former knows by experience how much better he has preached since, and the other is almost bursting with expectation gathering expansive force through his zeal to be there when it is done. I do not know why they should call it demoralizing—they both love to sit on the rostrum. The chairs are there to be filled by the most dignified people in the audience—they are of that sort. All who sit around them are the same sort. I see no reason under these circumstances why demoralization should go on so rapidly.

Perhaps the brethren, when they read this, will say that I have taken the term demoralized too literally—they do not mean it in the most rigid sense. Accepted. But they ought to remember that words unqualified in any way must be construed literally. Names given characterize the thing named, and a demoralized church is a backslidden church. I raise the question, Are they backslidden—demoralized? We ask, moreover, Are college commencements, per se, demoralizing? To ask is to answer: No workingman is demoralized by showing off his work. If his work is unworthy, demoralization transpired long ago—not just as he shows his shoddy work. To exhibit good works is Christian—eminently. A young man who has learned to speak or declaim well, or a young lady who has learned to play or sing or read well, is no sinner in showing how well. I listen with as much real Christian thankfulness to the speech of the boy as I do to the sermon of the D. D. It is as fresh and as free from monotonous platitude. There is more spring in the way he says it. One sometimes feels democulized by the langnor of an old stager saying his prayer for the nine hundred and ninety-ninth time exactly as he heard the same man say it when he was debating whether to chew gum and be a girl, or chew tobacco and be a man.

There is growing among us a procrustean style of measuring Christianity by the number of prayers we say, or the number of public services we attend. I have even gotten out of bed after my first nap upon calling to mind that I was so sleepy when I lay down that I forgot to say my prayers. I was deeply grieved to think I had thought so little of him who had cared for me through the day. There was an old "crazy," whom the boys used to ask, "Aleck, have you had your dinner?" He would say, "Dunno; but I'll see;" and with that would thrust his finger down his throat. According to results, he would answer yes or no. Some of us do very much like Aleck. The fact was Aleck's stomach was such a fine one that it needed some experimenting to satisfy its owner that he had any at all—he was the farthest remove from dyspeptic. But he was wrong elsewhere. So in religion I learned by and by that there was a sweetness in gratitude that sang me asleep when prayers rendered me wakeful. Sleep was God's gift brought by the angel which closed my eyes with his wing, while he whispered to me a dream of some beautiful land or life; and the spirit stole away, leaving the weary body safely resting till its return. Since I learned the better grace of God, I have "sung of his mercy," and my soul has delighted itself in praising his goodness. I have quit saying, "You demoralized soul, get on your knees, and repent of that sweet dream you had when you ought to have been agonizing in prayer." I have often thought that angels never agonize—that is, only beating their wings against their sides; but they stretch them and fly away singing. Which is the demoralized angel—the singer or the flapper?

There is another feature connected with commencements, viz: The people have been entertaining friends. Not to make a paradox, entertaining is not very entertaining. Much of it resembles work wonderfully. A housewife who entertains thirty visitors during the day feels as if the fun had become stale before night. If that woman goes to sleep without saying her prayers and dies before morning, I want to know the name of the angel who would bar the gates of heaven against her. The D. D., above referred to, was holding his Wednesday night prayer meeting. Several of the entertainers were present, despite the fact that their company was just gone. Yet they were there listening to a long talk most patiently, and told that they were demoralized! I had been the guest of one of those good women. She had looked to me like Martha while at dinner—here she was a Mary. I wondered if Jesus would not have said: "Ah! Martha, I see at last thy sweet works and thy sweet faith have made thee and Mary alike." T. A. S. A.

Memories.

MR. EDITOR: In my recent imaginary wanderings about Andrew Chapel and Gomley's Pond, other incidents which occurred have come vividly to my mind, which will serve to show what developments forty years have made in the church, and what changes in society.

In those days I had an occasion to celebrate the rights of marriage for a minister. As usual, the occasion was one of glee and happiness. The company was select, and, though at a substantial Methodist house, wine was freely served; social conversation became glib, and it was suggested that wine might have something to do with it. A Rev. D. D., to show that his head was level, walked a seam across the spacious room. Now, Mr. Editor, up to that time it had not even occurred to me that anything wrong was going on. What of to-day?

Not long after I was called upon to marry another minister. The evening before the nuptials the bride's brutal brother knocked her down, and dragged her on to the street by the hair of her head, swearing vengeance against any justice or minister who would dare to marry them. While performing the ceremony I kept one eye on the door, looking for a row; but all was quiet. However, the monster, after a few days, determined to execute his threat. He placed himself on the corner of the street, on Sunday morning, where he knew I would pass going to church, with a cowhide under his coat. Providentially, or otherwise, just before I got to the place I fell in company with two other gentlemen, and he did not see fit to attack us three. Some days after, providentially or otherwise, he was taken suddenly sick; thought he would die, and sent for me to make his confession. This ended the matter. I have always thought my courage on that occasion was more commendable than my prudence.

As this is the set time to abridge expenses to pay the missionary debt, Bro. Keen, a prominent factor in building Andrew Chapel, set an example worthy to be imitated. When his lovely little daughter died, and it was asked if he would put a monument over her grave, he said: "No. It would do her no good; but the money would do Andrew Chapel a great deal of good." Here, as teacher in the Sunday-school, I first saw Lians Parker, and was impressed with his lecture to the children.

It was thought that the time had come to inaugurate a new regime in the city for the success of Methodism. Good and true men had gone before; but a change in tactics was necessary, and the concentration of forces was called for. In 1848 Rev. J. C. Keener was called from another part of the field, and took charge of Poydras Church. In 1849 Rev. H. N. McTyeire followed, and took charge of Lafayette, Steel and Andrew Chapels; and in 1850 the Rev. J. B. Walker followed, and took charge of Poydras Church, J. C. Keener taking the district. These men had greater faith because of their ignorance of the great difficulties to be encountered. No three men ever endured more, labored and suffered more to develop Methodism in New Orleans than this trio.

In the spring of 1849 I visited the city; heard H. N. McTyeire preach in Lafayette Church. After the sermon, he read a bill of charges and specifications against some one. The paper was emphatic, and was read with greater emphasis, which showed that there was trouble in the camp. This trouble culminated at the Conference, in Shreveport, La., in 1849, which gave to this Conference more notoriety than any other I ever attended, save one. Another source of trouble was the poverty of the church and the meagre support of the ministry. A year before the Rev. B. F. Brown had fallen at Steel Chapel, with yellow fever. It was stated he had suffered great apprehension upon the question of bread. I heard H. N. McTyeire say, in all seriousness—I hope he will pardon me for remembering it so long—"I expect to perish to death." I was more fortunate. My father, though a devout Christian, was cursed with a desponding temperament. He had great fears of drouth, famine and starvation. I was alarmed when a child, and never expected to live to be grown—thought to perish was inevitable. I got over my scare early in life, and since have had no fears. While the lilies bloom and the young ravens are fed, I will be confident. In those days Father Wm. Stevenson, who had been an itinerant preacher all his life, for five years as a superannuate, got the respective sums of $2, $2 40, $8, $9 and $40. If in this particular the progress of the church for the next forty years is in proportion to the past, the young men of the Conference may well rejoice that they were born when they were.

At the close of 1847 we attended the Conference, which met in Shreveport, La., December 26. Getting there was a experience. We decamped at Compte, on Red river, seventy five miles from Minden. Instead of a Pullman Palace, we were met by a drove of twenty-five or thirty horses, mules and ponies and a wagon full of saddles and bridles. Now, for a man who had never straddled a donkey before in all his life, as was the case of these preachers, to be put on a mule, with a pack-saddle, for two long days' travel, was a great trial of affliction. Our journey was vitalized by the good cheer of Bishop Paine with his experience of horseback itinerancy. J. P.

Rev. Daniel Curry, D. D. LL. D., one of the leaders in Northern Methodism, died in New York, August 17, 1887.

The jury who found the Royal street saloonist guilty of violating the Sunday law are to be approved for their conduct. The penalty pronounced by the court was ten days in prison and $200 fine. There are others under indictment, and it is to be hoped that as good juries as this one will have the disposal of them.

Bishop Duncan has transferred Rev. Fitzgerald S. Parker to the Los Angeles Conference. He goes in the proper way, his health needing the change, and not fixed for any particular charge. In the Bishop's hand, he will serve at any point, and, as his record shows, will do his duty. He will leave about October 1. We will lose one of our best men, and the Pacific coast will gain a choice young man and able divine.

By letter from Dr. D. W. Foster, we learn that Rev. Jeptha Landrum, our pastor at Melville, La., is dangerously ill. Let prayers ascend in his behalf.

Prof. Spencer F. Baird, for thirty-seven years at the head of the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, died August 19. He was an associate member of nearly all the scientific societies of the world.

Rev. J. W. McLaurin, agent of the American Bible Society, made the ADVOCATE a call Friday. He has been on a tour through Southwestern Louisiana. He is ready to employ suitable men as colporteurs, and we trust he may get them, and the Word of Life be distributed in all needy sections.

Miss Emma Torney died at Seashore Camp Ground, August 21, 1887. She will be remembered as having for years led the prayer meeting singing at Carondelet. Her pastor will, no doubt, furnish a suitable obituary.

Peter James has returned to Bay St. Louis, his health having again failed him.

In the article, headed "Moss Point Offering," in the last issue of the ADVOCATE, "obligation" is put for "oblation," which the Rev. J. P. Drake informs us is the word he wrote.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens, a Vanderbilter, has been doing noble work in New Orleans during the summer. He has been preaching for absent brethren, and once or twice a week at the out-door meetings. He has also raised a debt on Soraporu Street Church, and been generally useful. If he is a fair sample of young Vanderbilt preachers, our Nashville University is doing a good part for the church.

Rev. D. S. Watkins, a superannuated preacher of Western Texas Conference, died suddenly at Nacogdoches.

The Mobile District Conference have elected the following as Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground: William Otis, W. J. Hearin, C. H. Lindsey, A. C. Danner, of Mobile, and J. H. Lakin, of Montgomery. All of them are good men.

Writing of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes: "It is little wonder," remarks a Boston Herald contributor, "that he begins to feel worn and weary with overwork, and to fear a breaking down of that strength with which he is as yet blessed. He makes few visits and endeavors to accept few invitations, except from closest and oldest friends. He is usually at home to personal friends a part of each afternoon in the week, with possibly one or two exceptions. There in his study, among the books that he loves best—books that, after all, are one's best and truest friends—Dr. Holmes passes the great part of his time nowadays."

President Fitzhugh, of Whitworth College, was in the office last week. He was returning to Brookhaven greatly encouraged by the outlook for his college the coming session. May his brightest hopes be fully realized!

The "crushing defeat" of prohibition in Texas has not disheartened Bro. Briggs, the talented editor of the Texas Advocate. Read this:

"The Texas Advocate, the leader of the religious press in the Texas prohibition gauntlet, does not give up the fight."—Central Advocate, St. Louis.

Certainly not. We shall fight the ship as long as the timbers hold together. We hope to live to write the obituary of the liquor traffic in Texas.—Texas Advocate.

One of our brethren writes: "Some officers of this church can not be prevailed upon to take our church organ or any other religious paper." There are other officials, in city as in country, who do not or will not take their church paper. By some hocus pocus these stewards and others in office have been considered by preachers and Quarterly Conferences men of "solid piety," else how came they to be elected, for only men of solid piety are eligible? Brethren, never nominate a man for steward who is so deep in the dark as to refuse to take the ADVOCATE into his home.

We are glad to learn of the organization, by Rev. A. B. Earle, of a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, in Algiers. From what we know of those sisters across the river we are satisfied that this organization will prove itself a live one.

Bishop Galloway reports that the church at Robelline, dedicated by him on Sunday, August 21, is a beautiful one, and built on a church-extension plan. He raised a collection of $301 05—more than enough to clear it of debt. He gives also the cheering news of a gracious revival in progress in the new church. We wish we could be with Bro. Isbell, the pastor, and hear him sing and shout as at the Seashore Camp Ground.

Seashore Camp Meeting.

Rev. W. M. Leftwich, D. D., writes in the following happy style of the late camp meeting on the seashore, near Biloxi, Miss.:

The recent Seashore Camp Meeting, near Biloxi, Miss., was one of the best the writer ever attended anywhere, and one of the very best in spiritual results ever held on these famous grounds, according to the testimony of the presiding elders who had it in charge.

Many beautiful and convenient cottages have been built, and the grounds greatly improved in many respects, since the writer was there four years ago; but the most noticeable improvement is in the great tabernacle itself. Raised higher, extended on three sides to increase its seating capacity, ceiled over the preacher's head, and the platform changed and lowered, the paling fence removed, and the interior whitened to increase the light—all make it the finest tabernacle on any camp ground in the land.

More people attended this meeting than any previous one, except when Sam Jones was there a year ago. Then the excess came and went with the great evangelist. According to the books there were more permanent dwellers on the grounds this year, and more were registered. More sinners were converted to God and more spiritual profit to the church than ever before.

The meeting is under the wise management of the presiding elders of New Orleans, Seashore, and Mobile districts. Instead of depending upon any preachers that might be present to do the preaching and conduct the service as heretofore, these presiding elders selected a few men who are specially successful in camp-meeting work. This fact did not keep other preachers away, as some feared. For the register showed that just one hundred preachers were in attendance. Nor did it keep them from the work. The faith, zeal, prayers, and devotion of the preachers, wrought mightily in the work for the salvation of souls and the glory of God. This camp meeting has become a great school of Christian knowledge, Christian experience, and Christian work. It could not be otherwise when the very best representatives of Christian thought and life from four or five States assemble annually, with a hundred preachers, to spend ten days or two weeks in work and worship together with such social and religious intercourse as the occasion makes possible. The Camp Meeting Association resolved itself into, or organized out of itself, a "Seashore Assembly," for the purpose of adding to and following the annual camp meeting with literary, scientific, educational, and other exercises, in the form of lectures, conferences, etc., after the pattern of Chautauqua and Monteagle. They will follow up the next camp meeting with a Seashore Monteagle.

My heart will not suffer me to close this notice without expressing my appreciation of the many kind ministries of many friends in my affliction, especially to Mrs. Dr. Austin and her daughter, Miss Willie, of Ocean Springs, who took me to their summer home and ministered so wisely to my necessities. God bless them all!

MANY whose occupations are of a sedentary character, often have the feeling of being liberally worn out, and are reminded very forcibly of declining years, when if they knew what ailed them, they would find all their troubles arose from the function of their kidneys or liver. If they would at such times take Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm, would again feel the vigor and strength of maturity.

BULL'S SARSAPARILLA.

Dyspepsia Variable appetite; taint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA by cleansing and purifying the blood, tones up the digestive organs, and relief is obtained at once.

Rheumatism Is undoubtedly a blood disease caused by an excess of the lactic acid in the blood. Where there is perfect filtration of the blood there can be no rheumatism. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA will remove the poison, supply the acids and relieve the pains.

Scrofula is caused directly by impurities in the blood, usually affecting the glands, often resulting in swellings, enlarged joints, abscesses, sore eyes, blotchy eruptions on the face or neck. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA, by purifying the blood, forces the impurities from the system.

Kidneys Through the Kidneys flow the waste fluid containing poisonous matter. If the Kidneys do not act properly this matter is retained and poisons the blood, causing pain in the small of the back and loins, flushes of heat, chills. BULL'S SARSAPARILLA acts as a diuretic, causing the kidneys to resume their natural functions.

The Liver By irregularity in its action or suspension of its functions, the bile poisons the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, weak eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling. These are relieved at once by the use of BULL'S SARSAPARILLA the great blood resolvent.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden sappers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy, therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for as surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged, and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of B. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

THE SULKY OLEANDER.

Little Oleander slip,
Cut from mother-tree,
Was just as disagreeable
As little slip could be.
Didn't like her pot of earth;
Said she couldn't grow:
This was very naughty
And foolish, too, you Know.

Little Oleander slip
A drink of water had;
Didn't do her any good,
Continued to be bad;
Sulky Oleander
Hung her little head,
And drooping over sideways,
Pretended she was dead.

But it wasn't any good
Playing such a trick:
Tied up Oleander
To a little stick;
Shut her in a closet,
Very dark, you know,
Till she's made her mind up
To be good and grow.

Darkness had a good effect
On Oleander's head;
"What's the use of acting so?"
To herself she said;
Straightened up her willing stalk,
Really tried to smile;
Guess we'll have to let her out
In a little while.

Morning bright and sunny,
Air so fresh and pure,
Oleander's had enough
Oh closet, I am sure.
"Be good, Oleander,"
"Yes," I heard her say,
And she's kept her promise
From that very day.

Other little flowers
Sometimes act just so,
And in darkened closets
Often have to go;
There, in calm reflection,
It will not be strange
If a short confinement
Works a wondrous change.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little boy ten years old. I would like to join the little folks' column very much. My father takes the dear old ADVOCATE, and has for twelve years. I like to read the little folks' column very much. I am not going to school now, but I will start in September. My teacher is named Prof. Hawkins. I like him very much. I study Latin, grammar, fifth reader, history, arithmetic, geography, spelling and writing. I will answer Birdie Harelson's question: The longest verse in the Bible is found in Esther viii. 9: "Then were the king's scribes called at that time in the third month, that is the month Sivan, on the three and twentieth day thereof; and it was written, according to all that Mordecai commanded, unto the Jews, and to the lieutenants, and the deputies and rulers of the provinces which are from India unto Ethiopia, an hundred twenty and seven provinces, unto every province according to the writing thereof, and unto every people after their language, and to the Jews according to their writing, and according to their language." As this is my first attempt to write, I must close.

Your little friend,

WILLIE THRASH.

MERIDIAN, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I thought that I would never write another letter to be published, as I have no papa to be glad to see it in print. My papa came home on April 12, from Arkansas, and died on the twenty-sixth. He was only sick a few days. I found a word having all the vowels in it, and I wanted to tell you. It was "abatemious." "Zacharias and Elizabeth were the parents of John the Baptist, and were both very excellent people, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, quite blameless." Have I succeeded in getting all the letters in the above sentence? If so, thanks to Aunt Loreda. I think your figure puzzle quite as hard as the hog puzzle, as I can get 99, but never 100. It worried me no little, and I wish I knew how to write one that would bother you to find it out. Respectfully.

MARY L. CURRIE.

CARROLL PARISH, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: Enclosed you will find $5 from the Natchez Rosebuds, in response to Dr. Lambuth's call. This society is a juvenile missionary society with twenty-five members. We have been organized only a few months, and our treasury is weak—containing only $12—but what we send we hope will be of some use to the cause.

Yours truly,

HAMPTON B. SINGLETON, Secretary.

NATCHEZ, Mississippi.

Mother and Son.

An incident occurred recently in one of the police courts of Chicago, in which a little street boy's devotion to his drunken mother was touchingly shown.

A woman had been picked up in a state of intoxication and carried to a police station, where she spent the night. The next morning she was arraigned before the magistrate. Clinging to her tattered gown were two children, a boy and girl, the former only seven years of age, but made prematurely old by the hardships of his wretched life.

"Five dollars and costs," said the judge sternly. "Seven dollars and sixty cents in all."

Instantly the little fellow started up, and, taking his sister's arm, he cried out: "Come on: we's got to git that money, or mam'll hev to go to jail. Jest wait, Mr. Jedge, and we'll git it!"

The children hurried out of the court room, and, going from store to store, solicited contributions to "keep mam from going to jail," the boy bravely promising every giver to return the money as soon as he could earn it. Soon he came running back into the court-room, and laying a handful of small change on the magistrate's desk, exclaimed:

"There's two dollars, Mr. Jedge, and I can't git no more now. I aint as big as mam, and I can't do as much work: but if you'll jist let me go to jail, stead o' her, I'll stay longer to make up for it."

The bystanders wiped their eyes, and a policeman exclaimed: "Your mother shan't go to jail, my lad, if I have to pay the fine myself."

"I will remit the fine," said the judge, and the woman, clasping her boy in her arms, sank upon her knees and solemnly vowed that she would lead a better life and try to be worthy of such a son as that.—Winslow's Monthly.

SENDING LOVE.—The Sunday-School Advocate tells us that the little Indian girls in some of the northern tribes of America have a pretty custom.

When a little friend dies the children set snares and catch birds.

A little girl, holding the pretty bird tenderly in her hand, will talk to it in this way: "Oh, little bird, our dear Laughing Eyes has gone away at the call of the Great Spirit. She can no longer see our faces or hear our voices. We are sad and lonely without her, and we want you to fly away and tell her that we love her and our hearts are sad because she has gone. Go, dear little bird, and bear our message to Laughing Eyes." And then they set the bird free, and it flies away.

It is very sweet to send love, but it is even sweeter to give it. While our dear friends are still with us, while they can look into our eyes and hear our words of love, let us speak them freely. Some day mother, sister, brother—all will be gone beyond our reach. Let us speak the tender, thoughtful, loving word while we may.—Christian Observer.

From London, England.

A patron of "Compound Oxygen," writing to Drs. Starkey & Palen, from London, England, says:

"I lose no opportunity of making known the blessings of Compound Oxygen, but people are hard to be convinced. That people should be slow to accept the wonderful statements of what has been accomplished by this remarkable curative agent is not surprising, but a full examination into the evidence, which is very abundant, satisfies even the most incredulous." Any person who wishes a statement of what Compound Oxygen is—"Its Mode of Action and Results"—may have it free, postpaid, on sending address to Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

CLEAR THROUGH.—A little boy, only seven years old, who was trying hard to be a Christian, was watching the servant Maggie as she pared the potatoes for dinner. Soon she pared an extra large one which was very white and nice on the outside, but when cut into pieces it showed itself to be hollow and black inside with dry rot. Instantly Willie exclaimed, "Why, Maggie, that potato isn't a Christian."

"What do you mean?" asked Maggie.

"Don't you see it has a bad heart!" was Willie's reply.

It seems that this little boy had learned enough of the religion of Jesus to know that, however fair the outside may be, it will never do to have the heart black. We must be sound and right clear through.—Christian Observer.

Household.

Give the Best of Yourself.

A lady gave us a rule, not long since, by which she had succeeded in interesting her fun-loving boys, so they preferred to stay at home evenings instead of seeking amusements elsewhere. She said:

"I remember that children are children, and must have amusements. I fear that the abhorrence with which some good parents regard any play for children is the reason why children go away for pleasure. Husband and I used to read history, and at the end of each chapter ask some questions, requiring the answer to be looked up if not correctly given. We follow a similar plan with the children; sometimes we play one game and sometimes another, always planning with books, stories, plays or treats of some kind, to make the evenings at home more attractive than they can be made abroad. I should dislike to think that any one could make my children happier than I can, so I always try to be at leisure in the evening, and to arrange something entertaining.

"When there is a good concert, lecture or entertainment, we all go together and enjoy it; and whatever is worth the price of admission to us older people, is equally valuable to the children, and we let them see that we spare no expense where it is to their advantage to be out of an evening.

"But the greater number of our evenings are spent quietly at home. Sometimes it requires an effort to sit quietly talking and playing with them when my work-basket is filled with unfinished work, and books and papers lie unread on the table; but as the years go by, and I see my boys and girls growing into home-loving, modest young men and maidens, I am glad that I made it my rule to always give the best of myself to my family."—Standard.

Elizabeth Cummings, in an exchange, says: "I am convinced that at least one-quarter of the work performed by women is unnecessary, and that the world would get on quite as well without it. It is like the ottoman cover I once saw a lady work. She was all bent up, and was putting her eyes out counting stitches. "I don't get any time for reading," she plaintively said, as she picked up some beads on a needle. And yet she had spent more time embroidering a ridiculous dog on a piece of broadcloth than would have sufficed to read twenty books. It did not have the poor merit of being economical, for the price of the material would have bought enough handsome damask for two covers. A good deal would be gained if women thought more about living, and less about its accidents. The transcendant fact is what we are, not what we accumulate or possess. Even knowledge may be so used that it is merely an ornament, which keeps up a twinkling about the mind, like bright jewels in pretty ears, and is only a possession, and not a part of ourselves.

HOME COMFORT.—An old-fashioned recipe for a little home comfort: Take of thought for self one part, two parts of thought for family, equal parts of common sense and broad intelligence, a large modicum of the sense of fitness of things, a heaping measure of living above what your neighbors think of you, twice the quantity of keeping within your income, a sprinkling of what tends to refinement and aesthetic beauty, stirred thick with Christian principle of the true brand, and set it to rise.

Hon. C. Edwards Lester,

Late U. S. Consul to Italy, author of "The Glory and Shame of England," "America's Advancement," etc., etc., etc., writes as follows:—

New York, August 1, 1886. 122 E. 27th St.

DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen:—A sense of gratitude and the desire to render a service to the public impel me to make the following statements:

My college career, at New Haven, was interrupted by a severe cold which so enfeebled me that, for ten years, I had a hard struggle for life. Hemorrhage from the bronchial passages was the result of almost every fresh exposure. For years I was under treatment of the ablest practitioners without avail. At last I learned of which I used (moderately and in small doses) at the first recurrence of a cold or any chest difficulty, and from which I invariably found relief. This was over 25 years ago. With all sorts of exposure, in all sorts of climates, I have never, to this day, had any cold or any affection of the throat or lungs which did not yield to AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL within 24 hours.

Of course I have never allowed myself to be without this remedy in all my voyages and travels. Under my own observation, it has given relief to vast numbers of persons; while in numerous cases of pulmonary inflammation, sore throat, croup and diphtheria in children, it has been preserved through its use. I recommend its use in light but frequent doses. Properly administered, in accordance with your directions, it is in any house. I speak earnestly because I feel earnestly. I have known many cases of apparently confirmed bronchitis and cough, with loss of voice, particularly among clergymen and other public speakers, perfectly cured by this medicine. Faithfully yours,

A Priceless Blessing

C. EDWARDS LESTER.

SESSIONS—Departed this life, July 11, 1887, MRS. MATTIE CECILIA SESSIONS (nee Ashford) at Rose Hill, Adams county, Miss. How hard to chronicle this event without sinful repining! She was born near Kingston, Miss., October 24, 1864—the second daughter of Daniel F. and Martha Ashford. I first knew her as a girl of twelve; pure and gentle-hearted, strong in her convictions, unswerving in the path of duty. Always in her place at Sunday-school, she showed there the faithful preparation of her lessons and a wonderfully fine comprehension of their spiritual meaning. The joy and pride of a loving household, she had a sweet, unmfferted simplicity that won every observer. In her the meekness and gentleness of Christ found rare combination with firmness and devotion to the right which reminded one of the Master himself. I saw but little of her after she passed her fourteenth year. She joined our church in the spring of 1879, under the pastorate of Rev. J. W. McLaurin. I am told she developed as a Christian, and especially the last few years of her brief and beautiful life. On June 24, 1885, she was happily wedded to Mr. James Sessions, of Wilkinson county. Thither she moved, carrying her church membership and religion with her. No wonder her fond husband soon came into the fold! She was an earnest worker in the little country church near by.

For months her health was bad. She often spoke to her companion of her readiness to die, if it were God's will; but she preferred to live for her loved ones. She delighted to sing the hymn, "Asleep in Jesus—blessed sleep;" and to read I Corinthians xiii. The law of love was graven on her heart. Her sorely stricken parents had the privilege, in the providence of God, of ministering to her during her last sickness, under the old roof-tree, so dear to her heart. Her deeply bereaved husband had the double sorrow of being kept, by his own sickness, from her bedside at this supreme hour. Without a murmur she endured as seeing Him who is invisible. Sweetly sad memory recalls the fair girl of thirteen singing, with the zest of a ripe Christian, "We're going home to-morrow." J. P. DRAKE.

WEBB—We, the members of the Minden Sunday-school, wish to give expression to our grief in the removal by death from our midst of our loved friend and sister, FANNIE BELL WEBB. It has pleased our heavenly Father to take to himself one of the sweetest and loveliest of our Sunday-school. She died on Saturday evening, August 13, 1887, after a week's illness. She had been a member of our Sunday-school from early childhood, practicing in every-day life the lessons taught her there, and by her beauty of character, amiability and gentleness, winning all hearts and exerting a most gracious influence.

Resolved, That in the death of Fannie Bell Webb, this Sunday-school and church have lost a loved and faithful member, and that we will endeavor to so live that when the summons comes for us we will be prepared to go to meet her in heaven.

Resolved, That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved parents, sister and brother of our loved friend and sister.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and Webster Tribune for publication.

A. A. STEWART, for Com.

NEYLAND—Little ADA, infant daughter of John and V. H. Neyland, was born, near Nutebltoches, La., October 31, 1882, and on December 13, 1884, the good Master took her to live with him. Her life was not long on earth. It was not her home; she has gone to her home in heaven. The little twins were so dear to their parents. How they loved to watch them play and hear their baby prattle: but, alas! the Master saw proper to separate them. He plucked the twig in tender age ere it might be lost. How it saddens the hearts of mamma and papa to hear the lonely little one as she calls, "Oh! Ada;" and asks, "Mamma, where is Ada?" It seems as if she will never forget her little twin sister. May God comfort her little heart and help her to live so that, when the silver thread of life is broken, she may meet her again in the New Jerusalem. Little Ada was a good child; her little heart knew nothing of sin. She was truly devoted to her sisters and brother. She is now sweetly sleeping in Jesus. On snowy wings of peace she will sing around his throne. "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." AUNT SALLIE.

ODUM—LUCY ANN ATWOOD, wife of John W. Odum, was born in Covington county, Miss., November 14, 1832, and departed this life in Winn parish, La., July 28, 1887, in the fifty-fifth year of her age. Sister Odum united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Mississippi, in 1858. Being deprived of the privileges of her own church during the late war, she joined the Baptist Church, but was again received into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the summer of 1872. She was a faithful and consistent Christian, and endured triumphantly to the end. During her sickness she expressed her willingness to go if it was the Lord's will, and said the Lord was with her. She was unconscious toward the last; but from her orderly and godly walks we are satisfied of her eternal safety. We had an impressive funeral service, at which her children, husband and many friends promised to meet her in the better land. J. F. WYNN.

STOOPS—MRS. SERENA STOOPS, daughter of John and Lucy Heffner, was born in Buncombe county, N. C., June 21, 1821; joined the Methodist Church at the age of twelve years, and continued an acceptable member till her death. In 1836 her parents moved to Holmes county, Miss., and on July 1, 1840, she married Luke B. Powers. After his death she was married again, to Leroy Brewer, December 6, 1846. After Mr. Brewer's death she married I. R. Stoops, August 13, 1852. In a few years Bro. Stoops died and again left her in widowhood in charge of a large family of children to struggle through life with. I believe she leaves them all useful members of the militant church, while she goes to join the church triumphant. Sister Stoops died at Emory, Holmes county, Miss., May 27, 1887. Her remains sleep the long dreamless sleep of death in the Emory Cemetery, awaiting the trump of the resurrection morn to arouse her sleeping dust.

I was not present with Sister Stoops in her last sickness. Her affectionate son, L. A. Powers, of whom she was justly proud of as a pious, working member of the church, and who was anxiously ministering and watching by the bedside of his dying mother in her last hours, gave us the following particulars: "In her last days she expressed a perfect willingness to submit to the will of the Master, and just before the messenger came she called her children to the bedside, and requested them all to meet her in heaven, and seemed anxious to be released from suffering and enter into the promised rest. Her only regret was leaving her children."

G. W. BROWN.

LEWIS—LEMUEL LEWIS was born in Lenore county, N. C., September 8, 1804, and died near China Grove, Pike county, Miss., July 16, 1887. His parents moved to Robertson county while he was an infant. At the age of sixteen he came to Mississippi with three older brothers—Martin, Quiuea and James. While here his father died, and his mother wrote him to come home. He went immediately, and lived with and took care of her as long as she lived. After her death, he was married to Polly Williams, in 1826. In 1831 he moved to Mississippi. The following year he connected himself with the Methodist Church at Water Holes. He was converted about that time, and ever afterwards lived a consistent Christian life. When death came, he was ready; it had no terror for him. Bro. Lewis was quite feeble and almost entirely helpless for some two years or more before his death. Confined to his room, and most of the time to his bed, yet he was cheerful and patient all the while. A short time before death he expressed himself as anxious to depart and meet the loved ones on the other shore. He loved to sing the songs of Zion. Often would he be engaged in doing so, and he tried to do so a few hours before breathing his last. He died without a struggle. A good man gone home. He will be missed on earth.

Popular Education.

We sympathize with the feeling which often leads citizens to boast that no child born in this country need grow up in ignorance, and yet it is a fact that many people who have learned to read and write have never taught themselves to think. A man who suffered from catarrh, consumption, bronchitis, scrofula, or "lives complaint," might read, till his eyes dropped out, how these and many other diseases have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, but if he did not take the lesson to himself and test the virtues of this great medicine, his time would be thrown away.

Whatever becomes of my body or my estate, I will ever labor to find somewhat added to the stature of my soul.—Bishop Hall.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Is Life Worth Living?

That depends upon the Liver, for if the Liver is inactive the whole system is out of order—the breath is bad, digestion poor, head dull or aching, energy and hopefulness gone, the spirits are depressed, a heavy weight exists after eating, with general despondency and the blues. The Liver is the housekeeper of the health; and a harmless, simple remedy that acts like Nature, does not constipate afterwards or require constant taking, does not interfere with business or pleasure during its use, makes Simmons Liver Regulator a medical perfection.

I have tested its virtues personally, and know that for Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Throbbing Headache, it is the best medicine the world ever saw. Have tried forty other remedies before Simmons Liver Regulator, and none of them gave more than temporary relief; but the Regulator not only relieved, but cured.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now so Perfectly Made That No One Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.

It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.

It restores the functions of the tear passages.

It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.

It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.

Mr. W. BOHNE, our Optician, has made a specialty of selecting and inserting them.

Words.

In Springfield, Mass., there is a large chest which contains the "copy" given to the printers for the last edition of Webster's Dictionary. The learned and patient author took twenty years to build up his information and then write out his dictionary. One is reminded of Gibbon after he concluded his "History of the Decline and Fall," as he reads Mr. Webster's feelings as he finished his work: "I was sitting at my table in Cambridge, England, January, 1825. When I arrived at the last word I was seized with a tremor that made it difficult to proceed. I, however, summoned up strength to finish the work, and then walking about the room I soon recovered." In the dictionary, as finished by him, there were about seventy or eighty thousand words; in the last edition there are one hundred and fourteen thousand, though no one uses them all—no, not one-tenth of them; ordinary speakers use not more than three or four thousand.

How we got all these one hundred and fourteen thousand words is a mystery; yet not so mysterious as to how we got the first hundred words. Speech is the gift of God, in spite of the bow-wow, the pooh-pooh and the ding-dong theories. Max Muller says that all investigations into the science of language brings us to the statement of the Bible that there was a time when "the whole earth was of one language and one speech;" and all these words in Webster, and all other words, came from this original speech, whatever that was.

Large as Webster's Dictionary is—not to be held in one hand like his spelling book—yet it is little in comparison with the dictionary now coming out—"A New English Dictionary," edited by Dr. Murray. Three large portions of it have appeared, yet they only bring the work down to Boz. When this is completed there will be an English dictionary in many volumes, which one may turn to and find not only every word used from the twelfth century to the present time, but the history of every word. Words contain a history; some of more interest and importance than the history of—we were going to say Rome; but let the reader fill the hiatus himself, and remember by our words we shall be justified or condemned.—Southern Churchman.

"Ah me!" sighed Potts, "I'm tired of living,
The world is hollow, ambition's vain."
"Come now!" said his chum, "I know the symptoms;
It's all your liver—that's very plain.

"You need not suffer, for help is easy;
Pierce's Pellets go right to the place.
'A friend to the bilious,' I well might call them—
There's nothing better; they'll suit your case."

Potts ceased his sighing and bought the "Pellets."
No more he mourneth his hapless lot!
His face is cheerful, his heart is lightsome,
His melancholy is quite forgot!

Now, why any young minister called and equipped by the great God should fall into more than momentary discouragement is difficult to see. There are some encouragements peculiarly his own. He is sure to be in sympathy with childhood. He will have the respect and love of the children, and if the older people are too hardened to heed his message, he "can lead the little children to the Savior's waiting arms." Our estimates of success are all wrong. We glory greatly over the conversion of a hardened sinner who only has a few years left to work, and who is very likely to backslide in three months, but count it a little thing to save a child who has perhaps sixty years of usefulness before him.—E. A. Bell.

Sore Throat.

is particularly favorable to the contraction of Diptheria. Heed the warning, and use Darbys Prophylactic Fluid. It at once allays the inflammation of the throat, subdues the pain and gives permanent relief. It promptly and effectually destroys all contagion and diphtheritic germs. It is a safeguard against Diptheria, and should be used on the first symptoms of sore throat as a gargle.

Some men talk like angels and pray with fervor, and meditate with deep recesses, and speak to God with loving affection and words of union, and adhere to him in silent devotion, and when they go abroad are as passionate as ever, peevish as a frightened fly, vexing themselves with their own reflections; they are cruel with their bargains, unmerciful to their tenants, and proud as a barbarian prince. They are, for all their fine words, impatient of reproof, scornful to their neighbors, lovers of money, supreme in their own thoughts, and submit to none. All their spiritual fancy is an illusion. They are still under the power of their passions, and their sins rule them imperiously, and carry them away infallibly. —Jeremy Taylor.

Perfection in a Nutshell.

Much confusion and misunderstanding would be avoided on the subject of Perfection as taught by Mr. Wesley, if we would simplify our ideas of it to his definitions. He says: "It is perfect love. (John iv, 18.) This is the essence of it."

We would avoid much abuse of the doctrine if we would make a hobby of possessing it, and not a hobby of professing it. Mr. Wesley, who understood the doctrine well and who seems never to have professed it, at least, after the modern fashion, often puts the matter in the most explicit form. Perhaps the following is among his tersest and clearest deliverances on the subject, and contains the essence of all he had said and wrote on the subject:

1. There is such a thing as Christian perfection, for it is again and again mentioned in Scripture.

2. It is not so early as justification, for justified persons are to "go on to perfection." (Hebrew vi. 1.)

3. It is not so late as death, for St. Paul speaks of living men that were perfect. (Phil. iii. 15.)

4. It is not absolute. Absolute perfection belongs not to men nor to angels, but to God alone.

5. It does not make a man infallible; none is infallible while he remains in the body.

6. It is perfect love; (1 John iv. 18) this is the essence of it.

7. It is improvable, capable of increase; one perfected in love may grow in grace far swifter than before.

8. It is amissable, capable of being lost; of which we have had instances.

9. It is constantly preceded and followed by a gradual work.

10. It is instantaneous, clearly so in some cases, and necessarily so in others, even though they did not perceive the instant when it was wrought. It is often difficult to perceive the instant when a man dies, yet there is an instant when life ceases; and if ever sin ceases, there must be a last moment of its existence, and a first moment of our deliverance from it.

Therefore all our preachers should make a point of preaching Christian perfection to believers constantly, strongly and explicitly. And all believers should mind this one thing and continually agonize for it. —St. Louis Christian Advocate.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

From the Jewish Free Press, St. Louis, Mo., April 29th, 1887:

The efficacy of Patent Medicines is the exception rather than the rule.—We mean that beneficial results from their use are very rare indeed. However this may be, we are prepared to give our testimony in favor of Shallenberger's Antidote for Malaria. Our endorsement is not based on personal experience, for, thanks to kind fate, we enjoy exemption from sickness; but a dear friend fell a victim to Malaria, and spent a fortune in fighting its wasteful influences. It remained for us to be his physician, and we prescribed Shallenberger's Antidote, and our first essay at "doctoring" was successful. We recommend this Medicine to accomplish all it claims, viz: prevent and cure Malaria.

BOOKS.

PSYCHOLOGY—THE MOTIVE POWERS. By James McCosh, D. D., LL.D. Published by Charles Scribner's Sons. Price $1 50.

This book is the second volume of a treatise on Psychology. The first treats of the Cognitive Powers of Mind. The volume under review is a discussion of the Motive Powers.

Dr. McCosh occupies a high place among metaphysical writers. He succeeds in investing the most obstruse subjects with a charm that few writers can give. His style, as a writer, is clear and forcible, and always bears the impress of strong individuality. These characteristics are strikingly exemplified in the work before us. The author draws a very lucid distinction between the cognitive and motive powers, and, with a discrimination wanting in many writers on this subject, he clearly shows the elements involved in emotions.

Considerable space is devoted to the discussion of Conscience. Here Dr. McCosh displays fine powers of analysis, and gives us a most valuable contribution on this important subject. A section of the work is devoted to a discussion of the Will, or Optative Power. This, to many, will prove the most interesting part of the book. Here the author exhibits great vigor of thought and perspicuity of statement.

From some of the views expressed in this work we dissent, but, for the most part, endorse it heartily. As a text-book it is an invaluable contribution for advanced college classes.

PERIODICALS.

—Cassell's Family Magazine (London and New York) first takes us to the now almost-forgotten watering-place in Cheshire—Parkgate—where Handel wrote his "Messiah," and then gives us a glimpse of home-life in an English county, so true to nature that we can almost feel the breeze blown over the hay-fields, and hear the shouts of the reapers that the last sheaf has been put into the garner.

—Good Housekeeping (Springfield, Mass.) is as bright and readable as usual, and there is quite an increase in the number of dainty dishes for people of small means. There is no department of the world's work that calls for as clear heads and as willing hands as the management of the home; and all of the writers are practical housekeepers as well as loving home-builders.

—The American Magazine (Brooklyn) has its usual supply of choice reading-matter. It deserves a place in every home.

—St. Nicholas (Scribner & Co.) is always full of the very best, and in the September number the goodness has reached the superlative degree. There is no safer or purer book to put in the hands of the young.

—Littell's Living Age (Boston) has quite a lengthy article, on "Life and Thought in China," by a Pekin resident, who seems to be entirely at home with his subject. Altogether, the present number is very readable and well worth the price.

"Christ Before Pilate."

Munkacsy's great picture of "Christ Before Pilate"—a perfect copy on steel of the original picture, which has just been sold for one hundred thousand dollars. By subscription only; to ministers and agents at reduced price.

A New Magazine.

We find the following in the last number of The Monteaglean, and gladly give it space in our columns:

MONTEAGLE MAGAZINE.

There are plenty of good people interested in Monteagle to enable us to have a fine monthly magazine published here every month in the year, if they will assist in this enterprise. The weekly Monteaglean has necessarily been too small to publish in its columns one-fifth of the good matter which could have been secured; but the success we have had has been encouraging; and if the good people who read this article will send us one dollar, and agree to contribute reading matter from time to time, we will have a magazine we may all well be proud of. The success of Monteagle is assured, and we must have a good organ through which to exchange the thought of our Monteagleans. Dr. Carlisle, and many other such leading men of the South, have agreed to write for our magazine, and assist in paying the expense of publication by subscribing for one or more copies. Now, what will you do? Please communicate with the editor right away, and let him know exactly what he can depend on so far as you are individually concerned. The pages of the magazine will be illustrated with many fine pictures, the cuts for which we have now, and would have put in the weekly edition but for lack of space.

The name of the magazine will be The Monteaglean, edited by Rev. Rufus J. Clark, whose address after September 15 will be Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.; until then, Monteagle, Tenn. Price $1, for ten months.

"Life and Labors of William H. Watkins, D. D.," will be sent to any address as a premium for two new subscribers accompanied by the cash, or for four renewals with cash.

HUGH JAMIESON, JR.,
Publisher.

On Saturday evening, next, the Illinois Central railroad will send out their regular annual excursion to Chicago; Col. William Murray in charge. The presence of this genial personage is a sure guarantee that the excursionists will be well taken care of. The train will be through, without change of cars. The fare is $12 for the round trip, and tickets good for fifteen days. Do not fail to remember that this line is the shortest and only direct route to the Lake City. Tickets at general office, Canal and Carondelet.

Centenary College.

MR. EDITOR: I have this day formed a contract with Rev. D. P. Bradford to keep the Steward's Hall of Centenary College. Bro. Bradford assures me that, after a short interval of time, he will be able to reduce the price of board, rooms, fuel, lights and washing—all to within twelve and a half or thirteen dollars a month. He will be delayed in taking charge; but Mrs. Wadsworth will hold till he comes. Bro. Bradford's capacities in the boarding department are too well known to need commendation.

I have been enabled, through the liberality (mainly) of one of my former pupils, W. D. Lawson, nephew to that liberal son of Centenary, Peter James, to prepare the rooms of the east wing for occupancy. Many new students expected.

Children Starving to Death

On account of their inability to digest food, will find a most marvelous food and remedy in Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Very palatable and easily digested. Dr. S. W. COHEN, of Waco, Texas, says: "I have used your Emulsion in infantile wasting with good results. It not only restores wasted tissues, but gives strength and increases the appetite. I am glad to use such a reliable article."

"Church Entertainments."

The contents of this pamphlet is a sermon preached in Carondelet Street Church by Rev. Beverly Carradine, and was published by request. The price is put at about cost—i. e., ten cents per copy, $1 per dozen, $7 per hundred.

To love thee more and more.

I love to kiss each print where thou
Hast set thine unseen feet;
I can not fear thee, blessed will,
Thine empire is so sweet.

When obstacles and trials seem Like prison walls to be,
I do the little I can do,
And leave the rest to thee.

I have no cares, O blessed will,
For all my cares are thine;
I live in triumph, Lord, for thou
Hast made thy triumphs mine.

And when it seems no chance nor change
From grief can set me free,
Hope finds its strength in helplessness
And patient waits on thee.

Ride on, ride on triumphantly,
Thou glorious will, ride on;
Faith's pilgrim sons behind thee take
The road that thou hast gone.

Some Other Days.

BY JOSEPH B. COTTRELL, D. D.

Seven of the days of July, added to over half of those of the month of June, completed my trip around through Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi, back to Kentucky. After lecturing at Jackson, Miss., on Monday night, July 4, I came up to Holly Springs, Miss., reaching there at 8 A. M., Tuesday. In a buggy out to the home of my boyhood, five miles north, I hasten, and a day spends me by a powerful draught upon all the affectional and emotional springs of my being. About fifty years ago we made the trip over the Alleghany Mountains to the Western country—my half-brother, Ben Cottrell, moving out from Salisbury, N. C., coming through Abbeville, S. C., where my mother had charge of the female academy, at the court-house, prevailed on her to let him have "Joseph" to raise. So the little fellow had his seat with the other children in the carry-all, with Bro. Ben and Aunt Polly. He married my mother's sister. A four-horse wagon, with the heavier plunder, and a one-horse wagon, with the negro woman and children, made up the procession, with the carry-all. In the large wagon was a coffin, containing the form of my Bro. Ben's daughter, seven years old, which he had taken up from the grave to bring along out to where he was to settle for life. At Lagrange, Tenn., we lived for a year, until the final selection of a home was made. Then was the little one again taken up, and buried in a few hundred yards of the spot chosen for the residence. Sylvestria Female Academy was known in a little while throughout the Western country, and girls were brought from every quarter and boarded with us. Among the preachers who came with their children were McMahon, John Holland, Malcom McPherson and Jarrett. The examinations at Sylvestria were notable occasions. How vividly now does imagination picture Ben Cottrell hanging about the necks of his graduates the gold medals! A wall was built around the grave, enclosing space sufficient for all the white family. I carried the brick to the workmen as they reared the wall. Now, everyone who composed the family at that time sleeps there, except myself. The grandson of Ben Cottrell owns and lives at the place—Rev. Bennie Grey. His wife is a fruitful vine, and his children are as olive plants about his table. My day with them was franght with sacred influences. My eye was greedy of every object; and trees and vines, and lawns of grass, and the weeds, now in flower, as of yore, together with the dogs and fowls and hogs, seemed to gather up to me in solicitations of acquaintance. Every portal of my soul seemed open, and I gathered afresh my boyhood's home into my conscious being. I got off to myself, saving that Cash, a large white dog that the children love as I did old Watch in my boyhood, followed me out to the hill-side beyond the spring, as I sought the spot where I kneeled and first felt the love of God in my boyhood. Cash scratched into the sand by the hill-side just as Watch used to scratch, and when a lizard slid out and shot past him, he jumped, after the same manner I had so often witnessed in Watch. Several of the old servants—Aunt Anarchy (for whom I used to keep off the calves at milking), Aunt Brittania, Sylvy and Loudon—are buried just above the spring. These and each of the others, now scattered far and wide, came up around me under the magic wand of memory, and I could not distinguish the love I felt for them from that which heaved my heart for my kindred who sleep in the orchard.

I walked over to old Sylvestria Church—among the graves over there—and memory called up the burials. Malcom McPherson was among the first for whom the earth opened. He was a man on the order of Bishop Soule—grave, masterful and inspiring. Two of his children—John and Mary—are yet in the homestead he established, and the giant oaks in the ample inclosure around the house seem monumental of the father. I ran in, as I passed, in leaving, and had a word with John and Mary on the gallery. How changed since it was little John and little Mary McPherson, with satchel and bucket passing back and forth to school! Mary has the face-marks of the father. She remarked: "I remember so well the visit of your mother in 1844—how she came into the school-room. She was the first woman I ever heard pray."

My brother educated hundreds of girls, and the path is yet hard and smooth over which they marched from the academy to the church. I walked slowly along that way, and thought of the feet now stiff and cold in death, that I had known to press along that pathway. The children and grandchildren of some of them will read these lines. And the boy comrades! My brother, Zadoc, had charge of the male school—the academy near the church. The Ferrels, Jarretts, Hollands, Walls, McKeys, Gibbons, Taylors, Ellises, Pegues and Hunters, were the neighbors. Only two or three may now be found anywhere in the old range. After a lesson from the Scriptures—a Psalm and a chapter—the voices of the children mingled with those of "Uncle Joe" and the mother and father, and I came away through the big gate—the moan of a dove coming down from a tall tree-top as if in pathetic benediction upon my head. It was near the hour of sunset, and I felt as if I drew the old home along with me, so powerfully had we grasped each other, or so sweetly had we realized a blending.

Bro. Moon, at Holly Springs, had given notice during the day that I would preach that night, and the spacious church was full. The heartiness of Bro. Moon's greeting, and his assurance of devotion of many of my old North Mississippi Conference comrades, was grateful.

Letter from Montana.

MR. EDITOR: My first Conference year in Montana has closed. I have been to the Annual Conference session, and home again for another year in Butte City. Believing that I have many friends in the bounds of the Louisiana Conference, from which I was transferred, who would be glad to hear how I have gotten along in this field, I write again to give an account of the work in my charge, and then of the work of our church in Montana as a whole.

The Annual Conference year has been a short one, from the fact we reached Montana some while after Conference was over, and the session was held earlier this year than usual.

We have received seven members into the church, organized two new Sunday-schools—one at the church in the city, and the other in the suburbs, just one mile, by the blocks, from our church. These two schools are composed of eight officers and teachers, and seventy scholars. From their own contributions they have bountifully supplied themselves with our literature from Nashville, and one of the schools has bought song books. The other has nearly raised funds sufficient for that purpose, in the meantime being supplied with song books from here and there, of the same kind, to meet their present necessities. We have raised every dollar assessed us on the general church collections. The presiding elder has been paid in full, and the preacher in charge seventy-five dollars more than he was promised. We have also raised about $300 on our church debt. The ladies, in the meantime, have paid a considerable sum in furnishing the church, and particularly the parsonage.

During the year we have raised for all purposes from ten to twelve hundred dollars. Remember, Mr. Editor, this is quite an infant charge. With what the Mission Board has allowed us, we have gotten along finely, for which we thank God.

Bishop Hendrix reached Butte City on Saturday before the Conference met in Helena the following Thursday. The Sabbath was a gala day for our church. The Bishop gave us two grand sermons. The affliction of our presiding elder, Rev. L. B. Stateler, made it necessary for the Bishop to go by his home on the way to Helena. This carried him through the country by private conveyance.

Bro. E. G. Brooke, an old Montana pioneer, carried us through by two light days' drive. Our ride over the Rocky Mountains, through the valley and across the streams, was highly enjoyed by all. Bro. Brooke knew all the possible ways to cross the mountain—an important matter in traveling in Montana. He knew something about every stream, and the best and nearest road through every valley. His stories of early days in Montana, and of his pioneer life on the Pacific slope generally, proved quite the thing to contrast with matters of more civilized life as narrated by Bishop Hendrix. Many things were said along the way concerning Bishop Marvin. This was no wonder when we recollect that Bishop Marvin had such great interest in the church in Montana.

We reached Bro. Stateler's about 5:30 P. M. the second day, greatly to our surprise, he had arranged to go on with us to Conference. Our noble guide, Bro. Brooke, returned home from necessity, while Bishop Hendrix, Bro. Stateler, Sister Stateler, myself, and a good driver, made fine time behind a good span to the railroad station, eighteen miles away.

We reached Helena near 8 P. M., and heard the congregation singing, several of the preachers being present with visiting brethren, and among them Rev. B. F. Haynes, of the Tennessee Conference, who preached that night.

At 9 A. M. Thursday, August 11, the session opened, and the work proceeded with great harmony and deep spirituality to the close.

Bishop Hendrix won our hearts both in the chair and in his pulpit administrations.

The Montana Conference ranks with the first in that she met every assessment in full, and over in some of the interests.

The very few laborers in the field have not been able to occupy the ground; but where they have cultivated the returns were gratifying.

Relying on the advanced apportionment made the laborers by the Missionary Board, and also seeing the great need of more men to thrust in the sickle, Bishop Hendrix transferred us four new men, with the promise that he would send others when he returned to Missouri. Can the church in the States, with her strong folds and overflowing Conferences, fail to give us men and means?

Bishop Hendrix encouraged us with this thought, that we might expect reinforcements sufficient to meet the demands in Montana: that we might expect with this reinforcement of men the means wherewith to sustain them till Southern Methodism in Montana should be thoroughly tested. Should it prove a failure after a strong effort and hearty co-operation by the Missionary Board, backed by a liberal support by the church generally, why, then, it would be time to vacate the field and leave it to those who could succeed in planting the gospel here.

We, as members of the Montana Conference, feel determined, by the grace of God, to see this matter settled one way or the other. If the church at home means to rally to Montana, she must do so now; if not, the sentiment of the Montana brethren is to let it go. Let us have no trifling. My brother, you who read of Montana, don't say, "Be ye fed and clothed;" don't say the people of Montana are out of our latitude; that they have the richest mines in the world; that they have the finest grazing ranges in North America; that they have some of the finest grain valleys in the West; and that, therefore, they are able to take care of themselves—for this argument might be confuted when reference is had to other fields of great resources.

The ordinary capitalists of Montana do not develop these gigantic mines, for many of these ranches and mines are owned by combinations and foreign capital. There are many humble, industrious men of small means employed here, and many who prospect and take up claims, and sell them with fair profit, and do well, yet are not able to run the mines themselves, etc. Again, there are many of these people who are from the South, and whose sympathies we have, and we alone.

It is also an important matter to remember that there are many English Wesleyans here who are more in sympathy with our church than any other.

The Methodists of Canada have been pouring in here for some years, and now that a new railroad from Manitoba is coming right down through the centre of our territory, this kind of population will come more rapidly.

We have already sustained a great loss in the half-heartedness with which the church has taken hold of this work. We are candid to say that it is our opinion, that if we confined our efforts to fold the Southern people exclusively, that our stay in Montana would soon be a failure. We are not doing this, nor will it ever be our policy as a church. We would deserve the name of caste and rebels, as is sometimes said of us by ignorance of a very ugly type.

I write but tamely when I say this is a grand country, and in it there are many noble people.

I must furthermore say, Mr. Editor, that we need ministers in this field of the purest and highest type.

I think I state the truth, when I say I know of no more than four or five charges in the Louisiana Conference where greater pulpit ability and pastoral fidelity is needed or demanded by the people, than is required in nearly every charge in this field. With great humility I feel my insufficiency for the important station assigned me again this year. By the grace of God, Loula and I will do what we can.

A. C. COVEY.

From Monteagle.

MR. EDITOR: You must permit me to say a word as to our enjoyment of this place. The air is so pure and invigorating; the water so health-giving; the intellectual, spiritual and esthetical enjoyments so excellent—all conspire to make it a very delightful resting-place.

The Sunday-school Conference, held one hour each morning, last week, was well worth a trip here. Then we have George W. Cable, and, as far as I have heard, all were delighted with him. His "Cobwebs in the Church" was certainly suggestive, and well worth pondering; as also his lecture on the Sunday-school teacher. How we did wish all our Sunday-school workers could have heard this! Surely, their careless methods would have been shaken.

It is not often in a lifetime one has such a treat as Dr. Lafferty gave us on Monday night. It was brimful of hitherto unknown information, valuable suggestions, and spicy humor.

The praises of Miss Von Finklestein, of Jerusalem, are on every tongue. She opened to us, as no commentary or cyclopedia has ever done, much of the home-life of Palestine, which is the only satisfactory explanation of many scriptural incidents, parable and illustration.

Take, for instance, the parable of the "woman who loses ten pieces of silver." She stated these ten pieces was the pledge of her marriage, given by the husband, and if even one was lost from the chain (for they were fastened on a chain which was worn constantly as a necklace), it was counted as an indication of infidelity, and she was looked upon with scorn and contempt by all who knew her. Thus we see the importance of a diligent search when that which was dearer than life itself was missing.

The children and all have been entertained every morning by the blackboard "chalk talks" of Frank Beard.

But my missive will soon reach waste-basket length if I undertake to tell of all the good things here. The investments here have doubled since last year, and many lots are being taken for next year. I don't think a school or church could make a wiser investment than to send their teacher or pastor here. I feel sure the two weeks I have already spent will enable me to do better work for even years to come, and I think the benefit will accrue in increased ratio.

"As an Arrow to the Mark."

Among the late publications to hand is a sermon by the Rev. B. Carradine, entitled "Fifteen Objections to Church Entertainments," which is pre-eminently worthy of the serious attention of all followers of Christ; especially of those who find that their higher nature demands stronger spiritual food, and can not be satisfied with the small amount filtered into their souls through being simply zealous churchmen. The first reading of the sermon was with the view of discovering what there could be of evil enough in our long-time popular church entertainments that could possibly make the sum of fifteen sensible objections. Our sensible objections, our expedients, our doing evil that financial good may come of it, was so soon stripped and scathed, and satisfactorily proven a false light, and that by scriptural precedent and argument so familiar, that it seemed a wonder of wonders that it was so needed to have been written. The sermon undoubtedly arouses aspirations to higher, purer things, and only needs circulation to effect untold good.

Notice.

To the Auxiliaries of the North Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society—

DEAR SISTERS: At our annual meeting in Grenada we decided to have our minutes published, and assessed each society $1 for this purpose. The minutes have been ready for publication for some time; but many auxiliaries having failed to respond, a sufficient amount of money has not been forwarded. Will not the delinquent societies respond at once by sending the money to Mrs. E. G. Payne, Grenada, Miss., so that the minutes may be published without further delay?

Yours faithfully,

MRS. J. B. STONE,
Cor. Sec. N. Miss. Conf. W. M. S.

We can not all find the same things in nature. She is all things to all men. She is like the manna that came down from heaven. "He made manna to descend for them, in which were all manner of tastes; and every Israelite found in it what his palate was chiefly pleased with. If he desired fat in it, he had it. In it the young men tasted bread; the old men, honey; and the children, oil." But all found in it substance and strength. So with nature. In her are "all manner of tastes," science, art, poetry, utility, and good in all. The botanist has one pleasure in her; the ornithologist, another; the explorer, another; the walker, and sportsman, another. What all may have is the refreshment and the exhilaration which comes from a loving and intelligent scrutiny of her manifold works.

(G. H. Hall, D. D.)

But the positive obligation to preach the gospel to every creature is on the people of God. This obligation is imposed in the law of the commission: "Go, ye, into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." This command is imperative, high and sacred. In view of its divine authority, exalted aim, and vast responsibility, it is peculiarly great. Notice the binding power of the commission. This is both the authority and goodness of the Law Giver. He is God, and he is Jesus. It is the voice of supreme authority and the voice of dying love. Are we not afraid to disobey God? Are we not ashamed to disobey him who died for us? To disobey is both daring and heartless. It is worse than breaking the bond of law—it is breaking the two-fold bond of law and love.

Take Christ out of the Old Testament, and the student of astronomy may well scorn and scout the whole story. Put back Christ into its pages, and they glow with a magnificence which the heaven of heavens can not contain. Petty, is it? That very homeliness of its details is the measure of God's condescension. Thus he has come down for the slow and patient training of a rude people in a rude age. Is the prattle of the nursery degrading to the young mother who fondly studies its meaning? What else marks the love of a mother like it? But for just such pettiness, what would the world have ever known of Homer and Plato? The Old Testament is simply the story of the moral nursery of the race. In the one fact lies the whole volume of reply to the carpings of infidelity.

(Rev. F. W. Robertson.)

Child of God, if you would have your thought of God something beyond a cold feeling of his presence, let faith appropriate Christ. You are as much the object of God's solicitude as if none lived but yourself. He has numbered the hairs of your head. In Old Testament language, "He has put your tears into his bottle." He has numbered your sighs and your smiles. He has interpreted the desires for which you have not found a name nor an utterance yourself. If you have not learned to say, "My Redeemer," then just so far as there is anything tender or affectionate in your disposition, you will tread the path of your pilgrimage with a darkened and a lonely heart; and when the day of trouble comes there will be none of that triumphant elasticity which enabled Job to look down, as from a rock, upon the surges which were curling their crests of fury at his feet, but could only reach his bosom with their spent spray.

THE FORSAKEN FARM HOUSE.

Against the wooded hills it stands,
Ghost of a dead home, staring through
Its broken lights on wasted lands
Where old-time harvests grew.

Unplowed, unsown, by scythe unshorn,
The poor, forsaken farm-fields lie—
Once rich and rife with golden corn
And pale green breadths of rye.

Of healthful herb and flower bereft,
The garden plant no housewife keeps;
Through weeds and tangles only left,
The snake, its tenant, creeps.

A lilac spray, once blossom-clad,
Sways bare before the empty rooms;
Beside the roofless porch a sad,
Pathetic red rose blooms.

His track, in mould and dust of drought,
On floor and hearth the squirrel leaves,
And in the fireless chimney's mouth
His web the spider weaves.

The leaning barn about to fall
Resounds no more on husking eves;
No cattle low in yard or stall,
No thresher beats its sheaves.

So sad, so drear! It seems almost
Some haunting presence makes its sign
That down yon shadowy lane some ghost
Might drive his spectral kine!

The Sunday-School Lesson for September 18, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

SOLEMN WARNINGS.

Matthew vii. 13-29.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire."—Matthew vii. 19.

INTRODUCTORY.

It is quite fitting that the enunciation of the Golden Rule should be followed by solemn injunctions to lead a strictly careful life; because it is, indeed, a rare attainment for fallen humanity to love another as oneself, and always to do to another just as we would have him do to us. The vast majority of the human race are actuated by motives just the reverse of this, and it is only those who, by earnest effort, keep themselves in the narrow way, that can effectually counteract the damaging leanings to self.

"But, och, mankind are unco weak,
And little to be trusted;
If self the wavering balance shake,
It's rarely right adjusted."

THE STRAIT GATE.

Verse 13. "Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat." The spelling is proper; not "straight," but "strait," meaning "narrow." The New Version has it "narrow." Difficult of entrance, effectually shutting out everyone who does not "lay aside every weight." The wide gate, the broad way, require no effort at entrance or traveling—just go along and follow nature, the result will be accomplished; hence "many," the great herd of mankind, "go in thereat." Not only the atheists, not only the infidels, not only the scoffers, not only outbreaking sinners, but the fearful, the unbelieving, the indifferent, the thoughtless, tread this road. There are different methods of classifying men, according to nationalities, according to races, according to degrees in civilization; but the closest and severest of all classifications is that made in this lesson. Here all the teeming millions of mankind are divided into just two classes: first, those who enter in at the strait gate; second, those who go through the wide gate. God sees men only in these two classes.

14. "Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." That which constitutes the straitness of the gate and narrowness of the way are the rare qualifications of those only who can enter and travel. Only those who have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb have any right to the tree of life. Our Lord here asserts that at that time few were finding the way of life. Whether the number is always to remain few is not stated. One-half of the human family are said to die in infancy; all these will be saved. The Savior rebuked the disciples on one occasion for asking if few would be saved by answering, "Strive to enter at the strait gate"—as much as if he said: It does not matter much to you whether many are saved or not. See to it that you secure your own salvation.

GOOD AND BAD TREES.

Verse 15. "Beware of false prophets"—teachers who come professing to teach the way of life, but who are really leading men astray. The nearer these false teachers come to the truth, the more effectual is their deadly work. They deceive, if possible, the very elect. They heal the hurt of the daughter of God's people slightly. They daub with untempered mortar. They cry, Peace! peace! when there is no peace. They wear the garb of a shepherd; but their influence is that of a ravening wolf, deceptive and destructive.

16. "Ye shall know them by their fruits." This is an infallible test. Close observation will disclose their hypocrisy. Thorns can not produce grapes, nor thistles grow figs; so it is impossible for a man, base and impure, to practice for any length of time the principles of honesty and virtue.

17, 18. "Even so." By a parity of reasoning. Just as conclusively. "Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit." A man whose heart has been cleansed by the Holy Spirit, and who is walking not after the flesh, will not engage in a wicked, corrupt life. Indeed, he can not engage in evil; it is contrary to his nature. Before it is possible for a good man to fall into sin, he must lose the image of his Maker from his soul, and forget that he was purged from his old sins. On the contrary, a bad man can not do a good thing. Solomon says: "The planning of the wicked is sin;" "the thoughts of the wicked are an abomination." Paul says: "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Even though the act might have a good effect upon the recipient, still the motive would vitiate the influence upon the doer.

19. "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire." This sentence is found exactly in Matthew iii, 10, and reiterates the principle which prevails throughout nature as well as in revelation. That wickedness must be punished by the broad seal of divine disapprobation. As there is no opportunity for the change of the nature of the tree after it has been hewn down and cast into the fire, so would the natural conclusion be, that a man who dies in sins can never expect a change in his state.

NOT SAYING, BUT DOING.

Verse 21. "Not every man that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven." Very few there are who live in Christendom that have not some way of saying, "Lord, Lord"—that is, who have not some theory of religion through which he expects to be saved. But this text emphatically declares that there is but one character who effectually calls upon the name of the Lord, and that is "he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." That is, only he who practices the gracious precepts and attains to the rare character spoken of in this Sermon on the Mount.

22. "Many will say to me in that day"—the day of judgment—"Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name?"—preached the gospel—"and in thy name have cast out devils?"—been instrumental in the conversion of sinners—"and in thy name done many wonderful works?"—even performed miracles in thy name. Is it possible for a bad man to have success in the ministry? Paul said in Philippians, first chapter, that even though some preached Christ of strife and contention, yet he rejoiced that Christ was preached, no matter what the motive. In this connection bad men claimed to have cast out devils, and Christ did not charge them with falsehood.

23. "Then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Dreadful sentence to be pronounced upon those who claimed even to be co-workers with Christ. Even though they had been instrumental in saving souls, yet they themselves were all the while unsaved. "Profess" is very emphatic, and means, "I will fully and plainly tell them." Departing from that Christ whom they had preached will be a separation from all that is capable of redeeming from endless woe.

SAND OR ROCK.

Verse 24. "Therefore, whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them." The principles uttered in this sermon, the instruction upon prayer and all Christian duty, the Golden Rule. "I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock." Christ is called the Rock. "Built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone." "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

25. "The rain descended, the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock." No matter how afflictions and trials and persecutions assail the Christian's faith, it rests upon imperishable truth, and will survive the fiercest onsets.

26, 27. "The foolish man who built his house upon the sand; * * * and it fell: and great was the fall of it." The torrents formed by the mountain rains in the eastern countries would sweep every sandy foundation away before them. So will the storms of life and death finally demolish all hopes built upon any earthly foundations.

28. "And it came to pass when Jesus had ended these sayings"—had finished his sermon. "The people were astonished at his doctrine." No wonder; they had never heard such teachings before.

29. "He taught them as one who had authority, and not as the scribes." The scribes dwelt upon the traditions of their wise men. They quibbled about minor matters; but the divine Teacher went right to the foundations of truth, and gave them such arguments, such illustrations and such exhortations, that they said, "Never man spake like this man."

Delhi District Conference.

MR. EDITOR: The Delhi District Conference was convened at Monroe, La., July 29, the presiding elder, Rev. J. D. Harper, in the chair, and adjourned after a four days' session.

In place of Rev. John M. Brown, the writer was chosen secretary, and turned the minute book over to Rev. Van Valkenburg, assistant secretary, who agrees to be responsible for any defection that may be found therein by the keen-eyed Committee on District Conference Records, at the next session of the Louisiana Conference. The assistant secretary should, therefore, be prepared to receive his just desert when the day of reckoning comes.

Quite a number of the members were absent; in fact, the representation was small, comparatively. Several of the preachers were absent, and the greater part of the lay representatives. This ought not so to be, and the Conference so expressed itself.

The elder did his work efficiently and thoroughly. Nothing of material importance was left untouched. Every interest of the church was sifted to the bottom, and the ins and outs carefully inquired into. The Conference was satisfied with the work of the chair.

Outside of the disciplinary notation of business, special committees were appointed to report on the other matters of general interest—such as the cause of temperance, church extension, etc.

A resolution by Rev. William Hart was passed, expressing our satisfaction at the missionary tone and spirit of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. We need education on this subject; and no educator is more powerful than the press. Wake us up, Doctor, and keep us awake.

The work of the district, on the whole, is thought to be rather on the increase. The preachers are consecrated, hopeful and courageous in the midst of their arduous work for the Master. But we need a great awakening—a great and pungent revival of religion in our borders. For this we are laboring, praying, preaching. May the Lord of hosts send us power from on high, and help from his secret place of thunder!

The people of Monroe did their hospitality as of old. Everything is to be said in their favor along this line, and not a word adverse. May God bless them in all essential good, is the prayer of the Conference.

JAMES J. BILLINGSLEY,
Secretary.

From Carrollton, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I took the collection at Greenwood, last Sunday. As the result of the week of prayer and self-denial, we raised, at Carrollton and Greenwood station, $170 and a pair of gold bracelets—about seventy cents per member.

Yours,

T. W. LEWIS.

From the Work.

SOUTH BOSSIER, LA.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord is greatly blessing us in our protracted meetings. At Doyline [illegible] about twenty-five conversions, and nineteen accessions to the church. Just closed a meeting at Pleasant Valley with ten accessions and twelve conversions. We have five other meetings to hold on this circuit.

We are exchanging work with Bro. Foust, of North Bossier circuit, who has several meetings yet to hold. On his work at Collinsburg we had a very fine revival in July, resulting in thirty-eight accessions, and about fifty conversions. He tells me that at his last appointment, at Collinsburg, he found nearly all his new converts, and old ones, too, in Sabbath-school. This is as it should be.

Our Pleasant Valley Church is in better condition than at any time since I have had charge (three years). The same as to this work generally.

Bro. Johns, my junior, is helping Bro. Foust this week at Dry Cypress. I am a little broken down, and must rest this week. I have had no rest-days since the first of May.

Last week I was on a visit to see my sick brother, Rev. M. E. Blocker, in Tyler, Texas, and found the pastors taking a vacation. I then said, "When the devil takes vacation in his work, I will vacate in mine." But I have more charity for those brethren since I have broken down a little, and must rest a few days. But I once heard a lady assign, as an apology for a ready consent to her pastor's taking vacation, that the church needed it also.

Bros. Johns and Foust are holding up well.

Shreveport district will hold its next Conference at Houghton, in South Bossier circuit.

Crops are fine in this portion of the State, especially corn. Health, fair.

Next Saturday we open fire on the poor sinners at Cotton Valley. This church is in fine condition, financially. They pay every dollar assessed them in the various collections; but L. A. Monzingo is a very fine steward, and has trained his people well. He tells me that every member of his church pays. It is not so in all our country churches.

God bless you, Mr. Editor!

Yours in Christ,

R. M. BLOCKER.

LAKE PROVIDENCE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: On June 19, last, our new church in this place was consecrated to the worship of God; and at a meeting of two-weeks' duration, closing August 14, the Holy Spirit has approved of and accepted the offering. The net result of our meeting was twenty-four applications for membership, and a general revival of the church, and awakening of the community.

Bro. Billingsley, of Bastrop, was present, and did most of the preaching. He uses a trenchant blade—exposing sin, and pointing to the remedy.

I think, Mr. Editor, that if our Conference were to appoint an evangelist, Bro. Billingsley would be a very suitable man.

Your brother,

THOS. J. UPTON.

CARROLLTON CIRCUIT, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I closed my last protracted meeting on last night, August 26, on the Carrollton circuit, North Mississippi Conference.

The four meetings resulted in ninety-four conversions, and seventy additions to our church, and more to follow. New family altars erected, thirty-six; infants baptized, eight. Collections ordered by Conference nearly all in sight. Organized one Woman's Missionary Society. Paid for one church organ. Got $10 the week of prayer and self-denial. We expect to be able to make a good report at our Conference.

R. A. BURROUGHS, P. C.

ROCKY SPRING CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I think I can truly say we are making some advancement on this work. I recently held a three-days' meeting at Hickory Ridge, and received five into the church. Have just closed a five-days' meeting at Center Grove. Twenty-one professed saving faith in Christ, and I received thirteen into the church. Up to this time, twenty-five conversions, and twenty-six added to the church. We expect more.

HATTIESBURG, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Personal affliction and pressure of other duties have prevented an earlier report of our doings here for the week of prayer and self-denial in behalf of the missionary cause. True, it was but partially observed, yet not without good results. I could not hold services at all the churches in that part of the circuit temporarily under my charge. We had special services at Hattiesburg, on Sunday, the close of the week of prayer, and a special prayer meeting on Wednesday night before. Owing to circumstances I need not mention, the congregation on Sunday was smaller than usual; but the few present made an offering of $10 45—in cash and subscriptions. A part of this has been forwarded to Dr. Kelley, at Nashville; the balance will follow soon. It is not all yet paid. Our people here are not rich, but they are generous in proportion to their ability.

Now, with your permission, a few words about some other matters. We have regular weekly prayer and class meetings at Hattiesburg; a prosperous Sunday-school, and expect to have a camp meeting near here early in October. Active preparations are being made for this.

The Seashore District High School is located here, and has had two successful years. The people of Hattiesburg, a few honored names among them at least, have borne the expenses so far of providing the necessary buildings. The promised co-operation of the district has not been realized. The institution is likely to suffer on this account. We want now some suitable man for principal, and the trustees are anxious to perfect arrangements to open the school by the middle of September. If you can refer us to some suitable man, please do so, and mention, if you will, that a teacher is wanted for this school: and for information address, R. J. Collins, secretary Board of Trustees.

This place is growing steadily, and there is a fine opening for a permanent and prosperous school. Your brother,

H. J. HARRIS.

VANCLEAVE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have no storms on the work, but we have had something better—a continual flow of good things from all parts of the work.

The work of the Lord is moving on. We have just commenced our protracted meetings, and held only three up to this time. The first was at McClendon's. Bro. A. P. Cox helped me there, and we had a good revival in church, and nine conversions. The people there belong to the church except a few. The next was at Pine Grove. Bros. Cox, King, Havens and Broome did good work in this meeting. Fifteen conversions and eleven accessions. Our last was at Mt. Pleasant, at which we had Bros. Price, Sam Goff, Irvin, Lyman, Roberts and Jeff Havens. It was a meeting of great power. Twenty, or more, were converted, and twenty-nine joined the church. Up to this time sixty-two have been added to the church, and the membership greatly blessed. The church is also well up with the assessments. We have a good corps of workers, and they seem to know where to take hold.

AUGUST 18, 1887.

CANTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just returned from Madison station, and am glad to report Rev. J. L. Forsythe somewhat better. Hopes are now entertained that he may get up again. He is still very sick, but there is a decided improvement in his condition. The people of Madison have shown their high appreciation of their afflicted pastor by their unwearied attention and kindness, for which his family feel very grateful. May the Lord spare his life!

W. B. LEWIS.

AUGUST 20, 1887.

EDEN, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Since I wrote to you last we have had ten or twelve conversions, and about fifteen accessions to the church.

I am determined, by the help of God, to raise all the money that the Annual Conference will expect me to raise this year. We are working for our valuable paper, and expect to make greater efforts in the future. Please send me some specimen copies. Troyville is my permanent postoffice.

WILSON MOORE.

AUGUST 23, 1887.

REVIVAL AT ARIZONA CHURCH

MR. EDITOR: We are in the midst of a fine work of grace at this church. Have had live ladies' prayer meetings, and a vigorous Woman's Missionary Society. Bros. Hamil and Nicholson have given reliable and appreciated services. Many penitents at the altar. Quite a number of happy conversions. Six joined the church up to this time. We give God all the glory and praise! The church is quickened; harmony, peace and love reigns among this hospitable, kind people. Very few non-professors in the community—most everyone in the church.

Our week of self-denial and prayer has been productive of great good. As an educator and to discipline our people, I consider it is of great value, to say nothing of the money that came showering in in the envelopes that were sent out. The aggregate amount will approximate $80.

Our ward (Homer) election to prohibit whisky, is passed, and we are defeated by forty-nine votes. The negroes and saloon men did this. Some of our friends were apathetic and supine, and did not believe in agitation—turning on the light—and hence the yoke is on us. Have thought that some people can be so neutral and indifferent and crouching to the rum power as to do more against temperance than an open enemy. Can there be any neutral ground in the presence of such a monstrosity? The blessed Master uses most unequivocal language: "He that is not for me, is against me." I do think the temperance sentiment is obtaining in this country. It is the live issue of the times—the revolution that is as the "stone cut out of the mountain without hands, that will fill the earth." The friends of the cause are "cast down, but not destroyed:" and I trust that many of us are "always bearing about in our body the dying of the Lord Jesus."

In Christ, affectionately,

T. H. WHITE.

HOMER, LA., Aug. 26, 1887.

HOLLY SPRINGS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have closed a series of special services on the Holly Springs circuit—thirteen additions; church members revived. This work is in a panned-out condition, and there seems to be no remedy for it than the grace of God. Members leaving for other parts, and but few coming in, as the above numbers show. If our people would take our church papers, we could hope for better things. Some officers of this charge can not be prevailed on to take our church organ, or any other religious paper. This kind of darkness can be felt by any minister in the pastorate, and especially by this one.

Seeing there was so little hope of success in the usual way of conducting meetings, we resolved to have three churches to come to a centre, and unite forces. Two churches of Holly Springs and one of Pine Mountain circuits came together with baskets of provisions, and the people were blessed more than for many years in that section.

In this meeting we happily succeeded in gaining the presence of the evangelists, Rev. J. H. Collins and wife, to conduct the devotional services. They know how to reach the people, and work them in very happily. They work for souls, not hire; and the Lord's seals are not a few. This evangelist has an excellent tent. Will accommodate one thousand persons. This tent we had stretched for six days near Waterford, with the best results possible in so short a time. Twenty-seven conversions, and sixteen joined our church. Any pastor who needs an extra helper or aids will do well in securing the services of this man of God, with his efficient wife. In this meeting we are largely indebted to Bro. Collins and wife for their faithful services. To God be all the glory.

J. W. POSTON, Pastor.

MONTROSE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have held three protracted meetings on this work, and have had a good revival, reclaiming of the backsliders, and a gracious stirring up of the church, and a number of conversions: and out of the three meetings I have taken into the church forty-one members, and baptized seventeen children. I have four more protracted meetings to hold. For all this we give God the glory. Times are hard, collections short; and preacher has a hard run to live; but I think times will be better here in two months. Pray for us.

Yours in Christ,

J. H. EVANS, P. C.

"Old Maids."

BY MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

In a former issue of the ADVOCATE, "J. W. M." discourses very eruditely on the "old maid" question. We are told that "after God made Adam in all of his original beauty and great intellectual and physical powers," he contemplated his work with "exquisite satisfaction." Yet "the Infinite saw there was" a felt want. Adam had great "social, intellectual" and moral qualities, and his "well-being demanded it." The felt want was a wife. Adam was intellectually great, and his "social" qualities would rust "even in a paradisiacal garden" without a wife. His wife must needs be as intellectual as he, for he could never stoop to the level of an ignoramus. But "J. W. M." seems only to see one side of the question, viz: The woman was made for the man. The logic of his argument is that God made man; he made the woman for the man: hence every woman must have a man—just for the honor of the thing.

For my part, I have some doubts about Adam being such a "great social and intellectual" giant, and, verily, I do not think there was an old maid "from Dan to Beersheba" that would have married Adam. As to his "beauty," although I have never seen his photograph, I can scarcely believe he was any more handsome than some of our Bishops or preachers. But to the "old maid" question. Yes, "that's the question," though it need not "make cowards of us all."

Says "J. W. M.": "A poor husband is a thousand times better than none." He does not agree with the hero of Bedford jail, good old John Bunyan, for he tells us that while Christiana and the boys with Miss Mercy had arrived at a certain place, "Miss Mercy had a visitor that pretended some good-will unto her. His name was Mr. Brisk, a man of some breeding, pretended to religion, but stuck close to the world. He came often and offered love unto her."

"Now, Miss Mercy was of a fair countenance, very alluring. Her mind, as well as her body, was always busied in doing good. And Mr. Brisk, finding her always employed, thought she would be an admirable helpmeet." So he made known his ardent desires.

"Miss Mercy then revealed the business to the maidens of the house, and they told her Mr. Brisk" was a very busy young man, one that pretended to religion, but they feared it was all put on.

"Nay, then," said (the would-be old maid) Miss Mercy, "I will look no more on him, for I purpose never to have a clog to my soul."

So the next time Mr. Brisk came, he finds her at her old work making things for the poor. "What," says he, "always at it?" "Yes, either for myself or others." "What canst thou earn a day?" "I do these things," said she, "that I may be rich in good works, laying a foundation against the time to come, that I may lay hold on eternal life." "Why, prithee, what dost thou do with them?" said he. "Clothe the naked," said she. "With that his countenance fell, so he forebore to come at her again." And when he was asked the reason why, he said that "Miss Mercy was a pretty lass, but troubled with ill conditions."

"Did I not tell thee," said Prudence, "that Mr. Brisk would forsake thee? Yea, he will raise up an ill report about thee, notwithstanding his pretence to religion."

"I might have had husbands before now," said Miss Mercy, "though I spoke not of it to any: but they were such that did not like my conditions, though never did any of them find fault with my person; and if nobody will have me, I will die a maid, or my conditions shall be to me a husband, for I can not change my nature, and to have one that lies cross to me in, that I purpose never to admit of as long as I live. My sister Bountiful was married to one of these churls, and he and she could never agree, and because my sister resolved to do as she began, her husband first cried her down at the cross, and then turned her out of his doors."

"And yet he was a professor, I warrant you," said Prudence. "Yes," said Miss Mercy, "such a one as he was, and of such as he the world is now full; but I am for none of them all."

Well said, little Miss Mercy. Girls, take her for your model, notwithstanding "J. W. M." says, "A poor husband is a thousand times better than none."

That "boy bursting into the sweetfulness of manhood" would be the poorest sort of compensation for a life cut off and shut out from all the broad doors that are inviting you to enter and find work for heart and brain in the Master's vineyard, that you may be a wife for "a poor husband."

The one-sided view on the "old maid" question is silly, to say the least about it. Why not begin on the old bachelors if there is any blame to be attached to anyone? They have not the same excuse that women have, and yet they, for various causes, shirk their duty. When the women get "their rights" I, for one, will never vote for an old bachelor to be President.

Right here I venture to affirm that there is not one old maid in one hundred that is so from choice. Like "Mercy," they had "conditions," or they had "Hobson's choice," and they would not have "Hobson:" hence they are a jeer or a byword. Not so the old bachelors; they are petted and privileged everywhere.

As for Alice and Phœbe Cary, I happen to know that Alice was not an "old maid" from choice. The man she wasted the wealth of her pure love on was unworthy of the priceless treasure confided to his keeping. When the proof of the same was brought home to her great soul, such was the shock that her heart, bruised and bleeding, recoiled from the barest idea of ever saying to another man, "I love you." Yet she lived a grand and noble life, and the world is better to-day for it. One of her last acts was to make a cap for a poor woman. Her tired fingers dropped the needle or left it in the cap, and the old woman bedewed her bier with her tears. When death was nigh she requested to be bolstered up in bed, when she wrote a short poem, the last verse of which is as follows:

"As the poor panting hart to the water brook runs,
As the water brook runs to the sea;
So earth's fainting daughters and famishing sons,
O Fountain of Love, run to thee."

I have no doubt but that Phœbe Cary might, like Mercy, "have had husbands;" but she had "conditions" as well. She was fair to look upon, and in my childish eyes she was more beautiful and wise than any other girl. She had a perfect contempt for the man we called our teacher. He made love to the older girls and abused the smaller ones, and because she treated him with the contempt he deserved, he tried the more to annoy her. At recess she would take me with her and go to the orchard, and there she would read and talk to me. She said she would not go to school to such a man, but it was her only chance at that time to get an education. She could not find language strong enough to express her hatred of the man and his ways, and in after years I have often thought he must have made love to her. If so, and if any of her subsequent lovers were like him, no wonder at her choice of a single life. I have cause to remember that man, Moore, as long as I live by the scars he made on my back for imitating one of his own acts. Thank the Lord, his like is gone out of the land.

If Alice and Phœbe Cary's works are to be forgotten with other "literary trash," it may surely be said of them, though they were old maids—"They did what they could." But is their fame "ephemeral," as "J. W. M." says? Their books have an honored place in our own country, and have been translated in many other languages. Phœbe Cary's hymn, "One sweetly solemn thought," will live as long as any hymn lives. It has been the direct means of saving two gamblers' souls on the other side of the globe. This fact was a great comfort to Phœbe when told of it. One verse of one of her last poems, entitled "Reconciled," shall close this paper:

"O eyes, with weeping faded out,
What matters it how dim ye be;
My inner vision sweeps, untired,
The reaches of eternity."

Thief Arrested.

The news was received with the utmost satisfaction by the community that he had terrorized; but the arrest of a disease that is stealing away a loved and valued life, is an achievement that should inspire heartfelt gratitude. Chilliness, cold extremities, depressed spirits, and extremely miserable sensations, with pale wan features, are the results of disordered kidneys and liver. Arrest the cause at once by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a purely vegetable detective, that will ferret out and capture the most subtle lung or blood disorder. Druggists.

Scholars Added to Sabbath-schools. Eufaula, Ala., 6; Newbern, N. C., 4; Vinita, I. T., 33; Webber's Falls, I. T., 3; Muskogee, I. T., 4; Visalia, Ky., 6; Elizabethtown, Ky., 6; Ashland, Ky., 6; San Luis Obispo, 2. Whole number, 67.

Our Visiting Committees are beginning to understand the full meaning of their important part of this work, and we hope next quarter to hear of much more done on this line, as well as many members added to our societies.

The true meaning of church extension is the extension of our Lord's kingdom—the bringing of souls to Christ. Let our societies remember this. Let our Visiting Committees be large and zealous. Where persons can not be induced to attend the regular Sabbath-school, urge them to attend the mission school, if the church has one. Mission classes for the young, or Bible readings for older people, may be conducted in private houses on Sunday afternoons. Many who will not send their children to Sabbath-school will almost without fail open their houses for the children of the neighborhood to be gathered in. Older ones will accompany them and listen with interest to the teaching of the children. I have seen this done with great profit to the listeners and sweet comfort to the teacher. Remember, dear sisters, God looks to us for the salvation of the souls around us. We must work personally as well as give our money.

SPECIAL DONATIONS REPORTED BY SOCIETIES.

For Indian Territory—Clarksville, Tenn., $17; Cochran Chapel, North Texas, $7 75.

For local district and station parsonages (full dues sent in)—Eufaula, Ala., $145; Elizabethtown, Louisville Conference, $40.

For objects not specified—Los Angeles, Pacific Conference, $158; Hartsell, North Alabama Conference, $9; Ashland, Western Virginia Conference, $21; Memorial Church, Lynchburg, Virginia Conference, $21.

The secretary of Opelousas district, Louisiana Conference, unable to organize, and unwilling to have no report, secured a special donation of $5. This is an example worthy of imitation.

Note. The money in the mite boxes must go into the regular fund and be forwarded to the Conference treasurer with the dues of the adult society. Will the treasurer of these societies please be prompt in forwarding these funds to the Conference treasurer? Much depends upon their promptness.

Special donations secured for local purposes can be retained and the fact reported by the corresponding secretary. Special donations for purposes not local, but within the Conference, must be sent by the treasurer to the Conference treasurer, and the purposes for which it is intended specified. The fact must be reported by the corresponding secretary.

Special donations for purposes outside the Conference must be sent direct to Rev. David Morton, D. D., 520 West Chesnut St., Louisville, Ky. The fact that this has been done must be reported by the corresponding secretary, who makes all her reports to the Conference secretary.

Call for a World's Day of Prayer for the Temperance Cause.

NOVEMBER 12 AND 13, 1887.

From the first, the woman's temperance work has been a work of prayer and faith. The little praying bands in the United States and Canada have many times appointed special days of prayer. And now, when this heaven-born movement has expanded into the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the same spirit leads to the same methods, and from many hearts comes the cry for a world-embracing prayer-day, wide as the circuit of the sun. It will unify the thoughts of the white-ribbon women all around the globe; strengthen their purpose, and make their handclasp firmer, as together they bear onward the white flag, inscribed, "For God and Home and Every Land." It will claim the blessed promise made to Christ's disciples when they are agreed as touching anything, and from Heaven bring such a blessing upon our sacred cause as is not otherwise to be secured.

Therefore, it has been agreed, after consultation with Mrs. Magaret Bright Lucas, president of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, to set apart November 12 and 13, 1887, as days of prayer for the growth and universal diffusion of all forms of temperance work, especially those that have their origin in the conviction that the use of, and traffic in, brain poisons of every kind must be abolished by an appeal to the intellect through argument; to the heart through sympathy, and to the conscience through the quickening power of Christ's almighty gospel.

It is suggested that Saturday morning be devoted to a woman's temperance prayer meeting, asking for light upon the question: What is my personal duty in this matter? and Saturday afternoon or evening to a meeting of the children and young people, at which the reasons for total abstinence should be clearly set forth. On Sunday, pastors are respectfully and earnestly asked to pray especially for the temperance cause, to preach about it, and to take a collection for the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Sunday-school superintendents are asked to pray on that day for the same cause, and to bring it before their scholars; and on Sunday evening it is hoped that temperance meetings may be held, at which the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be the theme—its origin, organization, aims, and the missionary work accomplished for it by Mrs. Leavitt, Miss Gray, Mrs. Mary B. Willard and others explained, and, if practicable, a collection taken to promote its objects.

If these plans are carried out, it is believed that a great awakening will come upon the people relative to this great work, and that means will be furnished to extend and strengthen the society. All money raised should be reported to Miss Esther Pugh, 161 La Salle street, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A., American treasurer of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

At all meetings have the World's Petition presented and signatures asked. Copies will be sent free on application to Frances E. Willard, 161 La Salle street, Chicago: also the World's W. C. T. U. Leaflet, giving further information about the movement, will be sent if desired.

The white ribbon, emblem of peace and purity, is our badge, and should be worn by all our leaders, men and women.

The same days herein set apart are to be observed by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union (United States) as their day of prayer, not only for the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, but for the blessing of God upon the approaching annual convention, to be held November 16-21, 1887; and all our auxiliaries are asked to take a collection for the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, if practicable.

And, now, beloved sisters, well do we know that prayer is the simple expression of our needs to the Source of Help: let us join our hearts and voices with tender earnestness in this expression, and we have our Master's promise that the help shall surely come. Let us all pray.

On behalf of United States Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Briefs.

The minutes, just out, of the fifth Annual Convention of the Louisiana Woman's Christian Temperance Union discloses the cheering fact that there are in our State over fifty unions at work for "God and home and native land." These temperance sisters deserve the full sympathy and thorough co-operation of the brethren, and we feel sure that our ministers and laymen stand ready to render them practical help whenever they can.

God has said emphatically that all the silver and gold is his. We too seldom think of the full meaning of this. If it means anything, it means that at the final reckoning we shall be called upon to give a correct account of every dollar that passes through our hands. Every dollar is a part of a sacred trust-fund, and we have no more right to use God's money without his consent than that of our friends! If it is dishonest in the one case, why is it not in the other? "Beware of covetousness."

Solomon says, "A good wife is from the Lord." Then, young man, if you want a good wife, you must go to the Lord to get her. Take care that you don't get the girl's consent before you get the Lord's consent. That is a mistake many a poor fellow has made. He has fallen "heels over head in love" before he has let the Lord know anything about it. It is then a foregone conclusion that his prayers in the matter will be answered just as he wants them to be answered, and he will commence matrimonial life deluded with the idea that he has obtained a wife from the Lord. But he will be a happy man, even in that case—if the delusion will only last.

The picture of rest, as presented in the Word of God, is one of manifold beauty. Among the thousand pictures that adorn the Bible gallery, this one is seen oftener than any other. It is here, and there, and yonder. Here the light falls from the side, and the picture glows with the quiet serenity of twilight; there, the light flushes the full front of the picture with the glory of eastern skies. But of all the pictures of rest the most delicate touch, the most exquisite coloring, belongs to the picture in Psalm xxiii—"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters." That is rest, and quiet satisfaction with it. That is beauty not to be described.

We have seen a very judicious review of Dr. Broadus' Commentary on Matthew's gospel, in which occurs this fine paragraph:

A German professor, who never was engaged in a "revival," never saw a protracted meeting, never traveled about the country preaching the gospel wherever there was an opening, never heard an "evangelist," never heard any man preach out of doors, never attended a "district association" in the country, never even entered a country church—such a man, however learned he may be, labors under some very serious disadvantages in his attempts to interpret the discourses of a street and field preacher like Jesus, or of a traveling evangelist like Paul.

The Word of inspiration says, "Greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues, except he interpret;" and our experience is that frequently when we need the "interpretation," just then and there it fails.

Editorial Correspondence.

AT THE SPRINGS.

These Springs have been known and used for a great many years. There is here an incorporated town of about 300 inhabitants. There are three churches—Episcopal, Catholic and Baptist; only one of which (the Baptist) is finished. There is quite an imposing hotel of four stories, at which I do not stop; the rates being much above what an editor of a church paper can afford. There are now here, I suppose, about one hundred visitors, though I have not seen so many. Four passenger trains pass daily—two in the morning, and two in the evening, which brings the place in easy reach of all the rest of the world. The only thing I see here in the way of industry is a baryta mill, which grinds up about fourteen tons of baryta a week. The rocks containing the baryta are first broken to pieces by hammers, and these pieces are washed and bleached by chemicals, and then they are run through the mill, and ground as fine as flour. This substance is much used in paints. It is whispered that it is also used to adulterate flour, candies, etc. It is very heavy, and, of course, would soon bring a barrel of flour up to the standard 196 pounds.

The bath-rooms belong to the Hotel Company, and are well arranged, and lined and bottomed with marble; and the water is as clear as any water I ever saw. The temperature of the water ranges from 96 to 104 degrees; and a bath of fifteen minutes' duration, and then a sweat under four blankets for ten minutes more, produces a most delightful sensation on the physical man. As soon as you get accustomed to the warmth, the water is very pleasant to drink, and you can drink as much as you please without any apparent discomfort. Whether there is any medicinal properties in the water seems to be an unsettled question. If there is none, why should a man come away off here for a warm bath when he could, without spending a nickel, have a kettle of hot water at home and easily bring the winter blankets out of the chest and take a sweat for nothing? There are some questions I never pretend to be wise enough to answer, and this is one of them.

The place itself is quite picturesque. It is about forty miles northwest from Ashville. This little valley is about a mile long, and 300 yards wide at its widest point. It lies on the west side of the French Broad river, and is hemmed in on all sides by mountains 500 or 600 feet high. The springs are very near the river; indeed, I have heard that there are springs in the river. Nature seems to have made the valley for the springs, or the springs for the valley, I don't know which. At any rate, this little plain, surrounded by these tall rocky mountains, is a very interesting sight to the eyes of a Louisianian, and I do not tire looking at the landscape. I sit by my window, and watch the morning clouds trail their skirts along the sides and over the tops of the mountain, and wonder if they do not become "draggled," as the women say. Then I contemplate the shadows of the higher clouds as they spot the mountain-sides, and skim over trees and shrubs in their efforts to scale the rocky steeps. But the most beautiful sight is to watch the western mountain as the sun rises. A few stray rays seem to become entangled in a net-work of silvery gauze on his summit, and then they go to weaving a garment for his covering; and, as the process goes on, the garment enlarges and gradually unrolls and falls along down his sides and gathers itself in ample folds about his feet; and the rocky monarch looks over the little valley clothed in beauty from the newly risen sun. When I look upon such sights, and contemplate such scenes, they speak to me in unmistakable tones of a God of grandeur and beauty behind them all: and my soul bows in adoration to him who can make such things, and make me capable of appreciating and enjoying them.

ROUND ABOUT THE SPRINGS.

It is said, in the Psalms, that the "mountains are round about Jerusalem;" and the same may be said of the beautiful plateau where this little town is located. Looking out of my east window, and at about forty-five degrees from a straight line, there rises a perpendicular, bald rock to the distance of six hundred feet, upon the summit of which some of the adventurous boy visitors have planted a flag, which flaps itself to pieces in the mountain breeze. This huge brown rock is called "Lovers' Leap," and there is connected with it the same old tradition of two young people, fleeing from parental anger, and, when closely pressed by paternal ire, jumping with locked arms into the "racing waters" below. Every "Lovers' Leap" has the same story, and I expect the same lovers took the fatal leap in each case. The fact is suspected that these lovers have been the most accommodating couple to writers on natural scenery that have ever been invented, and I also am indebted to them for this paragraph.

A poetess has been here before me, and has described some of these scenes in graceful verse. Take this stanza as descriptive of a general view of the valley:

"Here are lowering, rugged mountains,
Granite rocks all scarred and gray,
Nature's altars, whence her incense
Floats in wreaths of mist away."

On the east side of this valley, and washing the base of the mountains, is French Broad river, which takes its rise somewhere about Ashville, on the summit of the Blue Ridge. Why it should be called "French Broad," I do not know. It is certainly not broad at any point I have seen. I have seen many streams in Louisiana much wider, and we never think of calling them broad; but, then, we are used to looking upon the mighty Mississippi. The French Broad would be completely swallowed up if even the Ouachita should come along this way. The Indian name for this stream was Agiqua, which, we are told, means "racing waters." Now, I can see very great appropriateness in that name, for the water, as it seuds along the shallows and tumbles over the rocks, seems really to be running a race, and doing its best to overtake that which has gone before. Our poetess has caught this beautiful sight of the racing of these waters, and sings:

"Down the canyons' rocky gorges,
Now they wildly, madly sweep,
As with laughing shout triumphant,
O'er the rocks they joyous leap."

About half-way from the French Broad to the Western Mountain is a bold mountain creek, which divides the town into two parts, and serves as a natural drain. The water is clear and beautiful, and, fed by mountain springs, it is perennial. What seems strange to me is the fact that all these wildly dashing waters, which here seem to be endowed with life, will after-while lose all their bouyant spirits, and lazily move along by New Orleans out into the Gulf of Mexico. Another strange thing is that these warm springs should be in such close proximity to the cold waters of this mountain river. What fires heat these waters and keep them warm? Where is the huge caldron which nature uses to heat up these springs? Our poetess has noticed this proximity of the cold and warm waters, and she says:

"Pulsing from the heart of nature,
Here thy warm springs genial gush;
There, like stream from Alpine glacier,
Down the mountain coldly rush."

About six miles down the river from this place is the celebrated "Paint Rock," of which I had a good view when I came up. It is a huge brown-gray rock, which rises sheer from the water's edge, and has the appearance of having been painted in broad streaks from side to side. It appears from the cars to be gradually crumbling away. It is not as grand a sight as the "Lovers' Leap" rock, of which I have spoken.

I see some queer specimens of humanity coming out from among these mountains. The men are tall, lank, and leaning forward as they walk, having a stride of at least a yard. If there is anything in the old saying, "A lean dog for a long chase," then you may set these mountaineers down as a winning race of folks in the long run. I have seen but few of the women. Those I have seen are small, and look as if they were about worried to life's end with cares and labors; but mine host says it is snuff-dipping.

And, now, as the reader is no doubt tired of this, I say, "Good-night," and "God be with you till we meet again!"

Letter from Georgia.

MR. EDITOR: The world travels now as never before. Railroads and steamships have almost annihilated space, and the millions of mankind are becoming acquainted and unified to an extent which could not have been conceived possible a hundred years ago. How wonderfully wise was he who said, three thousand years ago, that "many should run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." The printing press has flooded the world with literature; the telegraph and the telephone have written and spoken afar by the lightning's flash, yet nothing equals the living man as a forceful importer of knowledge. The eye and tongue of the living teacher give instruction its quickening power. New ideas strike the traveler at every turn. Everything, from a steam engine to a pin, is being improved; and the perpetual multiplication and improvements of all kinds of mechanical inventions and appliances are but illustrations of what should be taking place in society, in commerce, in government and in the church. In buying a steam engine, a man recently saved five hundred dollars by expending five in traveling and seeking information in person. Many shall run to and fro. Men must go, if men would know.

The Georgians, in spite of the Commission, are building railroads so fast that it will soon be difficult to find space and time to run them in. The latest idea in the saving of both is for no road to cross another in its own plain, but to run above or below it. Of course, the roads are profitable, or they would not be built.

The corn crop of Georgia is this year pronounced good, and the cotton crop promises well. Peaches generally failed from cold in the blooming season, and apples are not so abundant as usual. Wheat and oats were both short crops this year. The recent floods were almost unprecedentedly high and destructive in many places. Parts of Augusta and other cities were inundated, and hundreds of acres of corn and cotton were not only submerged, but swept utterly away. Still the rains improved myriads of acres on the high lands.

The city of Atlanta has done many things well, but her greatest and best achievement was to demonstrate to the world, as she has done in the last two years, that a great commercial city can not only make prohibition prohibit within her limits, but prosper under the process. The facts and figures show that Atlanta, while enforcing prohibition with admirable moral results, has continued to advance rapidly in every desirable element of growth. One such fact is worth a thousand theories and arguments on the subject. The argument is now closed. Atlanta and Meridian and Jackson, Miss., and many other places, have proven by experiment that prohibition does not hurt, but greatly helps the prosperity of a city. We thank God, and go forward on the same line. Four-fifths of the counties of Georgia have banished the saloon. Let us notice that we are now reasoning on the devil's own ground, counting silver against souls, and dollars against deaths; and still we have the argument. If it cost us the loss of half our fortunes, the saloons ought to be abolished. How much more when its suppression promotes every interest of man.

Several counties of this State are yet struggling in the coils of the anaconda. Mr. Davis' recent letter is being used as a campaign document by the advocates of the saloon in Merriwether county. Millions of his countrymen felt the ardor of their love and admiration for Mr. Davis chilled by that letter. He gives no argument, but speaks of men being "governed too much." Can we be governing ourselves or others too much when we refuse to set before our neighbor temptations to debauchery and death? Can Mr. Davis, or any other man, say that the saloon is a good thing? If not, why should he or any other wish to authorize and protect it by law? The publication of the letter is to be regretted more for the sake of its author than for the sake of the great cause whose progress it may slightly retard, but can not seriously obstruct, much less reverse. Alas! that "great men are not always wise." Though he or an angel from heaven should defend the whisky traffic, it is doomed in the hearts of the American people. "Knowest thou not yet that Egypt is destroyed?" No legal or other technicalities, or quibbles about personal liberty, or aught else, can divest the men of this day of the clearly defined conviction that it is their duty to put down the saloon by the same means by which they set it up—that is, by law. We make it, and we can cease to make it. It is wholly a factitious evil, and not a natural one. For the evils of the whisky traffic man is exclusively responsible.

Texas has registered her vote, showing one hundred and forty thousand for the right, and two hundred thousand for the wrong. She will reverse that verdict next time. Moral reformations must move slowly. Tennessee will no doubt show higher moral convictions on the greatest question of our day. When we consider the amazing amount of ignorance and vice involved in an American election, it is simply wonderful that we ever reach a great moral end by a popular vote. Ignorance and vice should not rule nor vote, yet they often do both. Our laws touching this fact might be improved, and will be as we grow wiser.

W. L. C. H.

Rev. John W. Boswell, in the Southwestern Methodist, puts it just right:

But what assurance have we that the new book will be used in all our churches? That class of preachers who are more wedded to Prayer and Praise, to Gospel Hymns and other books than they are to the law of the church will still disobey instructions. The revision was ordered in compliance with the wishes of those who complained that the old book did not meet the popular demand. When the new book is issued, they ought to be required to use it. There is a way to effect such a result: In the annual examination of character let inquiry be made on this point. To refuse to use our hymn book is not only a violation of law, but the preacher violates a solemn promise. He vowed at the outset of his ministry to be obedient. The law says: "In all our congregations let the people learn to sing, and use our own hymn and tune book."

Another Grand Victory for Pro bition.

If we had a good cut of cannon, and if a cannon was a carnal weapon, we would c tainly put it just here in to of the signal defeat of whisky Bienville parish. Three che for Arcadia! She has beat the whiskyites three to o Shouting over the victory is carnal and is thoroughly Metho istic. The praying Christi women—God bless them!—h much to do with it. Read B Miller's letter:

MR. EDITOR: Our local opti election came off last Wedn day, August 31. It embrac five wards in Bienville paris the Sixth having voted dry l than twelve months ago. could not vote in this electio Three out of the five voting this election went dry. Ma thought Arcadia ward to doubtful, but the sequel pro gloriously triumphant. At o'clock A. M. the ladies of A cadia, of all denominations, m in the Methodist Church, and he a prayer meeting. ARCADIA, LA., Sept. 2, 1887.

Notes.

From the Nashville Christian Advocate:

The bargain: If you will give th church a dollar, the church in retur will give you a dollar's worth of fu Such bargains are made on earth, b they are not ratified in heaven.

The following from The Churchma should be read:

The convention of the diocese o California, this year, unanimousl passed the following resolution in re gard to "church entertainments."

Resolved, That this convention reit erates and emphasizes the condemna tory resolution of the convention o 1881 against "all schemes for raisin money for church or religious purpose which savor directly or indirectly o gambling, the lottery, rambling an other games of chance, or of the publi ball."

We clip from an exchange the fol lowing:

The town of Augusta, Me., with population of only 8,000 souls, is th headquarters of nineteen monthly magazines, which have a combine circulation of 1,100,000 copies. Thre of these have a circulation of 450,00 four, of 300,000; and twelve, of 350,00 Six of them are devoted to agriculture and the remainder are literary. Th subscription price, in almost every case is very low.

We don't know about all of thos magazines; but we have seen some coming from Augusta, Me., that is th veriest trash that was ever impose upon the public; and trash is alway cheap, and yet the dearest thing, in moral and literary view, that a ma ever brought within the family circle Beware of literature that is cheap!

Dr. Deems has an article in the Au gust number of the Forum, on "Th Progress of Co-Education." He show by testimony that the cause of co-edu cation of the sexes is growing in favo with those colleges where the experi ment has been fairly tried. He cite Columbia College, Cornell University Harvard, University of Michigan University of Wisconsin, and Boston University among the institution which have tried co-education; an the heads of these are all pleased with the results obtained. In regard to th course of study, Dr. Deems uses thi language:

If I had autocratic power, I would restrict college studies to the branches which are especially, and I might almost say exclusively, intended for intellectual development. Latin, Greek and mathematics should be the trinity here. In post-graduate or university departments I would have those studies which are intended for practical life, and they should be pursued only by those who had gone through the pre liminary intellectual training in the college classes. Up to the close of the college course both sexes should have the same curriculum, there being no elective studies until the student is old enough and sufficiently trained to take the B. A. degree. In colleges both sexes should be admitted without any discrimination. The examinations should be absolutely impartial.

Personals.

President Cleveland has appointed the Hon. Samuel S. Carlisle, of this city, to the vacancy caused by the resignation of George W. A. Seay, late minister to Peru. We hesitate not to say that the President has made an excellent choice. Mr. Carlisle, by high natural ability, liberal education and wide experience, both in legal and business life, is thoroughly fitted for a practical and brilliant career as the nation's representative at Bolivia. He is withal a Christian gentleman, and will carry with him a nobility of character, polish of manners and genuine manliness that can not fail to bring honor to himself and country.

The death of Rev. Dr. Hardie Brown has left a void hard to fill. A popular, eloquent and useful minister, his decease must prove an affliction indeed, and especially to the young men of Birmingham. They thronged upon his ministry; and, recognizing in him a true friend, he was to them potent for good. After a life of faithful labor for the Master he has gone to his reward.

We learn through Rev. R. M. Blocker, of Bellevue, La., of the death, on August 29, at Tyler, Texas, of his brother, Rev. M. E. Blocker, of the East Texas Conference. He leaves a wife and mother. He died in great peace. The bereaved family and our Bro. Blocker will have the sympathies and prayers of all in their great affliction.

Interviewing a member of Felicity Building Committee, we were highly pleased to learn that in the near future work will begin on the church, materially changing and greatly modernizing the old structure. In the place of the former Felicity there will stand forth some time in 1888, as a thing of beauty and a marvel of completeness, a new Felicity, inheriting the glory of the first and fully prepared, with not a nickel of debt upon it, for a long and honorable career of usefulness in the all-important matters of soul-saving and the building of Christian character. What multitudes of souls were born unto God around the old altars, and what happy times God's saints used to have within the old walls! May prayer be mixed into the cement of the coming church and, under God, as he dwells in her, may the glory of the second Felicity far surpass the glory of the first!

We take pleasure in stating that Rev. Lewis A. Reed, of Grosse Tete and False River circuit, raised $25 for missions during self-denial week. Bro. A. B. Earle has sent more than the $50 reported before. Thus the New Orleans district increases her amount. We have yet to hear from Rev. W. Wimberly. Bro. Reed is doing a good year's work in a very hard field.

East Mississippi Female College, at Meridian, Miss., opens the twelfth instant. Already a very large increase of patronage is promised. The president expects to open with a full school, for which extensive preparation is made.

Items of Interest.

The population of Knoxville, Tenn., has increased 400 per cent. since 1880. It now numbers 37,000.

There are now cables on almost every sea and ocean bed, the total length of the wire being about 113,000 miles. There are nine cables connecting Europe with America.

The number of school children in Ireland is said to be 1,000,000 out of a population of 5,000,000. The government appropriates annually over $1,000,000 to public schools.

The high license law of Minnesota has reduced the number of saloons in Minneapolis from 350 to 150.

In eighty-four years the United States has acquired by purchase 2,752,723 square miles of territory, costing in cash $52,000,000, not counting the cost of war.

It is said that one-half the book-writers of the present are women, and that there are 2,400 unmarried women in the missionary field.

The statement is made that during the half year past, we have invested $100,000,000 in new railroads, $100,000,000 in buildings, and $100,000,000 in Southern mines and manufactories.

In 1880 there were 500 miles of railroad in Mexico; now there are 3,500 miles, with $120,000,000 invested. Americans are said to own 2,700 miles.

Canon Wilberforce declares that the Irish question is a whisky question, the latter bill exceeding Ireland's yearly rent-bill by $11,250,000.

Joaquin Miller is engaged on a Life of Christ, in verse. It will be a long poem divided into five parts.

It is said that there are 300 young colored men and women with good education who are ready to go as missionaries to Africa.

A Methodist Church in Denver is to have a $30,000 organ; said to be the finest in America.

KIDNEY and bladder troubles produce a feeling of utter despondency. A genial stimulant and tonic, and an unfailing remedy for all such troubles, may be found in Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

Temperance and Other Things.

There still seems to be two classes of individuals who do not believe in prohibition as demonstrated by Senator Colquitt, of Georgia. He says:

"It is clear to all, save the feeble-minded and the evil-minded, that prohibition is a positive blessing wherever it is tried."—American Journal of Education.

Every little duty counts. No matter how small, it may bring you out, as that delightful little boy came out, who, having but one cent to put in the plate, was desperately afraid it was too small to be counted. Imagine his joy when the minister read out: "Our collection to-day amounts to fifty dollars—and one cent."

The distillers of the West are combining to form a great whisky pool with a view of controlling the wholesale liquor trade of the United States. The capital represented by the members of the pool is estimated at $25,000,000. It is proposed to monopolize the production of liquor in this country and regulate prices. Incidentally the combination will take part in resisting the growth of "temperance fanaticism," and will oppose the passage of laws "calculated to injure the trade." The temperance cause will find a new and powerful enemy in this whisky monopoly. Twenty-five million dollars is a large sum to fight against.—Christian Guardian.

When General Robert E. Lee, commander of the Confederate Armies, came home from the war, his wife found unopened a bottle of brandy she had placed in his trunk to be used in case of sickness. He never touched tobacco. He refused promotion to an officer who drank, saying, "I can not place in control of others one who can not control himself."—Treasure Trove.

Lord Erskine had the following unique form of replying to begging letters: "Sir: I feel honored by your application, and I beg to subscribe"—here the recipient had to turn over the leaf—"myself, your very obedient servant."

You picture to yourself the beauty of bravery and steadfastness. You let your imagination wander in delight over the memory of martyrs who have died for truth. And then some little, wretched, disagreeable duty comes, which is your martyrdom, the lamp for your oil; and if you will not do it, how your oil is spilt! How flat and thin and unilluminated your sentiment about the martyrs runs out over your self-indulgent life.—Phillips Brooks.

Two little brothers were looking at the moon. The youngest, two years old, had never seen it before. The next morning, hopping about in his night-dress, he suddenly ran to the window, exclaiming, "Where moon?" "O, don't you know," said wise four-year-old, "it's blowed out in the morning?"

Mr. Moody, in his Christian Convention at Northfield, the other day, said, "We want more Christians like the Irishman, who was asked if he didn't tremble during a certain storm when he was standing out upon a rocky eminence. 'Yes,' said the man, 'my legs trembled, but the rock did'nt, and because my feet were on the rock I felt safe.'"

NATIONAL REFORM MEETING.

A meeting extending over part of two days has just been held under the auspices of the National Reform Association, at Saratoga Springs, New York, and was attended by large audiences. The Rev. Herrick Johnson, D. D., of Chicago, presided. The Rev. Joseph Smith, D. D., Moderator this year of the Presbyterian General Assembly, presented the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the fundamental principles of the National Reform Association, viz., that Almighty God is the source of authority and power in civil government: that the Lord Jesus Christ is the ruler of nations, and that his revealed will is of supreme authority in civil affairs, are true and scriptural principles, and that these principles must control our national life, or we shall perish.

Resolved, That the Sabbath is "a sign" between God and men, and its reverent observance a mark of the nation whose God is Jehovah: that if we should consent to the overthrow of the American Sabbath, we would renounce all relation to the God of our fathers; and that the assaults which are constantly and too often successfully made upon the Sabbath and its safeguards are hostile to the life and welfare of the nation.

Resolved, That the divorce of our public education from all religious influences and ideas which many are seeking and in some places have accomplished, is contrary to the true nature of education and to the public good.

Resolved, That the family lies at the foundation of the State, and its preservation is our highest interest and duty; that the law of Christ for the family is the true standard of all legislation affecting it; that our lax divorce laws and other laws which foster impurity, involve the whole nation in danger and guilt, and that there is urgent need for uniform legislation on this subject in conformity with the law of Christ.

The discussions turned chiefly on the question of education as presented in the third resolution, and were participated in by the Rev. Dr. Price, president of the Methodist College for Young Ladies, Nashville, Tenn., the Rev. Dr. Cowles, president of Elmira Female College; the Rev. Dr. S. V. Leech, of Saratoga, for seven years chaplain of the New York Senate; the Rev. Dr. Smith and the Rev. Samuel McLanahan, of Baltimore; the Rev. Mr. Winn, of Petersburg, Va.; the Rev. Messrs. Tufts, Sawyer and Lanphear, of Massachusetts; the Rev. H. E. Niles, D. D., of Pennsylvania. These representative men from so wide a range of territory were unanimous in their agreement on the principles and measures set forth in the resolutions.

From Waterproof, La.

The following letter speaks for itself, and we can not refrain from commending the fidelity of the lay brother who has sent the amount. Bro. Carradine has forwarded it to Dr. John.

Rev. B. Carradine—

DEAR BROTHER: Our preacher being absent, I have undertaken to collect a few dollars in the week of prayer, etc., towards paying the missionary debt. I do not know who is the proper person to remit it to; but, observing that you are a member of the Louisiana Conference Missionary Board, I venture to remit the same to you, and request that you make the proper disposition of it—postal money order for seven dollars and twenty cents. Yours,

JOSEPH GORTON.

The city Methodists must not forget that the bi-monthly meeting of the City Mission is to be held in Carondelet Street Church, on the night of Tuesday, September 13, at half-past seven o'clock. Let there be a full house. Good work has been done by the Mission, and most interesting reports may be expected.

Rev. R. S. Woodward, under date of September 5, sends this sad news:

Mrs. Fountain Barksdale died, of pneumonia, this morning. The loss to the church, the community and her family is irreparable. A more extended notice will be furnished soon.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

"Too much absorbed in his business," was the comment of a newspaper on the death of a brewer who was found drowned in a tank of his own beer.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and epilepsy are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and rioters. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The dimple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW FRANKLIN, HOWARD CO., MO.
Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.
Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.
Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD.
Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

Our Young People.

A LOVER'S TRIUMPH.

I was writing in my study,
But I could not think aright;
For my boy had said, "Dear mamma,
I just want you in my sight.

"I will not disturb you, truly,
But be still as any mouse.
Only let me have my blocks here;
I will make a splendid house."

I said, "Yes," for who could help it,
When he said, with lover's grace,
"It will make me, oh, so happy
Just to see my mamma's face!"

But the choice of building worried—
Should it now be that or this?
And the builder sorely needed
Every now and then—a kiss.

Till at last I turned in earnest:
"Longer now it can not be,
Building thoughts and blocks together
Isn't helpful, dear, to me."

Then my lover came to flatter,
Shook his curls, and said—the elf—
"Mamma dear, if papa hadn't
I should marry you myself!"

All my precious thoughts were scattered:
What cared I, with such a boy?
Thoughts and editors are plenty;
I will have a mother's joy.

So he won, my little lover,
And to be his sweetheart true
I would rather chent the public;
Would you blame me if I do?

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter from this part of the country, I thought I would write a few lines. We have had a protracted meeting at Oak Grove. There was fifty-two accessions to the church. Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir is our pastor. We all love him, and we hope he will be sent back here next year. We take the dear old ADVOCATE. I like to read it very much, and I think it ought to be in every family. I will answer Faulk and Sue Noble's question: "And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall and escaped his hand." This refers to Paul. I will close by asking a question: What verse in the Bible contains all the letters in the alphabet except the letters "j," "q," "y?"

JOHNNIE PAUL.
POINT MAIGRE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As you were so kind as to publish my first letter, I thought I would write another letter. I am a little girl fourteen years old. I am going to school. Miss M. A. Hicks is my teacher. I like her very much. My studies are arithmetic, grammar, geography, history, anatomy and spelling. I am a member of the Methodist Church, and go to two Sunday-schools the same day. My Sunday-school teachers are Mr. D. R. McClendon and Mr. A. V. Williamson. I like to go to Sunday-school very much. Bro. Morse is our pastor for this year. We like him very much, and think it a nice treat to have his family with us. I will close for this time, with many wishes to the ADVOCATE. SUSIE BUSH.
THREADVILLE, Mississippi.

Children
Often need some safe cathartic and tonic to avert approaching sickness, or to relieve colic, headache, sick stomach, indigestion, dysentery and the complaints incident to childhood. Let the children take Simmons Liver Regulator and keep well. It is purely vegetable, not unpleasant to the taste, and safe to take alone or in connection with other medicine.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your most valuable paper, I thought I would write. I will answer Oscar E. David's question: There are twenty-seven books in the New Testament. Also I will answer Bertie C. Felps' question: Saul was the king who was a head and shoulder taller than the people. Now, I will ask the little cousins a few questions: How many letters, words, verses, chapters and books in the Bible? Also how many times the word "and" occurs? And in what place the word "reverend" occurs? How many times the word "Lord" occurs? Wishing the ADVOCATE much success, I remain,

Your little friend,
JAS. L. ANDREWS.
JACKSON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: We have been taking your valuable paper ever since I can remember. I like to read it so much, especially the children's page. I am a little girl ten years old. We have a very flourishing Sunday-school. We still have our long-beloved superintendent, Mr. John L. Seales. He has been our superintendent for twenty-five years. I will answer Percy Holt's question: The prophecy of the dry bones is found in Ezekiel xxxvii. This is my first attempt at letter writing to a paper.

Your little friend,
JOHNNIE HOSS.
MANSFIELD, Louisiana.

"Be a Somebody."

"Boys, when I look at your young faces, I could fancy myself a boy again, and go back to the days when I, too, tried for prizes, sometimes succeeding, sometimes failing. I was once as fond of play as any of you, and in the summer weather I fear my head might have been more full of cricket than of Terence or even Homer. But still I can always remember that, whether at work or at play, I had always a deep, though quiet determination that sooner or later I would be a somebody, or do a something. That determination continues with me to this hour."

These words are taken from an address given before a school of boys, by Lord Lytton. Does he not in them give us a key to the secret of his success? His object was "to do a something." Not to live on from day to day with no fixed end in view, but to accomplish something, to make each success only a stepping-stone to something yet higher and better. This was the way in which he worked, and this is the way in which we all must work, if we intend to do anything worth doing at all.

Work toward an end, boys. From your early school days work towards an end. Perhaps you may never reach that end, you say; but is that any reason that you should not strive to reach it? He who climbs the mountain may not reach the top, it is true; but half way toward the summit he will be above the valley mists, and have a position well worth all his striving. Never falter till you have climbed above the mists of ignorance, and gained a fair view of life.

Climb, though it be ever so slowly; but whatever you do, climb!—Exchange.

TRUTH.—Truth is beautiful as well as safe and mighty. In the incident related below a boy twelve years old, with only truth as a weapon, conquered a smart and shrewd lawyer who was fighting for a bad cause.

"Truth is the highest thing that man may keep," and the noblest child or man is he who keeps the truth ever between his lips.

Walter was the important witness in a lawsuit. One of the lawyers, after cross-questioning him severely, said:

"Your father has been talking to you and telling you how to testify, hasn't he?"

"Yes," said the boy.

"Now," said the lawyer, "just tell us how your father told you to testify."

"Well," said the boy, modestly, "father told me that the lawyers would try and tangle me in my testimony; but, if I would just be careful and tell the truth, I could tell the same thing every time."

The lawyer didn't try to tangle up that boy any more.

HOW TO BE NOBODY.—It is easy to be nobody, and we will tell you how to do it. Go to the drinking-saloon to spend your leisure time. You need not drink much now; just a little beer or some other drink. In the meantime play dominoes, checkers, or something else to kill time, so that you will be sure not to read any useful books. If you read anything, let it be the dime novel of the day; thus go on keeping your stomach full and your head empty, and yourself playing time-killing games, and in a few years you will be nobody, unless you should turn out a drunkard or a professional gambler, either of which is worse than nobody. There are any number of young men hanging about saloons just ready to graduate and be nobodies.—Watchman.

Household.

Summer Visiting.

Country residents are proverbially hospitable, and for that reason we should be doubly careful not to impose upon them, for, as a general rule, they are so overrun with company that the end of the summer finds them worn out. Every member of a household is an added care to the head of it, especially if, as is often the case, there are few servants, or none at all; and even if the mistress is fortunate enough to possess a corps of well trained domestics, too much company is apt to disarrange the household affairs in the lower regions.

If you are fortunate enough to have a friend to whom you know a visit will afford real pleasure, by a little forethought you can yet make it still more enjoyable. In the first place, fix a definite time for your departure before you arrive. If she is not wise enough to do so, be sure when you write to announce your coming, to say on what day you will leave, and then be still more sure that you do leave, no matter how hospitably you may be urged to prolong your stay. It is better to have your departure sincerely regretted than to have the faintest feeling of relief that you are gone.

There are many ways in which a summer visitor may be a real help. If circumstances warrant it, you can offer your aid in household matters, and spend an hour hulling strawberries, or whipping the cream which you are afterwards to enjoy, and if you see that assistance of that kind will not be acceptable, there will be still something that you can do: you can arrange the flowers, that perhaps, the busy house-mother never finds time for, and yet enjoys so much: you can coax the children out of the kitchen, when you know she is specially busy, and entertain them in your own room, and there are countless other little things that a kindly heart and a quick eye will discover, in which you can make your presence a constant comfort.—Good Housekeeping.

A SIMPLE CURE FOR RHEUMATISM.—A correspondent of the English Mechanic says: Let all of "ours" know the following: My wife has suffered occasionally with acute rheumatism in her feet, with painful swelling, completely taking her off her feet for many days at a time. The following remedy was recommended recently and tried, and took away the agonizing pain in less than fifteen minutes, and she can now walk very fairly, and in a couple of days she will be able to button her boots, and walk without a stick or crutch. One quart of milk, quite hot, into which stir one ounce of alum; this makes curds and whey. Bathe the part affected with the whey until too cold. In the meantime keep the curds hot, and after bathing, put them on as a poultice, wrap in flannel, and go to sleep. You can. Three applications should be a perfect cure, even in aggravated cases.

POTATO CROQUETTE.—For the potato croquettes, put in a mixing bowl one large cup of mashed potatoes, a little nutmeg and cayenne pepper and the beaten yolk of one egg. Beat this with a fork until very light and smooth, roll into little pear-shaped cones, dip in egg and then in bread crumbs and fry in boiling fat. When anything is to be fried by immersion, always test the fat by throwing in a bit of bread: if it takes on a boiling brown color quickly, the fat is hot enough, and your croquettes will be crisp outside and light and dry inside.

Is This What Ails You?

Do you have dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; eyes weak, watery and inflamed; ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; voice changed and nasal twang; breath offensive; smell and taste impaired; is there a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility? If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from Nasal Catarrh. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated by physicians. The manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer, in good faith, a reward of $500 for a case of this disease which they can not cure. The Remedy is sold by druggists, at only 50 cents.

MISCELLANEOUS.

You Carry

A whole medicine chest in your pocket, with one box of Ayer's Pills. As they operate directly on the stomach and bowels, they indirectly affect every other organ of the body. When the stomach is out of order, the head is affected, digestion fails, the blood becomes impoverished, and you fall an easy victim to any prevalent disease. Miss M. E. Boyle, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., puts the whole truth in a nutshell, when she says: "I use no other medicine than Ayer's Pills. They are all that any one needs, and just splendid to save money in doctors' bills."

Here is an instance of

A Physician

who lost his medicine chest, but, having at hand a bottle of Ayer's Pills, found himself fully equipped.—J. Arrison, M. D., of San José, Cal., writes:

"Some three years ago, by the merest accident, I was forced, so to speak, to prescribe Ayer's Cathartic Pills for several sick men among a party of engineers in the Sierra Nevada mountains, my medicine chest having been lost in crossing a mountain torrent. I was surprised and delighted at the action of the Pills, so much so, indeed, that I was led to a further trial of them, as well as of your Cherry Pectoral and Sarsaparilla. I have nothing but praise to offer in their favor."

John W. Brown, M. D., of Oceana, W. Va., writes: "I prescribe Ayer's Pills in my practice, and find them excellent. I urge their general use in families."

T. E. Hastings, M. D., of Baltimore, Md., writes: "That Ayer's Pills do control and cure the complaints for which they are designed, is as conclusively proven to me as anything possibly can be. They are the best cathartic and aperient within the reach of the profession."

BEMISS—Died at China Grove, Tensas parish, La., August 19, 1887, Mrs. LIZZIE J. BEMISS, wife of James B. Bemiss, Esq., of Rodney, Miss., aged thirty-two years. Mrs. Bemiss was the daughter of the late John F. Harper, Esq., of Tensas parish. About five years ago she united with the Methodist Church, and continued to be a consistent member till called from earth. About six months ago she was stricken with a painful disease, and since this time her life was one of great suffering. Physicians who were tenderly careful in their ministrations, loving relatives, anxious husband, brothers, sisters and friends—all of whom loved her—were untiring in their efforts to restore her to health. Prayers were offered in her behalf, petitions that she might be again restored to comfort and cheer those most devoted to her, if it were the will of God; but the Father who loved her, and whom she loved, had in store better things, a brighter home than earth could afford. She continued to grow worse, until on Thursday, August 18, it became evident that the end—the end of all her suffering and sorrow—was approaching. On Thursday she called her dear ones to her bedside, and bade them a tender farewell. It was as if she was preparing to take a short journey, and expected to meet them again soon. But her words gave proof of the fact that she fully knew it would be no journey at all: merely a closing of the eyes—merely a falling asleep—and then the awakening in the presence of God, of her Savior—in the full enjoyment of infinite peace and love. She said, "It is sweet to die in Jesus." They stood there at the bedside, and watched her as she breathed her life away. Soon all was motionless, and her soul was with the Christ who died to save it. Her life was as beautiful as was her devotion deep. She was perfectly resigned to the will of God—willing to go wherever he directed. She has awakened to the reality of heaven. She is happy "in the full enjoyment of God to all eternity." Our sympathies go out especially to the husband whom God has bereft of so loving a companion, and to the bright little one, hardly old enough to realize a mother's love. We commend them to the loving care of that God whom their dear one so faithfully served. Other relations will miss her. God is a Being of infinite love and sympathy, and he does not forget the sufferings of those who are his. To him may we all look in the hour of affliction, and from him will come that peace "which the world can neither give nor take away." "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

GRANT—Little HETTIE ALABAMA GRANT, daughter of Mr. A. G. and Mrs. Alabama Grant, is another sweet flower transplanted to heaven. Her beautiful life began October 23, 1882. She died at her home in Red River parish, August 14, 1887. After a few days' illness she gained the victory, and went to him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven." She leaves a father and mother, five sisters and one brother to mourn her loss. Our loss is her gain, and we bow with humble submission to the will of our heavenly Father, and pray that his grace may comfort the afflicted ones in their sad bereavement. May God comfort the heart-broken parents and sustain them by his grace and help them to meet little Hettie in heaven!

HER COUSIN, BAMA.

JONES—Death has invaded the home of our brother, Rev. L. J. Jones, pastor of Sandersville charge. The infant son of our brother, Sam P. Jones, passed away to live with the angels, August 9, 1887, aged one year and sixteen days. The writer baptized the little babe, when a few months of age, and now performs the sad duty of recording his death. The precious little babe suffered long and greatly, but now rests forever from all pain. We console the dear father and mother, who loved little Sammy so much, with the comforting thought that their babe is "waiting and watching" for them. Remember, dear brother and sister, that Jesus said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of Heaven."

R. D. NORSWITHY.

OSBORNE—DOUGLASS WATKIN OSBORNE was born November 6, 1883 and died August 17, 1887. Although only bound to us for not quite four years, he endeared himself to all who knew him. He called himself a little preacher; was obedient, ready, and willing to do. He was sick a week. His mother, sister and brother will meet him "by and by."

F. D. VAN VALKENBURGH.

BROOKS—Miss SALLIE SYKES BROOKS, daughter of Rev. Joseph H. and Callie Brooks, of the North Mississippi Conference, was born in Aberdeen, Miss., September 11, 1855; was baptized in infancy by Rev. Simon B. Sykes; was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Brock's Chapel, and died of typhoid-[illegible] after suffering ting of twenty-one days.

How thick and dark the shadows that lie on the lonely home circle of our dear Bro. and Sister Brooks! Within five years three of their children—of full age—have been cut down in the flower of their prime; and three times in so short a time have they gone to the grave to weep for their dead. Five years ago, Lula Lee, bright and joyous, was called; two years agone nearly, Thomas Tate, a strong staff for parental help, passed away, and now the third, Sallie Sykes, gentle, loving and self-sacrificing, has gone out from the earth-home and will come back no more. Oh! the loneliness of that home! He who measures grace for the hour of trial, can furnish solace for the heart's woe, and he alone. "My grace is sufficient for thee." Faithful is he to his promise. The friend of God may rest on this, and see beyond the cloud, which threw its darksome shadow over his home, the glory-gilded heights, all radiant with the resplendent light of the throne. This, the home of our loved ones, who sleep in Jesus. Into this beautiful home, our departed friend has entered, and is "singing with the angels."

When the hour had come for her to die, she felt no fear. Calmly, thoughtfully, she had committed her all into the hands of her great Redeemer, and now, with perfect composure, she meets the issue for which a renewed consecration of her life to Christ, made at the beginning of the new year, had well prepared her. A few words to her father about her burial: "Get me a neat coffin, and lay me by the side of brother Tate, without any demonstration." She wished no more said over her than the beautiful service of her church, to be conducted by her pastor. After disposing of her personal effects, she quietly bade the dearly loved members of her home circle a final farewell as to earth; and, while they watched through their tears for the last accents of love and affection, the pure and gentle spirit fled from its tenement of clay to join the ministry of the heavens and receive the coronation of the beautiful, the true, and the good.

T. W. DYE.

BLOCKER—On Thursday night, June 30, 1887, aged two years and eleven months, little MATTIE MAY, daughter of Rev. R. M. and Mrs. L. O. Blocker, passed into death's long, but dreamless sleep. Mattie May was a bright and beautiful child; but alas! with all her earthly charms the angel of death entered the happy home and took from it the little darling. This flower has been made to wither, only to reopen in the garden of paradise, and there to be associated with the gentle and blessed Savior, who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." May God, who has taken the child, comfort the bereaved ones in their sad affliction!

J. M. FRANKLIN.

Oh! that Headache.

"How I am tormented with this continual headache. It is ache! ache! ache! morning, noon and night. It is the last feeling and thought before restless slumber, and the first sensation at return of consciousness. It is the terror and torment of my life, and there seems no promise of an end to it while the lamp of life continues to burn. I feel at times as if I must go mad. I move about in my anguish or must lie prostrate and helpless in my agony, with the sole pity, 'Oh, no! not sick; only has a headache.' But neither insanity nor death comes to my relief. On, on, must I pursue this path of persistent pain. No help, no comfort, no relief. The toothache may be ended by extracting the tooth, but where is the good surgeon that can extract the brain to stop the pain."

The safe and best way is to reach the fountain of life, put it in as healthy condition as possible, strengthen and revitalize it so that it may correct the disordered member and give nature the chance to reassert itself. This plan has been tried very successfully in hundreds of cases and found to be of permanent relief. One of the good virtues of the Compound Oxygen Treatment is that it does not go into the stomach for the pretended purpose of attacking a specific disease, but increases the vital powers so that nature may repel the invader.

For full information write to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., for one of their little books called "Compound Oxygen; Its Mode of Action and Results," which they will send free upon application, also their monograph on headache.

The one who will be found in trial capable of great acts of love is ever the one who is always doing considerate small ones.—F. W. Robertson.

THE HUMAN ELEMENT INSPIRED.—Men object to the plenary inspiration of the Scriptures, on the ground that inspiration of this kind is inconsistent with the personal peculiarities of thought and style which the sacred writers preserve throughout. We reply, that this very preservation of personal peculiarities is a fruit, and, therefore, a proof of plenary inspiration. It requires but few words to show this. As every one who recognizes any kind of inspiration must admit, the sacred writers were called to speak, not for themselves simply, but for God—to speak as well with his authority as with their own—to speak for God with this authority to all the nations through all the ages. The consciousness of a mission so singular, so high, so momentous, so difficult, might well have embarassed and overwhelmed them; and nothing but a constantly controlling divine influence could, under these circumstances, have kept them natural in thought and style! They needed to be inspired in this work, in order to be themselves! Without prayer for preservation from every form of error, and without the pledge that no word of theirs should be in any way misleading, surely, as they were human, the pen must have fallen from their unnerved, trembling fingers, and the Scriptures remained unwritten forever.

Compare not the Scriptures at large, but distinctively what you call the human element in them, with other writings of their own age or of the next—writings in which confessedly there is no element but the human. In the light of such a comparison, it will be difficult, if not impossible, to resist the conviction that inspiration held this element in one case in its hand no less of guidance and correction than of support, as it did not in the other.—Christian Index.

How different is peace from happiness! Happiness is the result of harmony between our wants as creatures and the world without; peace is the harmony between us as spiritual beings and the Father of our spirits. The one is as changeable as the objects or circumstances on which it relies; the other is as unchangeable as the God on whom it eternally rests. We may thus possess real happiness and real peace; yet either may exist without the other. Nay, more; happiness may be destroyed by God in order that the blessing of peace may be possessed; but never will he take away peace to give happiness. Happiness without peace is temporal, but peace along with happiness, that indeed is eternal.—Norman McLeod.

Thousands of women gladly mention—
'Tis "Pierce's Favorite Prescription."

The price of this royal remedy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, is but one dollar. Specific for all those chronic ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women. The only medicine for such maladies, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction or money refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper. Large bottles, $1. Six for $5.

There are Christian merchants to whom the gathering of riches means the enlarged opportunities to secure the success of the kingdom of Jesus Christ. There are Christian politicians to whom the accomplishing of their plans means the establishment of wise and just laws for the welfare of the whole people, and the conduct of the government for the advance of Christian civilization. There are Christian lawyers to whom the courts of justice mean the refuge of the State for the deliverance of the innocent and the punishment of the guilty. And so in every avocation of human life the highest standard of success means the attainment of wise and just and pure and noble ends in the present life, and the welding of these in a firm and lasting union with the possibilities of the eternal life.—Central Christian Advocate.

GET TO THE BOTTOM OF THINGS.—As a boy begins, so will the man end. The lad who speaks with affectation, and minces foreign tongues that he does not understand at school, will be a weak chromo in character all his life; the boy who cheats his teacher into thinking him devout at chapel will be the man who will make religion a trade, and bring Christianity into contempt; the boy who wins the highest average by stealing his examination papers will figure some day as a tricky politician. The lad who, whether rich or poor, dull or clever, looks you straight in the eyes and keeps his answer inside of truth, already counts friends who will last his life, and holds a capital which will bring him in a surer interest than money.

Then get to the bottom of things. You see how it is already as to that. It was the student who was grounded in the grammar who took the Latin prize; it was that slow, steady drudge who practiced firing every day last winter who bagged the most game in the mountain; it is the clerk who studies the specialty of the house in off-hours who is promoted. Your brilliant, happy-go-lucky, hit-or-miss fellow usually turns out the dead weight of the family by forty-five. Don't take anything for granted; get to the bottom of things. Neither be a sham yourself nor be fooled by shams. —Christian at Work.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

Consumption, Wasting Diseases,

And General Debility. Doctors disagree as to the relative value of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites: the one supplying strength and flesh, the other giving nerve power, and acting as a tonic to the digestive and entire system. But in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites the two are combined, and the effect is wonderful. Thousands who have derived no permanent benefit from other preparations have been cured by this. Scott's Emulsion is perfectly palatable and is easily digested by those who can not tolerate plain Cod Liver Oil.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for $2 75, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra; or $3 for the three publications; postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for post-office orders or registered letters.

BOOKS.

"SAMANTHA AT SARATOGA." By Josiah Allen's wife. Published by Hubbard Brothers, Philadelphia.

Preparing for this work, Miss Holley went to Saratoga and spent an entire season, with eyes and ears open, and with brain and pencil vigorously at work. She went in her famous assumed role of Josiah Allen's wife, her imaginary Josiah at her side, with his characteristic blunders, faux pas, and quick, boy-like enthusiasm. As Samantha Allen, Miss Holley is observant, unsophisticated, outspoken, and sound to the core on every question of propriety. Such a couple in the whirl of Saratoga would certainly develop many remarkable situations and utter many funny comments. It is here the humor of the book arises. Plain, back-country, village life, and gay, artificial Saratoga life are so wide apart, that each side becomes ludicrous to the other. These ludicrous, laugh-provoking contrasts are the dominant features of Miss Holley's book.

To these mirth-making presentations of the author the artist's pencil has added a rich entertainment. Over a hundred drawings have been made especially to illustrate the text by Frederick Opper, the leading artist of Puck. Burt Wilder, too, has done a share in embellishing this attractive book. These artists make their pictures talk, and between the text and the talk of the pictures the reader looks and laughs, and laughs and looks again. Altogether, the book is a rare product, and its purchasers will not be disappointed.

PERIODICALS.

—Scribner's Magazine is up to the standard, and has a varied table of contents suited to all classes of readers. The first article, The Modern Nile, is by a writer both learned and entertaining. Hunting and Camping in the Shoshon is a delightful mixture of mountain scenery, botany and grizzly bears. The Development of the American University, and the usual number of short stories and poems, make up the leaves of this number.

—The Eclectic has among its contents Letters from Central Africa, Flags and Banners, The Twins, a story from the Chinese, quite a lengthy article on Crabbe; and one more than interesting, for it is timely, and advocates the establishment of a school, to be called "A Kitchen College."

—The contents of the Homiletic Magazine, for August, are The One Purely Moral Religion That the World Has Seen, The Moral Strength of Christ's Character, Free Grace and Sin, The Man with His Foot on the Threshold, Saints Glorified on Earth, The Christian Year, and Unconscious Prophecies.

—The Century has two papers about Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson. The first tells us of the planing and building of the famous house, and the latter shows us the house and surrounding country as it is now. Quite an interesting article on Amateur Photography, The Digestibility of Food, and the usual number of war papers.

—The Forum, for September, contains quite a lengthy article from the pen of Senator Ingalls, on The Sixteenth Amendment; American Geographical Names, The Gist of the Labor Question, and the following very interesting articles: Books That Have Helped Me, by Rev. A. Jessopp, gives an account of many of the famous lights of English literature, and how they were brought under his notice. Concerning Men is as much about women, as it goes to show that she is as "perfect music set to noble words."

EXPOSURE to rough weather, getting wet, living in damp localities, are favorable to the contraction of diseases of the kidneys and bladder. As a preventive, and for the cure of all kidney and liver trouble, use that valuable remedy—Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

"GATES OF THE CITY."

A pilgrim once (so runs an ancient tale),
Old, worn, and spent, crept down a shadowed vale:
On either hand rose mountains, bleak and high;
Chill was the gusty air, and dark the sky;
The path was rugged, and his feet were bare;
His faded cheek was seamed by pain and care;
His heavy eyes upon the ground were cast,
And every step seemed feebler than the last.

The valley ended where a naked rock
Rose sheer from earth to heaven, as if to mock
The pilgrim who had crept that toilsome way;
But while his dim and weary eyes essay
To find an outlet in the mountain side
A ponderous sculptured brazen door he spied,
And tottering toward it with fast-failing breath,
Above the portal read, "The Gate of Death."

He could not stay his feet that led thereto;
It yielded to his touch, and, passing through,
He came into a world all bright and fair;
Blue were the heavens, and balmy was the air;
And lo! the blood of youth was in his veins,
And he was clad in robes that held no stains
Of his long pilgrimage. Amazed, he turned;
Behold! a golden door behind him burned
In that fair sunlight, and his wondering eyes,
Now lustrous and clear as those new skies,
Free from the mists of age, of care and strife,
Above the portal read, "The Gate of Life."

Regeneration.

In a previous letter I stated that nature is not changed in this life, but only restrained; and that the word "regenerate" naturally means to reproduce man as he was at first creation, bearing the original purity, and "the image and likeness of God," without any taint of or bias to sin. This must apply to man's entire nature or being—body, soul and spirit.

Mr. Webster defines the word thus: "Reproduced. (Theol.) Born anew; renovated in heart; changed from a natural to a spiritual state." A moment's reflection will show that this is a limited or restricted meaning, as applied by many. Could man's spiritual nature be changed, it would not be a change of nature, nor would it be a restoration to man's original purity and "likeness and image of God," as he was at first, as should be the case in regeneration. I also stated that regeneration was the work of the Spirit of God, reserved to the morning of the resurrection, the evidence whereof is the gift of that Spirit to us now, by whose power nature is now restrained, in answer to faith and prayer, which spiritual power or spirit is "the earnest" of our regeneration in the morning of the resurrection, or as the apostle has it, "The earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession." This restrained condition is to answer the purpose of God as our comfort for the present, until "the work of faith is done," or we realize what we now see by faith.

In the morning of the resurrection God, by his Spirit, will take the dust to which sin has reduced us, as gaining only a temporary victory, and regenerate us, giving us back our original nature, only our materially excepted, leaving out the element of sin which is constitutionally wrought in us by the fall, and which is destined to produce a temporary death in all infected by it. Then death or sin will be destroyed in us, and our last enemy will succumb to the power of Christ; "for he must reign until he hath put all his enemies under his feet."

I also referred to the unchanged condition of humanity in the exact reproduction of a fallen or sinful nature in every successive generation of children, which evidence no man can doubt, and which state necessitates the system of grace, the chief feature of which is "an High Priest touched with the feelings of our infirmities, that he may be a faithful Advocate for us."

Now, I wish to add a little more evidence as to the truth of the position thus taken. This position accords with universal experience. Where is the man that can truthfully deny his fallen or sinful condition? Who can not truthfully say with St. Paul, "I am carnal; sold under sin"? Who does not recognize in his daily experience sin, as a warring element in him, opposing the Spirit of God, our helper, and making us prone to leave or wander from God? And but for God's help, we would invariably do what we ought not to do, and to leave undone what we ought to do. Contemplating the fact of our certain death as the effect of sin in us, who does not feel, very painfully, sin as a fearful incubus firmly fixed and fastened to us while in this life, and as holding us for a time in its cold embrace in the gloomy confines of the grave—nay, apparently annihilating us? And, in view of this fact, who would not, like St. Paul, who but voiced the sentiment of humanity, cry out for a deliverer: "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?"

Every experience of life teaches us that we are not regenerated. The very nature of faith proves it. Faith always sees something to be realized in the future, and is only "the substance of the thing hoped for." How can I consistently claim as a reality now that which God only proposes as a future experience and a heavenly state? Nicodemus asked the right question—How can nature be changed? I can not say that he applied the question to this life, nor do I think our Lord so answered him to that end, for he knew better; but the question is, How can nature ever be changed? Our Lord, of course, understood it, and did make a demonstration of it in his power over demoniacal spirits; and in his power over sin, in breaking its power in death, in that he rose from its firm grasp and ascended up into heaven as the first fruits of his work in regeneration.

Sin is a part of our being, and is the element of death and decay. The contrast is seen between us and pure humanity in our Lord's case; for, while it was possible for him to die, he did it voluntarily; yet, as sin was not in him, he did not decay. He saw not corruption, nor did he remain in hades. Surely we are sinful beings, and must remain under the power of sin until our deliverer comes, or until the morning of the resurrection.

Paul's experience in another instance is proof of our unchanged condition here. "But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." Sin in his nature is spoken of as a thorn and as a messenger of Satan to buffet him; and he, like some of us, thought to have it removed or be regenerated here—"sought three times that it might depart from him;" but God's answer to him was, and to us all is, "My grace is sufficient." The plan of salvation contemplates all our want and necessity. We must cling to the cross as the remedy for our sin. "Draw near to God through our High Priest, with the full assurance of faith" of being pardoned and finally regenerated.

In view of the glorious resurrection and the fadeless blessings of heaven and eternity, David could say, while walking in this "valley of the shadow of death," under the watch-care of his great Shepherd: "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake." These are faith prospects. "I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness."

The poet brings Moses to the same point of view as a thing not attained here; for he was not permitted to enter Canaan, but saw its glory upon the mount, the summit of faith—

"There is a land of pure delight,
Where saints immortal reign;
Eternal day excludes the night,
And pleasures banish pain.
There everlasting spring abides,
And never-withering flowers;
Death, like a narrow sea, divides
This heavenly land from ours.

"Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood
Stand dressed in living green;
So to the Jews old Canaan stood,
While Jordan rolled between.
Could we but climb where Moses stood,
And view the landscape o'er,
Not Jordan's stream, nor death's cold flood,
Should fright us from the shore."

Glory, hallelujah!

Of the ancient worthies it is said: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."

The poor publican was justified by his confession, while the Pharisee, who denied his state as being equal to that of other men or of the publican, was rejected. Perfectionists and holiness people would do well to consider their use of words and confessions.

J. W. ELLISON.

Ventilation or Lost Labor and Lost Sermons.

MR. EDITOR: Never before were so many new church edifices constructed in Christendom within a single year. Nearly or fully three a day the year round, or over 1,000 annually, and these by American Methodists alone. The grand church extension scheme has produced these results. Church architecture has been vastly improved. The styles of building are up with the taste and culture of the age, but not up to the necessities of the people, or the measure of comfort.

In all the designs sent out, North and South, with plain drawings, full estimates, and tasteful ornamentation, not the least attention is paid to a proper and sensible method of ventilation. We freeze in the winter, when we ought to have our great and fruitful meetings; and melt and mope in June, July, August, and September, in our crowded churches, where the atmosphere is oven-hot, and the congregation kept from the care of the coroner by the steam-power tug at the fan.

Hot, hot, hot, is the currency of feeling, thought and expression. How can any living preacher—how could St. Paul, Ambrose, Chrysostom, or Bascom, hope to make any lasting and saving impressions on an assembly thus needlessly parboiled? It would be like sending the Great Eastern to sea to sow wheat in the restless waves of the deep. Thousands of precious (seed) sermons are annually lost because the hearers are so uncomfortable that they only hear with the ear, and not with the heart, and, going home, eulogize the sower, but never expect a harvest from the seeds. If, however, out of the heat and fatigue and prostration, alike of pastor and assistant workers, after days and nights of toil, some fruit of extraordinary exertion is counted up, yet might it not have been doubled or trebled had the environments been better?

Now, look for a moment at the construction of many of our houses of worship. From the top of the windows to the ceiling above is often a space of seven, eight, or more feet. All that space is pressed full of hot air. Very often the windows are small. They were made for shops and cheap cottages, and not fit for a church. The sash never slides down from the top, so that a little of the melting atmosphere might escape; and, when raised from the bottom, give but little relief. From the point up to which the lower sash rises, it is often ten, eleven, or twelve feet to the ceiling overhead. Now, all that space is packed with hot air, malarial air, sickening air, deoxygenated air, malodorous air, a stupefying mixture of second-hand breathings of hundreds of lungs—a real poison; and yet it is kept there. It is held as a sacred treasure. No crevice, no air hole, no open space, no vent is made for it to escape.

Hot air ascends, and if your architect or builder would make suitable vents in the ceiling overhead, it would pass out rapidly, and as the cool air would rush in through the doors and windows, it would put the entire atmosphere in the house into motion, and make so much fanning needless, and save a thousand discomforts—yes, and make sermons worth hearing.

But don't go and make a double blunder. Don't make your vents in the ceiling, and try to get rid of the bad air and the heat, until you have first vented the roof. The atmosphere in the attic above the ceiling is hotter than it is in the auditorium. The sun has baked the pent-up air in the garret, so to say, till it is many times more intolerable than the corrupt mass just above your head that you want to clean out. Then you must put ventilators in your roof. Ventilators are made for six and ten dollars, and one or two will do the work. But they ought to be fifteen inches or more in diameter, and made by a workman who knows his business.

Now, for your ceiling vents. These should be neat and rather ornamental. Scroll work, a radiating and gilded star three feet in diameter, or a circular blind with slats well open, or any device fitting the place and ample for the work.

But here is another thing not to be neglected. The perfect ventilator must be so constructed that you can let down over the openings in the ceiling a cover, so as not, in cold weather, to make it difficult to warm the house. A piece of twine string put where it is convenient will regulate that.

One word more. And yet I well know how dangerous it is to suggest progress, culture, improvement, greater usefulness in the ADVOCATE. But, when brethren mean to build a house of worship, why not send a trustee to Natchez, or Vicksburg, or some place where sash, doors, flooring, altar rails, and kneeling boards, blinds, ventilators, etc., can be all gotten out by a written contract, and an honorable builder engaged to go and put the house up, and do it, not as a botch, but as a master builder. I would much sooner employ an atheist, who was a master builder and took a pride in his job, than a namby-pamby Methodist who is not competent to construct a respectable cow shed, and yet aspires to church building. The first I might convert, but it might take a century to teach a botch to build a decent, workman-like house fit for divine worship.

Let me also warn you against painting in hot weather. No man should paint for me from the first of May until the first of October, outside, especially, if he would do it for nothing, and find the materials. Hot weather ruins fresh paint.

I wish I had the space to tell you of a gem church built by the unwearied toil and good taste of Rev. T. J. Upton, at Lake Providence, La. It is without a peer inside and out. At another time I may give your readers some idea of the building. What I have said of the ventilation of churches is applicable to our private residences.

Yours,

C. K. MARSHALL.

VICKSBURG, Mississippi.

Home Missions.

MR. EDITOR: The week of prayer and self-denial has given our preachers one of the finest opportunities of thoroughly ventilating the subject of foreign missions, and of working up a holy enthusiasm on the part of the church to more earnest prayer and more liberal giving for the conversion of the world. I pity the pastor who has allowed this gracious opportunity to pass unimproved. The sermons, exhortations, prayers, with the periodical literature, tracts and leaflets circulated, have, we believe, been used by the Holy Ghost in firing the zeal of the church to an extent that will lead to achievements in the great work hitherto unknown to our Southern Methodism. Never, perhaps, in all our history was there so much information imparted, in so short a time, on this subject so vitally dear to the church. The turning on of so much light can not fail to animate the zeal of every truly converted soul, and stimulate the generous impulses of every lover of humanity.

Now, Mr. Editor, after a grand sermon, on a grand theme, by a grand preacher, it is sometimes found that the gun is of long range and of large calibre, and does immense execution in the distance, leaving a vast amount of valuable game for guns of shorter range. This leaves a fine opportunity for the Methodist exhorter. Surely, the church ought to be thoroughly furnished with information, and fully awake to the necessities of the work in "the regions beyond." While I want no abatement of the zeal of the ministry in pressing the claims of foreign missions, I want to exhort them to look on the vast fields, white unto the harvest, all around us. The work is much the same. The field is the world. The home work is nearer to us—yes, the heathen are at our own doors; just as veritable heathens as those of Japan, China or India. Not to speak, now, of the Indians, Chinese, Jews, foreigners of all nationalities, and negroes, there are, of our own American-raised population, thousands of immortal souls who never hear a gospel sermon any more than if they lived in the wild jungles of Africa. Do you inquire, Where are they? They are in the sparsely settled districts of the country, along our railways and rivers, and in our towns and cities. They are almost everywhere. Among many of them ignorance, drunkenness, profanity, and the most obscene and bestial vices prevail.

Take a survey of our country, with all of our boasted civilization, and churches, schools, and seventy thousand preachers of the gospel! It has been estimated that the church accommodations of the United States are not sufficient to seat one-half the population. Take the facts that many of the churches are open only once or twice a month, and that few of our churches are ever filled, the supposition is, that the average Sabbath attendance is not more than one-half the seating capacity of the churches, which leaves only about one-fourth of our population as regular attendants on the worship of God. This estimate, I believe, more than covers the actual regular attendance. Of this one-fourth how many have an intelligent, saving knowledge of the gospel? How small do we become under the focal light of true arithmetic! Let us cease our boastings and hush our self-laudations, so long as the masses of our own people are engrossed in spiritual ignorance and superstition, "without God and without hope in the world."

We have not yet reached half the measure of our duty on foreign missions, but we are on the ascending plane, and the machinery for operation in this department is improved and multiplied. But how about the home work? I fear it is being overlooked. Can't we give more attention to the field at home without relaxing our efforts for that abroad? I have noticed for some years, in our (Mississippi) Conference, that though the apportionments to our home missionaries are very small, the treasurer has found difficulty in paying them in full. Almost invariably we have had to supplement by drawing on the purses of the preachers at Conference.

Along the lines of the many new railroads in our bounds, villages and towns, innumerable, are springing up, and Methodist preaching is wanted at every one of them. But they can not be self-sustaining without organization as houses of worship. To accomplish this, men must be sustained, for one or more years, by the Missionary Board. These men ought to be paid quarterly in advance; but it can not be done out of an empty treasury. Our home fund ought to be doubled to meet the demands now on us. I feel it to be my duty to beg the brethren of the Mississippi Conference to press this matter and bring up such collections as will enable the Board to provide more liberally for the destitute portions of our own territory.

R. S. WOODWARD.

P. S.—There are some in nearly all of our congregations who, after all of our preaching on foreign missions, persist in saying, "Charity begins at home," "The heathen are at our doors," etc., and refuse to give for the heathen abroad until we convert the heathen at home. Here is their chance. Let them now prove their liberality and love for the heathen at home.

R. S. W.

The Week of Prayer and Self-Denial.

The collections from the week of prayer have reached over $14,301 60. This amount has been reported by six hundred and seventy-two pastors. As we have over four thousand preachers in the regular work, it is evident that only a small proportion, say about one-fifth, observed the week of prayer. Had each one earnestly and prayerfully presented the appeal before his people, and led them in this service, our indebtedness would have been removed, and men who are waiting to go in answer to their Master's call could be sent out into the mission field.

After consultation with Bishops and members of the Board, we announce the call to observe a week of prayer and self-denial in behalf of missions remains open. Absence of members, and other causes, hindered the efforts of many of the pastors. The opportunity is still offered each one to aid in removing this burden from the Board in order that we may enter and occupy the fields opened to us by the great Head of the church. Will each Conference take the matter in hand? or in their absence, or in advance of Conference action, will the pastors appoint the time and provide for its observance? We will republish the programme and send it to all who will furnish their address.

The week of prayer and self-denial has been a means of grace in the congregations where it has been observed. Let all share the blessings! Let all unite in this effort to lift the burden from our missions!

Will our brethren of the church press indoors and enforce this appeal?

BUSINESS AND GAMBLING.

You go from the board of trade,
Where noble merchants meet,
And take some little options
On January wheat;
You watch the little ticker,
Till the hands swing round the six,
Then you find your little hoards
Has gone a-glimmering—
That's business.

You go into a faro bank
And buy a stack of chips,
And watch the cards come from the box
Which the dealer deftly flips,
When your head is dull and aching,
At the breaking of the day,
You see that tickle fortune
Has gone the other way—
That's gambling.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

TEMPERANCE LESSON.

Romans xiii, 8-14.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness."—Luke xxi. 34.

INTRODUCTORY.

The lesson for to-day passes over from the gospels into the epistles to get a paragraph suitable for enforcing the precepts of temperance. But no matter which part of the blessed book we are called upon to study, we find perfect harmony with all other parts. The same precepts are enforced, the same evils are forbidden, the same virtues are enjoined. In some places there are seeming discrepancies; but a careful study of them and a proper understanding will not only reconcile all discrepancies, but will also make each passage to strengthen the other, thus constituting the sacred canon with completeness and authority. The subject of this lesson is one of the fundamental doctrines of the Bible. Temperance is taught in the Old Testament and the New. True, the very word itself may not be found in the Old Testament, because it came into use in a later age; but the idea of moderation, of self-restraint, is taught in many places, even beginning with the Decalogue itself, which is the epitome of all the Scriptures.

THE LAW OF LOVE.

Verse 8. "Owe no man anything, but to love one another." This does not forbid the contracting of debt in the course of honest business, though this, as well as the whole tenor of Scripture, forbids the making of debts without the probability of paying them. Dr. Hodge gives the meaning of this passage very happily in one line, viz: "Acquit yourselves of all obligations except love, which is a debt that must remain ever due." He who acknowledges this obligation, and seeks ever to pay it, will be forever free from any claim of the law.

9, 10. "Thou shalt not commit adultery," etc. Here the apostle uses all the precepts in the second part of the Decalogue, because he is making reference to those commandments only which pertain to our neighbor. A violation of any of these commandments would work ill to one's neighbor, and to work ill to a neighbor would certainly be inconsistent with love to him; hence it is a simple truism to say that one who loves his neighbor would work no ill to him, and he that worketh no ill to his neighbor would fulfill all the precepts of the second table.

THE LAW OF LIFE.

Verse 11. "And that, knowing the time." The New Version has "season" instead of time. The advancing season contains a continuous reminder to all. "It is high time to awake out of sleep." This is appropriate to people of all ages and under all circumstances. It is always seasonable, always a matter of duty to arouse from a state of carnal security and awake to a proper appreciation of eternal things. "For now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." After conversion the time really passes on as rapidly as before, but apparently it passes more rapidly. Peter has it: "Hasting unto the coming of the day of God." As the believer advances in Christian experience, the anticipation of home becomes more vivid. "By faith they bring it nigh."

12. "The night is far spent, the day is at hand." The night-time of afflictions, of strugglings, of failures, of doubts and fears, of our natural life, is well nigh over. The dawn of our hope is near; soon will be realized the consummation of all our expectations. "Therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." There could be given no stronger motive to a pure life than a constant realization that there is but a thin veil which shuts us out from the abode of the blood-washed. How glaringly would these works of darkness be exposed by the brightness of that day! All impurity and bestiality and selfishness will be made to stand out in their hideous deformity and repulsiveness. Paul describes the "armor of light" in his Epistle to the Ephesians to be truth, righteousness, peace, faith, salvation, and the Word of God.

13. "Let us walk honestly, as in the day." Decently—in a becoming manner, as one would desire to do who realized that the light of day was beaming upon him. "Not in rioting and drunkenness." Various forms of intemperance denominated revelings in the Scripture—the inflaming one's self with excessive and highly seasoned food and drink. "Not in chambering and wantonness." Jamieson, Faussett and Brown, in their Commentary, aptly say on this: "Various forms of impurity, the one pointing to definite acts, the other more general." "Not in strife and envying." Persons who are guilty of the above will very naturally find themselves involved in angry contentions and the victims of most turbulent and malignant passions. Drunkenness is the parent of all vice. He who is guilty of it is the ready tool of the devil for the performance of all deeds—impure, malignant, diabolical.

14. "But put ye on the Lord Jesus." The most efficient method of getting rid of an old abominable habit of life, is to take on a new affection. Every characteristic of Christ's life and history, every precept taught by him in word or deed, stand diametrically opposed to a carnal life. No man who fixes his eyes upon the immaculate character of the dying Savior, and who has his holy image enstamped upon his heart, could, by possibility, "make provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof."

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

1. The Bible furnishes the oldest, the completest and the most stringent of all temperance organizations. He who obeys its precepts will not fear to enter into any subordinate order, but will hail it as an auxiliary.

2. Drunkenness leads to all other vices, uncleanness, cruelty, death.

3. The most effectual deliverance from the viper, with all its deadly brood, is in the "expulsive power of a new and more powerful affection"—"Christ in us, the hope of glory."

Alexandria District Conference.

MR. EDITOR: By request of our presiding elder, Rev. B. F. Alexander, I give you some items of our District Conference, which convened at Lecompte, La., on Thursday, August 25, and closed August 27, 1887. The attendance was fair, the business done well and in order; the preaching, excellent; congregations, large and attentive.

On Sabbath, after a telling sermon by our presiding elder, a collection, amounting to over three hundred dollars, was raised to pay off a small debt on the church, and to finish it. The church at Lecompte was dedicated to God, according to disciplinary form, by Bro. Alexander. We had several conversions and twelve accessions to our church. On Sabbath afternoon the president of the Alexandria Woman's Christian Temperance Union and a large number of ladies and gentlemen associated themselves together, under the lead of this devoted association, for the purpose of battling for "God and home and native land." The ladies went into a thorough organization, and begun their work.

The following reports and resolutions are thought proper to be published in our ADVOCATE:

Resolved, That we heartily approve the measure of establishing a district high school at Alexandria, and will commend it to our people for patronage.

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE RECORDS.

We, your Committee on Quarterly Conference Records, beg leave to report as follows:

We find in the Alexandria Quarterly Conference records two errors: First, answering Ques. 24 at the first Quarterly Conference, which should have been answered at the fourth; second, the signature of the recording secretary is not attached to the minutes of the first Quarterly Conference.

Trinity record we find wanting in care of penmanship, orthography, and blotted on the first page. Ques. 24 is asked at the first instead of the fourth Quarterly Conference, as it should be. The book is defaced in changing the form of Ques. 24.

Spring Creek record, commendable in every way.

Ada record, perfect.

Evergreen record, good and commendable.

The records for Montgomery charge, Columbia charge, and Centerville charge, were not before us.

Deeming the presence of these records as important to the work of our church and District Conference; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we insist that recording secretaries be prompt in sending them to our next District Conference.

ON BIBLE CAUSE.

Whereas, The Bible is demonstrated to be the Word of God, in its superiority to human productions of every class and kind, by its superior civilizing power, and its being the only revelation of a plan of salvation, adapted to all the wants and emergencies of fallen humanity; And, whereas, The American Bible Society has undertaken the work of supplying our great State with this Word of Life, after many long years of waiting on the ineffectual efforts of the S. W. B. S. to do the work; And, whereas, We have now in the field our brother and fellow-laborer in Christ, Rev. J. W. McLaurin, of the Mississippi Conference, with promise of placing a full corps of colporteurs in the field this fall, to immediately and effectually supply the great destitution now existing: therefore, be it

Resolved, That we welcome him to our pulpits, and will heartily co-operate with him in raising moneys for this much-needed and most important work.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

Whereas, Temperance consists in the wise use of things beneficial, and the use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage is demonstrated to be injurious; And, whereas, There is now being put forth by various organizations efforts to suppress the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors for beverage, as the most effective and just means of preventing their use as a beverage; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we heartily endorse and support all non-partisan measures that may be used for the accomplishment of this much-desired end, and that we especially support and pray for the success of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, as second to no organization known (except the church of God) for the proper dissemination of truth and light upon this subject, and the speedy overthrow of the rum power in the land.

Resolved, That we will endeavor to instill into the minds and hearts of our membership the great principle of temperance, as taught in God's Word, and the general rules of our church, and encourage the enforcement of said rules in the fear of God.

A Voice from the Woods.

MR. EDITOR: I cheerfully respond to Bro. Lambuth's call by sending you $1, with the earnest prayer that God will bless the missionary cause. I think that it is not only our duty to return to God a part of what he has intrusted to our care, but it is also a glorious privilege to be allowed to assist in carrying on his work. Some of us did not forget the week of prayer and self-denial, but did all that we could to make and save something for the relief of the Missionary Board. Oh, that God will open the hearts and purses of the people sufficiently to pay off this debt!

Mr. Editor, I feel like I owe a part of this debt, and I wish that every church member could realize the fact as I do, for then the debt would soon be paid. But some people, even church members, will say: "I don't believe in missionaries. If the Lord wants the heathen converted, let him raise up men among them to preach the gospel, like he has among us." Such nonsense! God pity such men! The idea that men should be called to preach the gospel when they haven't it to preach! Such people must expect God to make a new revelation to the heathen, or else let them forever remain in darkness. God gave his Son to redeem the whole human race—the heathen as well as us. Then how can we deny them the gospel when they are calling for it? God will surely hold us responsible for what we do in this cause. Even the poorest of us can work and stint and save to get money to buy some desired article, or to take a trip, but how seldom we think of denying ourselves for the cause of the Lord.

MISS E. L. E.

STONEWALL, Mississippi.

A Very, Very Good Example.

When an example is a literal fulfillment of a given precept, it may be styled a good one in that line; but when it is, in any way, an improvement upon the precept, may it not be said to be very, very good?

The North Mississippi Conference thanksgiving missionary quilt, for Cornersville circuit, has been completed, sold by the proposed method (different persons paying for a share in the quilt), and presented to the pastor. It was sold on Saturday, during the session of the Holly Springs District Conference, which lately convened at Cornersville, Miss., bringing $26 for the missionary cause.

Miss Overton, who superintended the work, writes that they had more than enough pieces for the quilt, of which she thought of making something to be sold Thanksgiving Day. Herein is an idea for others, should they have surplus pieces. Such might be formed into neat table covers, tidies, rugs, etc., which are useful.

Readiness for an anticipated event is always commendable when preparation is possible. 'Tis a general rule: As some have done, likewise others may do. So, ere long, may every quilt in this enterprise be a model of Christian industry and good-will! When Thanksgiving Day comes on, there will then be no need to sing, "Nothing but leaves! nothing but leaves!" over an unfinished quilt.

Be the struggle as it may, remember whatever is achieved for the glory of God and the good of others, is a stepping-stone toward that celestial height of Christian attainment upon which "The happy morn at last shall break,

When duty done for others' sake
In heaven's revealing light shall shine,
Wrought into character divine."

Of such works, reason and Christianity together admonish, Do not procrastinate.

COUSIN CATE.

From the Work.

COVINGTON, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I commenced a meeting at this place on August 20, and continued it to August 28. Held two services a day; ably assisted by Rev. J. N. Tucker, of Poplarville circuit, Mississippi Conference. In fact, he did all the preaching, save one sermon which fell to my lot to deliver. Bro. Tucker is an earnest worker in his Master's vineyard, and, by his zeal, humility and sound gospel preaching, he has endeared himself to and left an impress upon the hearts of the people of Covington that will not soon be forgotten.

The congregations and interest increased from the first service, and at the eleven o'clock service, Sunday, the Spirit came with power, and many of those who have been for months and, I may say, for years freezing to death, spiritually, were wonderfully warmed, and are now enabled to breathe a pure spiritual atmosphere.

At our last service about thirty-five persons came forward and gave Bro. Tucker their hand, as a token of their determination to enter, by God's grace, upon the Christian course. During the meeting five professed conversion, and five were added to the church militant in Covington, and, I trust, as many to the church ~~triumphant~~. Praise the Lord for what he has done for us!

My work is moving along as well as could be expected under the circumstances with which we are surrounded. With the exception of one or two of my appointments, there is a marked spiritual improvement.

Our St. Tammany Camp Meeting is drawing near, and we hope to see our editor there, with as many more of his kind as he may bring. Pray for us.

G. R. ELLIS, P. C.

HAYNESVILLE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I closed a protracted meeting at White Hall Church, Haynesville charge, on August 19, which resulted in a most gracious revival. The power of the Holy Spirit came down upon the audience at the first service, and continued with us until the close of the meeting. Some misunderstandings among some of the members of the church were corrected. Many backsliders reclaimed, and all of the members—some more and some less—blessed. So I call it a big revival. Congregations very large. May they keep "steadfast now, and always abound in the work of the Lord!"

C. R. GODFREY.

THE FRANKLINTON WORK.

MR. EDITOR: A protracted meeting closed on yesterday, August 30, at Mt. Hermon Church, which abounded in benefits and blessings for the Master's cause.

The Rev. J. G. Sibley, the preacher in charge, seems to be an all-abounding worker. Combining much of the old Wesleyan fire with the new helps that Methodism has received, and these aided by talented pulpit preparation, he has at this one point done very signal work for his church. Not only does Mr. Sibley understand the minutiæ of pulpit work, but he knows just how to utilize all the means that are around him to energize that work, and give it life and adaptation.

He brought to this work, on Sunday last, several lady workers. There were three of these grateful young female helps, two of whom were from Kavanaugh College, in Pike county, Miss., and a third one from the same county, and of good Methodist antecedents. The leader of these is a young lady of twenty-one or twenty-two years, a student at Kavanaugh, and full of that grand old Wesleyan fire that has warmed and illumined so much of this poor, dark, frozen world.

The people where the meeting was held live in a region where woman's voice is seldom heard in prayer; and the effect upon the people was electrical. No one could listen to the deep, pathetic appeals made by that girl to the Father but who would feel instinctively that there was a strong cord of love that bound her heart to God. Doubtless the prayer was heard, for thirty persons, all in the prime of life, was added to the church.

That little, strangely built-up church at Mt. Hermon, that numbered sixty-six on Saturday morning, found its membership increased to ninety-six on Tuesday—a gain of over 47 per cent. at one meeting.

If the Conference will permit Mr. Sibley to remain another year on that work, there is no telling what may be the good things that may be done there.

The writer will, in another article, give a short account of the history and origin of this once little, but now influential church.

The writer is not a Methodist.

SOUTH UNION CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The sixteenth annual camp meeting at South Union, Chester circuit, North Mississippi Conference, was held August 19–24.

The twenty-five tents were all, except one, occupied, and the proprietors all in place before the first service, and remained till the last. Such promptness and unanimity assured a good meeting; and such it was from the beginning to the end.

The following preachers were present from time to time—most of them only a day or two—viz: W. T. Barnett, P. C.; L. D. Worsham, H. C. Parrott, D. M. Cogdell, W. R. Ramey, J. E. Buck, C. R. A. Brantley, B. P. Fullilove, and the writer.

The preaching was in demonstration of the Spirit and in power, as many awakened sinners, converted penitents and happy Christians could testify.

There were fourteen accessions to the church, six infants baptized, about twenty-five conversions, and the church membership greatly enlivened. Several heads of families promised to erect altars for family prayers, and a goodly number of them procured that most excellent and helpful book, "Aid and Guide to Family Worship."

The Conference colporteur disposed of many Bibles, hymn books, and various other good books and tracts, and received a few subscriptions for the church papers.

I have written this by request of Bro. Barnett, preacher in charge. May the Lord continue to bless him abundantly, and the good people whom he serves, for Christ's sake!

INKA, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Fifty-four dollars and seventy-five cents, for missions, raised the week of "prayer and self-denial" in Inka station, Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference. The church blessed, and the missionary spirit increased. Much good will come from the self-denial. May God bless you in your noble work! Affectionately, CASEYVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have he two protracted meetings up this time on Scotland circu They were good meetings, an including those which joined t church before these meeting twenty-five have been added the church this year. The have been conversions, but t number we do not know. The are three protracted meetings be held, and we are looking f large results of good. The Co ference collections are bei taken up, and we hope to ma full reports. We are havi some excellent live class mee ings and good prayer meeting Congregations good and serio ly attentive. We expect to ha a new church completed by t middle of October.

Our parochial school, und the supervision of Prof. W. C Forsythe, was a success. It wi reopen in September, and Br Forsythe will again be in charge and we expect another term o success.

There is a considerable amoun of sickness in this section. Th crops of cotton are being dam aged by the dry weather. Corn however, is good.

Yours truly,

WM. B. HINES.

EBENEZER CIRCUIT, NORTH MI SISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord ha done great things for us o Ebenezer circuit, whereof we ar glad. Up to the present tim forty precious souls have em braced religion, thirty-two o whom have joined our church and more to follow. Of course we had to be neighborly and le the Baptist Church have a few as the principle of generosity ha been one of the leading charac teristics of Methodism durin her successful efforts to evangel ize the world.

Forty conversions may no sound big in your paper, but i does on this charge and i heaven, because nearly all o these people belong to th church—young and old. Among those that were converted were men of families, men of influence, and men capable of doing much good in the church of God.

We have one more meeting to hold—at Egypt. I think all as sessments will be paid in full.

Oh, how I love my people! May God bless them always!

Sunday-school is on a boom.

Pray for us.

W. D. BASS.

FLOYD, LA.

MR. EDITOR: On last Tuesday night we closed a meeting at Le Vaughn. The Lord was with us in power. The church wonderfully quickened; sinners convicted, and penitents were converted. Eleven joined the church on profession of faith. Five new family altars were erected; a prayer meeting organized, and, sir, a class meeting.

We were assisted by Bro. Few, of the Little Rock Conference, and Bro. Renaud.

We report now, up to date, since Conference, forty-six accessions to the church; for which we give God the glory! Pray for us.

CANTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Most gratifying is the result of the week of self-denial and prayer all over the district. Better than the money coming in as a free-will offering is the spirit of missions developed. On our circuit, you must know, all the offerings can not be gathered earlier than a month after self-denial week.

Bro. Forsythe, after growing better for two weeks, I am sorry to say, was worse when I saw him two days ago. He talks sweetly of the brethren, the church and the goodness of the Lord. Your brother,

JOHN A. ELLIS.

MARVIN CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed a series of meetings on my work with fine results: the membership revived; forty-five accessions, and more to follow. Bro. L. Kendall did excellent preaching for us at two of the meetings. I do not know at this time the results of the week of prayer; but we will send up something.

Yours fraternally,

L. P. MEADOR.

A Day at a Parsonage.

Sick and weary and almost ready to die, by previous invitation, I arrived at the parsonage from the country where I had been sojourning a couple of months. Never had I met one of its inmates; but what do Christians need of formal introductions when the "blessed tie that binds our hearts as one" is known and read on their faces and felt in the warm hand-grasping?

Bro. W. W. Hurst, a friend in need and a brother indeed, met me at the gate, assisted me out of the buggy and into the house, and his dear little boy helped me off with my duster, pulled up the rocker, and gave me a fan as if I was an old acquaintance instead of an entire stranger. Then Sister Hurst came in, and her face seemed familiar; her manner was so tender and sisterly, how else could I feel but as if I was at home? The train from Memphis to New Orleans was due at four P.M., so that I would have a seven hours' rest at this delightful home. And rest it was for body and soul, for everyone seemed to try to make the stay a pleasant one. Bro. Hurst was full of the spirit of his work, which he said was well up to his expectations, and all the membership alive and at work in the various charges of his bounds.

And the nice dinner prepared for the visitor would have tempted an epicure, much more a convalescent. On the strength of that good dinner I journeyed until ten o'clock the next day, if a taste of a lunch might be excepted.

Bro. Hurst and this scribe discussed the Quarterly, the St. Louis, the Nashville and our own ADVOCATE, and other connectional subjects. He said the outlook and the prospects for all were good, and the world was being won for Jesus. He was genial, cordial and edifying in his manner and conversation, so that time passed quickly. After leaving a scrawl in the albums of Sister Hurst and daughters, and having a few words with Miss Maggie Anderson, who is at the head of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Anguilla, and who had called to see me, I started. Bro. Hurst was called to attend a funeral, and could not see me on the train, as he wished to do; and so his nephew took his place, and he, with Miss Anderson, accompanied me to the depot. As we said "good-by" to the household at the parsonage, we felt like parting with old instead of new friends. God bless them, one and all! May we meet again in a house not made with hands!

Church Papers and Advertisements.

It is pretty well known in the Mississippi Conference that I am opposed to the insertion of patent medicine advertisements, etc., in the columns of the ADVOCATE, or of any other religious paper. My record is clear and pretty well defined on that line. When the last Annual Conference elected me a member of the Committee on Publication of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, I began a war on that objectionable class of advertisements. I wrote some sharp, if not smart, things to Bro. Jamieson. Among other things I wrote to him was this: "I would just as soon take a 'nigger' and a banjo and go around town peddling patent medicines as to solicit subscriptions for a church paper which prints the advertisements."

When the advertisements of the vile nostrums did not vanish, I felt like resigning my place on the committee, lest my name should be thought an endorsement of such things. I told my thoughts to a discreet young brother, who said to me: "Don't do that. It looks too much like a little child's getting mad and taking her doll-rags home." So I concluded to stick and fight against those offensive advertisements.

Then I tried a flank movement on Bro. Jamieson. "Can't you get the Methodist merchants in New Orleans to take for their own business the space occupied by these quack medicine advertisements? Are there no Methodist lawyers in your city who will publish their cards." Back came the answer: "No. You would be surprised to hear the excuses given. The Israelites look more to the subscribers of the ADVOCATE for patronage than do our Methodist merchants." Brief, but pointed; fairly "bristling with points," as an old acquaintance used to say of every one of his law cases. And then read between the lines, after comparing the ADVOCATE with the secular papers published in New Orleans, where advertisements of Methodist merchants appear side by side with the notices of the monster fraud of the age—the great lottery which is drawing into its insatiable maw the hard-earned wages of the poor all over these United States, and making professional gamblers of the men and women of America.

Now, then, the mark to which we have been aiming, the point to which we have been driving:

1. Let the merchants and professional men of New Orleans and at other points give the old ADVOCATE a lift by publishing paying advertisements in its columns.

2. Let the preachers continue their efforts, redoubling their zeal.

T. L. MELLEN.

Touching Superannuates.

MR. EDITOR: I would like to suggest a plan for the future support and maintenance of our worn-out, superannuated preachers. It is simply this: Let the assessment for the preachers' salary always be paid in full every year. There would then be no need for trouble about any superannuated preachers' fund. Any man of ordinary financial ability would then be enabled to lay by from year to year during an average pastorate of, say, twenty-five years a sufficient sum to enable him to live above want the remainder of his days. If any did not, it would be either through dire misfortune or their own fault.

The average assessments made for preachers in charge now are sufficient for this. This is evidenced by the fact that the majority of these assessments, from year to year, are largely unpaid, and yet the preachers manage to live, and dress well. They pull through somehow. The total amount assessed for pastors and presiding elders in the Mississippi Conference, last year, was $59,142 70. Of this $55,358.50 was paid, thus leaving a balance of $3,784 20 still due the preachers of the Mississippi Conference for one year's work. This amount laid up from year to year would amply provide for all the wants of the superannuated preachers. Or, put it another way: Would not any of our superannuated preachers, if paid up in full the arrears of their assessments during their pastoral lives, be willing to release the Conference from any further obligation in the matter of their support? Let them speak. And the average assessments are much higher now than they were in days gone by. For my own part, if my stewards will be as liberal in making assessment for my support in the future as they have been in the past, and will then pay up these assessments in full, and I should be enabled to continue in the pastorate, say, for twenty-five years from the time of entering, I will not tax the church any further for my support.

I am convinced that this is the best remedy for the support of worn-out preachers in the future. It might not have been so in the past, because the assessments then were small. Let thoughtful stewards consider this. Make liberal assessments, pay them up, and your worn-out preachers in the future will be provided for.

MERIDIAN, MISS., Aug. 31, 1887.

The "Preachers' Wives' Loan Fund" for Parsonage Building.

At its last annual meeting the Board of Church Extension authorized the Woman's Department to raise a loan fund for parsonage building; and Rev. Henry E. Partridge, of the Florida Conference Board, suggests the plan of the "Preachers' Wives' Loan Fund"—$5 making a preacher's wife a life patron.

I wish, before the Annual Conferences, to call to it the attention of every congregation throughout our connection, and urge each to send their pastor to Conference with the $5 from them to make the pastor's or presiding elder's wife a life patron. This is a small sum for any congregation to raise, and an easy way to show the interest felt in a cause that must commend itself to the wisdom and good feeling of every one who loves the Methodist Church, with its peculiar, but power-giving institutions. Any charge or individual that has desired to organize a parsonage society in connection with this department, and as yet been unable to do so, can in this way contribute to the permanent success of the parsonage movement, for a large fund once established will be a permanent, perpetual agency for building parsonages.

Sums of any size may be added to this amount. If Rev. David Morton is not in attendance upon the Conference, the money should be handed to the treasurer of the Conference Board of Church Extension, or, if present, to the secretary or treasurer of the Woman's Department, to be sent with the names of life patrons to Dr. Morton. The amount and names should also be published in the Conference organ. Do not delay.

ONE RESPONSE.

Montana, the only Conference to which our loan fund has been proposed, sends a cheering response. Mrs. Stanley, our Conference secretary there, writes: "Montana Conference reports ten subscribers of $5 each to the "Preachers' Wives' Loan Fund"—all paid." There are but five preachers' wives and about a dozen preachers altogether in the Conference. Let every Conference report such prompt and thorough work, and we will have a loan fund of, at least, $10,000 by the close of the year.

The Old Shilling Church.

Long years ago—say in 1834, or 53 years ago—there stood in the upper part of Washington parish, La., an old country school-house. This house was superseded by a nice hewn-log church made out of durable heart-timber. It was log-ribbed for rafters, with gables carried up with logs after the old plan.

There was a family of Methodist people, named Shilling, who lived near, who, though poor, were industrious, frugal, honest and full of the unction of living piety. The circuit preachers had an appointment there, and once in three weeks the lone pioneer-man of the Bible, hymn book and saddlebags would come around and preach and pray with the people. An old pulpit, still there, was made of split boards drawn off smooth with a drawing knife, and the fashion then was a kind of a box made very high in which the living theology of the day entrenched itself at service time. All the bounds that covered the cracks were split and drawn; the floor was rude, though good, and the benches or seats were of the most primitive kind.

At quarterly meeting time there was always a large gathering there, and the behavior was excellent, though the worshipers often became quite noisy in their full-soul demonstrations. Mr. B. Pipkin and Mr. Clinton were occasionally there at protracted meetings, and, as the Methodists had no other appointment in all that country, there was always a great anxiety to attend their worship that was so full of fiery zeal as to make it appear very enthusiastic when compared with the quiet and Quaker-like worship of their friends, the Baptists.

The old family of Shilling had many children, for in that poor, but delightful summer-land of health, light-wood knots and good water, children grew and thrived like acorns in the forest. Among their sons was one named Jacob. He was a man who had grown up in the lap of piety. He was brimful of religion, with none of its bigotry or intolerance. As a class leader, a singer and exhorter he had no equal. His voice was full of genuine old religion. It was full-toned, manly and rich in compass. His conversations were full of life and pathos. It seems now that one of his old songs like, "How happy are they," or, "Come, thou Fount," or, "How firm a foundation,"—possessed more attraction, more magnetic force than any choir the writer ever heard. People went up there annually to obtain a new kindling of their zeal, like the Greeks did who went annually to Delphos to obtain fresh fire from the (to them) holy altar that was ever burning there.

Time always brings its changes. The elder Shilling died; his pious son, Jacob, removed to another locality; the Baptists overran the country; the circuit preachers ceased to locate appointments there, and the work was altogether abandoned in all that portion of country.

Religion, like its great twin-sister, Truth, never dies. The life of the fabled Phœnix lives in their very ashes, and the great Latin word, Resurgam, forms their living motto. The church has a life that is indestructible.

"The church of God shall it go down?
No! while manhood's blood shall flow
It will survive the wreck of time,
Outlive each tyrant foe."

Like a spring of water covered up by the deposit of earthquake, the tumult of an earthquake, that springs out again in its freshness in another place, so did this old perished church come forth again a little distance away; particulars of which will be given you in another number, so that the readers of the ADVOCATE may see from what weak things great results may flow.

ALIEN LAND-OWNERS IN THE UNITED STATES.—The report of the House Committee at Washington, D. C., on alien land-ownership in the United States, gives a partial list of aliens owning large tracts of land, which is simply appalling. A Holland company owns 4,500,000 acres in New Mexico; an English syndicate, 3,000,000 acres in Texas; Sir E. Reid's syndicate, 2,000,000 in Florida; another English syndicate, 1,800,000 in Mississippi; the Marquis of Tweeddale, 1,750,000; Phillips, Marshall & Co., of London, 1,300,000; a German syndicate, 1,000,000; an Anglo-American syndicate, of London, 750,000; Mr. Evans, of the same city, 700,000; Mr. Ellerhansen, of Halifax, 600,000; a Scotch syndicate, 500,000 in Florida; the Duke of Sutherham, 450,000; a British land company, 320,000 in Kansas; Mr. Whalley, M. P., of Peterboro, 310,000; an Edinburgh company, 300,000 in Missouri; a Dundee company, 247,000; Mr. Tennent, of London, 230,000; and so on until the footing up is over twenty million (20,557,000) acres of United States lands in the hands of twenty-nine alien corporations or individuals; and the list not complete! Ireland contains about 19,000,000 acres, and the hue and cry has gone to the ends of the earth about five hundred English landlords owning two-thirds of the soil of Ireland; while here are but twenty-nine alien corporations or individuals holding in their possession a larger territory than all Ireland. We surely need to look at home, instead of at the affairs of other countries.—Exchange.

Many Christians seem to have the desire to live as near the world as they possibly can, to have as much of the world as they can, and have Christ at the same time. My experience has been that such Christians are the most wretched people on the earth. They neither enjoy the world nor Christ. They are what are called border Christians, running over the line, mingling with the world to-day and coming back among Christ's people to-morrow. The best way is to keep as far from the world as you can—to have as little to do with it as you can. Some one asked Billy Dawson how the world was getting on. He said he did not know; he had not been there for a number of years.

We are told that if we lift the standard too high, many people will leave the chapels and churches. There is no doubt about that; but you will get a good many more.—Moody.

Briefs.

The following is from the Hartford Herald:

Henri Watterson makes this astounding assertion in the columns of his own paper, over his own initials: "Prohibition is a device of the devil to ensnare innocent souls. It is particularly so with respect to women. It was devised and meant by Satan to lure them to destruction."

Now, we have this to say: that we know of Methodists in Louisiana and Mississippi who take the Courier-Journal, whose editor allows himself to write so insultingly of multitudes of the pure, Christian women of America, and can not possibly raise the two dollars necessary to secure a high-toned Christian weekly. A paper that opposes prohibition after the above style can not be proper reading for the wife and children of a true Methodist. The best he can do for his family is to provide for them the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE as the antidote for the moral poison of such sheets as that of Watterson.

The kinds of preaching these days are as various as the kinds of preachers. But there is a flavor about true preaching which is unmistakable. The same is true of the relation of Christian experience. There is something that immediately proclaims it of an origin not of earth. The Pulpit Treasury, for August, has this note on the "Aroma of Christ:"

This is the fatal defect in some of the preaching of the day. It is not perfumed with the name of Christ. It has the smell of the midnight lamp and the flavor of Hymettus, but it lacks the fragrance of Olivet. If Christ is enshrined in the preacher's heart, He will so pervade his entire nature that the preacher will scatter the delicious scent of his Well-Beloved wherever he is and whatever he does, but especially when he stands forth to proclaim the gospel to dying men. Then it will be manifest that the Rose of Sharon has imparted its fragrance to his spirit, to his manner, and to his words; and the hearers will take knowledge of him, that he has been with Jesus. No learning, no logic, no eloquence can be a substitute for the aroma of Christ.

Senator A. H. Colquitt has a strong article in the September Princeton, entitled, "Some Plain Words on Prohibition." He pays this tribute to his fair countrywomen: "Let the women of these United States take a stand for a great cause, fortified by the lofty and potential motives and hopes that mark the temperance agitation, and we may as well make up our minds to see that cause triumph." He closes his paper with these glowing words:

It matters not though glossing sophistry, backed by millions of money, may contest the field, though phrenetic appetite may plead and demur, and though a morbid impatience of all restraints may declaim about human liberty, all will be of no avail, for prohibition has reason, religion, retinement, good order and peace for its advocates and champions.

And last, but oh! how far from least, the blessed charm and influence of women are for it. To all the sordid, cold-blooded suggestions of pecuniary loss, of closed grog-shops and curtailment of rents, of shrinkage in municipal revenue, stands opposed her appeals which reach to the profoundest depths of every soul. Her cries, which for weary years were heard hardly anywhere else than in heaven, after entering the ears of the "God of Sabaoth," are now heard on earth. Will we not all soon join that exultant band that, the other night, in Rome, with bounding joyousness, sang, "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow"?

LIFE AT THE SPRINGS.

Life here is leisurely and luxuriously lazy. Even sleep is affected in a curious way. Dr. Young's celebrated line has to be changed to suit the condition of this climate; and we say:

"Lazy nature's sweet elixir—dreamless sleep."

The cool balminess of this air induces a sleep from which you are awakened only by the clang of the breakfast bell. Then you dress as lazily as if you did not care whether you go to breakfast or wait for the breakfast to come to you. But if you do show zeal and energy enough to get to the table, you will find spread a comfortable morning meal, and you can and do take your time in mastering its details. I have found many people who seemed to have no comprehension of the details of business; but generous Nature appears to have bestowed upon every individual a singular capacity to grasp at once and master in about an half-hour all the details of the breakfast table, no matter how intricate they may be. What a good mother Dame Nature is! There is no hideous newsboy nor morning paper here to interrupt the leisure of this most important hour of the day. You are not forced to eat your steak and read about a man carving his wife to pieces in Boston. Nor do you swallow fifty morning lies with your cup of Mocha! Nor do you crunch your toast and grit your teeth over the news of a "big corner in wheat" in Chicago at the same time. For the last six months I have been wishing for a place of exemption from the tyranny of the morning paper, and my wish is now gratified; and the effect is I can eat my breakfast in perfect peace, no paper "daring to molest or make me afraid." This experience shows how utterly foolish is the practice of taking the morning paper to the breakfast table. Why don't a man make the reading of the daily paper a part of the day's work, and take it up only when the working hour comes?

After breakfast, you walk out upon the porch, and take another look at the mountains. There they stand, just as they have stood for numberless ages, "defying the strength of hoary centuries;" and the clouds cap their summits, and the mists trail along their huge sides, and the mounting sun pours his golden glories over all; and you feel a rising throb of adoration for the Being who settled these mountains upon their everlasting foundations. It has been said that "the undevout astronomer is mad;" but what can be said of an "undevout" geologist? What if these huge rocks, piled upon one another, as no human masonry can pile them, do show signs of an igneous origin? What if it is true that there was once streaming through space a vast fire-mist to which the origin of all terrestrial can be traced? The question still remains, Who kindled the fire? God is back of all. When I stand at the foot of one of these mountains and look up to its peak, piercing the blue above, my soul is overwhelmed with such an exhibition of power, and finds utterances in the worshipful words, God of grandeur! what a scene!

The first ripple upon the smooth surface of daily life is made at nine o'clock, when the passenger train pulls in from Ashville. It is a ripple that spreads to the extreme limits of our little city, and everybody turns towards the depot to look at a train of cars that comes regularly thirty times a month, and three hundred and sixty-five times a year. Man's great inventions are always a matter of interest to men, and a train of cars or a great steamer will "draw a crowd every time." We all go out "just to see" if anybody else has come to the Springs. A few get off and a few get on, and the iron horse pants his way down the French Broad towards Tennessee; and the ripple has expanded itself, and the surface of our life drinks again the sunny balm of this highland region.

But, now, it is time for the bath. Ah, if I could only tell of the exquisite luxury the physical nature has in this hour! These waters, warmed in subterranean recesses by nature's own mysterious fires, are just suited to the human body; and the bath-hour is the most enjoyable hour of the day. After this, dinner—substantial, plain, nourishing. The evenings are spent in lolling lazily about the house, or sauntering slowly around the town, looking at the mountains. One evening we had a diversion down near the edge of the river, in the shape of a genuine old-fashioned shooting-match. These mountaineers seem to be entirely oblivious of the existence of "repeating rifles," for every man of them had the old percussion gun. I heard one old gentleman allude approvingly to the old "flint and steel" of our grandfathers, averring stoutly that they were the best guns, "if the tech-hole is big enough." As I have read Dr. Longstreet's "Georgia Scenes," in which there is an inimitable description of a shooting-match, I refer the reader to that. I am really too lazy to attempt anything further. The fact of the case is that life here is laziness boiled down to a thick syrup, which is so exquisitely delicious that I am forced to stop my pen in order to enjoy it.

Second Appeal.

We bespeak a prayerful reading for the appeal of Drs. John and Kelley, on the first page. Up to September 9, not $15,000 had reached the hands of the Missionary Treasurer. Over 4,000 preachers and 1,000,000 members should have raised the $100,000. Scanning our church papers, we learn that only here and there was much done. While some pastors and people seem to have felt an inspiration in the matter and raised fifty cents, and even one dollar and more, per member, many stations, we suppose, and a large number of circuits, if not entire districts, have not made even the poor showing of ten cents per head. The work yet remains to be done by very many Southern Methodists. The opportunity is still offered to all to aid in the paying of our debt. Hence, it is in order for every presiding elder who has not fired up his district on the subject to do so at once; it is in order for every pastor, be he in a station or on a circuit or mission, who has thus far been lukewarm, careless or criminally negligent as to this most important matter, touching as it does the honor of the church and our part in the saving of the world, to begin at once to instruct and exhort his people as to their duty, not failing to take a big collection therefor at every church in his charge; it is in order for every church member to really deny himself, and, without delay, hand his liberal contribution to his pastor, with orders to forward the same to Dr. Kelley with all possible dispatch. Oh, as we write, we confess to a feeling of shame that a second appeal had to be made to Southern Methodists! Rally, one and all; take God's money out of your pockets, and, winged with prayer, let it go on its glorious mission of saving the world!

In response to an appeal of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the managers of the New York State Fair have decided that no privileges for the sale of intoxicating liquors on their grounds shall be granted. The ladies would have hard work to induce a Louisiana State Fair to do likewise.

Memories of Travel in Bible Lands.

KEDRON—FAITH OF THE JEW—JERUSALEM.

BY CHARLES EDWARD LOCKE.

The traveler in Palestine, who has entered this interesting country at the southern seaport town of Joppa, and is making the tour on horseback, will find himself about noon of the second day on his way to Jerusalem, descending into the valley of the Kedron.

It was here that the memorable conflict took place between the daring shepherd boy and the jabbering Goliath. A very slight expense of imagination peoples one side of the valley with trembling Israelites; the other, with vaunting Philistines. As we walked down to the brook and picked up "five smooth stones," we remembered how easy it was for the Lord to bring to the front anyone, however obscure, who was ready to do great work for the Master. The same God who went out into the mountains of Midian for Moses, and into the distant fields among the flocks for David, and found Saul hiding modestly in the "stuff," is casting about to-day for emergency-men—men for pivotal crises.

Having crossed the Kedron, we ascend the long slope—all the more tedious, because from the summit of the hill we are assured that we shall have our first glimpse of Jerusalem. Soon we were peering into the distance, obtaining an introductory view, which consisted of domes and minarets standing out against the drooping sky—all of which only added to the intensity of our anticipation. We put spurs to our horses, but soon discover that we have yet a long, hot ride before we may be able to rest ourselves within the sacred walls.

But what is this before us? Jerusalem yet a mile away, and we seem to be in the midst of a city! Is it a phantom? How came such a substantial town here, and so unexpectedly? Our guide comes to our relief by telling us that this is "New" Jerusalem; that devout Jews, outraged and grieved by the corruption and sacrilege of the old city yonder, are building here a new city. By the aid of generous benefactions from their wealthy brethren of Europe, the Jews are proposing to erect here a well-fortified and beautiful city, so that when the long-looked-for Messiah shall have appeared, Ben-Hur-like, they will present to him an abiding-place, uncontaminated by taint or filth. We observed that the walls of the houses were very thick; the doors were of iron, and the windows were barricaded. The roofs were made of red tiling, in striking harmony with the rich flower gardens below.

This faith of the pious Jew is one of the most marvelous things with which the Christian traveler comes in contact in the Holy Land. We found another illustration of their phenomenal confidence at the Jew's Wailing-Place. A portion of the west wall of the Temple area is still standing. It is nine courses of stone in height, each course about three feet in thickness. From time immemorial the Jews have returned to this place to pray for the restoration of Jerusalem. With reverential feelings we stood at one end of the narrow avenue and watched the earnestness and grief of these sincere devotees. Men and women, boys and girls, come here daily to pray and to weep. We saw an old man, bowed with the infirmity of many years, leaning heavily upon his staff, approach the sacred place. He poured out his soul in an agony of petition that God would no longer delay; he importuned Heaven to save the city of the Great King from the desecrator and the infidel; he showered his tears upon the indifferent wall, and went tremblingly away, believing that the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob would one day relieve the sufferings of his forsaken people. There came also the little child, bounding with glee; it repeats its little prayer; presses its lips affectionately to the wall, and, if others are weeping, it has tears, too, hardly knowing why. The stones of the old wall have been worn into an exquisite polish by the devotion and affection of these worshipers. "Verily, they have their reward;" but may not we, who have felt the revivifying power of a risen Lord, not turn away our faces in shame when we remember our prodigality and our fickleness?

Our route brings us to Jerusalem from the west, and in a few moments the walls of the city stand before us in imposing massiveness. Much more thrilling is the first view of Jerusalem if the traveler approaches the city from the east, and looks down upon it for the first time from the slopes of Olivet. This incomparable sight was reserved for us until a few days later. With what emotions of delight do we come nearer to the walls, which rise thirty-eight feet and form an irregular quadrangle two and one-half miles in circumference. The city contains about 20,000 inhabitants. It is built on a limestone promontory, which rises abruptly between the valleys of Jehoshaphat and Hinnom. Rocks everywhere come to the surface, presenting a somewhat barren and dreary appearance; yet these, with here and there an olive and fig tree and beautiful fields of waving grain, produce a weird and most unusual landscape.

The location of Jerusalem is impressive and commanding. As you view it from a point which embraces the wonderful strength and safety of the city, you involuntarily burst forth in the poetry of the Psalms: "Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth is Mount Zion, on the sides of the north, the city of the Great King." You immediately make up your mind to regard the injunction of the same writer, when he says: "Walk about Zion, and go round about her; tell the towns thereof; mark ye well her bulwarks; consider her palaces, that ye may tell it to the generations following."

We enter the city by the Joppa Gate. The huge doors, always closed at night, are now swung wide open, and the entrance is guarded by a slovenly Turkish soldier. As you enter the gate, your attention is called to a small door in the midst of one of the larger doors, through which admission can be gained when the gates are closed. This is called the "needle's-eye." It is sometimes supposed that it was to this entrance-door that the Master referred, when he solemnly declared: "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."

When fairly within the city, the visitor is besieged on every side by beggars—big beggars, little beggars, men beggars, women beggars—beggars of every line and description. They throng the entrances to the city, and give the traveler a most cordial greeting, extending their hands, and shouting, "Backsheesh! backsheesh!"—a word of great significance, meaning money or gift. In the midst of tender associations, such as will ever cling to these "sacred acres," one is inclined to empty his purse in behalf of these deplorable folk, but is deterred from doing so by the cicerone, who assures us that these people are professional beggars; that one man has lacerated his face, another has put out an eye, another has irritated his arm until it is covered with a putrid ulcer, in order to reach the sympathies of benevolent people. I remember a pretty-faced little girl, with hardly rags enough about her to cover her little brown body, who besought us with tears for aid; but she had purposely been sent out in this scanty attire by her indolent parents. In the century gone by begging was a religious rite, resorted to by proud hearts that needed humiliation and mortifying. It was protected by the laws of the country. To-day, however, there is no possible apology for it—it is an intolerable pest which a well-governed city would no longer endure.

The streets of the city are not of gold, neither are the walls of jasper, but the streets are very narrow and poorly paved. Many are arched over or protected from the scorching rays of the sun by canopies of matting. The principal streets run at right angles, but are not given any names by the people. Wood is scarce and very expensive; the houses are, therefore, built of limestone. Every house is provided with an ample cistern, and all the rain water is carefully conducted into these reservoirs. This custom dates back into the centuries, and it is an astonishing fact that at no time, however protracted the siege, have the people within the walls suffered for water, even when the enemies without were being steadily decimated from that cause. The roofs are uniformly flat, affording comfortable sleeping-places. Many of the houses are in a most dilapidated condition, no repairs being made as long as shelter and safety are afforded. The windows upon the ground floor do not open on the streets, but into a court with which each house is surrounded. You enter this court by a gate, which is kept locked.

The principal thoroughfares are lined with bazaars. These are small booths side by side. The merchant sits "tailor-fashion" upon his counter, within easy reach of the well-loaded shelves about him. Around the spots of sacred interest are numerous venders of trinkets, rosaries, crucifixes, et cetera, made of olive wood; mother-of-pearl, glass and basaltic stones. These mementoes are eagerly purchased by the ignorant pilgrims, who regard them as possessing rare, miraculous power. When they have been sprinkled with holy water and consecrated by the priests, these relics are accepted to be sure transports through the horrors of purgatory to the realms of eternal felicity, and are buried with the fortunate possessor.

When the traveler from a Christian land enters Jerusalem so keen is his disappointment that he is saddened to tears. Nothing sacred meets his eyes—only profanation and desecration on every hand. The streets run with corruption, while foul odors pollute the atmosphere. He had hoped to rest himself in the quiet of the venerated spots, to which with fondest attachment he had looked so long; but with aching heart he turns away from Calvary, with its damp, gloomy cathedral and jabbering priests, only to find the hallowed precincts of the Temple area monopolized with Mohammedan mummeries. It is not until after he has spent some days clearing away the debris of filth and superstition, and has become hardened to the repulsiveness around him, that his interest is awakened to the highest pitch as he assiduously follows his painstaking guide through a labyrinth of streets and underground passages. His search is rewarded by holy sites, which can be easily substantiated. To these blessed shrines the devout traveler comes again and again to commune with his Savior, and to reconsecrate himself to the easy service of the blessed Lord, whose humanity and sufferings never seemed so real and personal as when prayerfully considered in the cooling shade of Gethsemane, or upon the rugged brow of Calvary.

Notice.

The committee to examine applicants for admission on trial into the North Mississippi Conference respectfully gives this notice:

Applicants will prepare themselves well on spelling, reading, composition, English grammar, arithmetic and geography. The committee requires a respectable knowledge of all these subjects as a condition of approval. This notice is given, because the Discipline leaves the committee to decide what shall be embraced in this examination under the head: "Ordinary Branches of an English Education." The other topics—Discipline and Wesley's Sermons—are given in the Discipline.

The examination will begin Monday, at three P. M., November 21, and we urge candidates to be prompt. On that afternoon the committee will give you a subject on which to write a short composition. From that composition your merit in spelling, writing and English grammar will be mainly judged. We aim to secure in our applicants the best literary qualifications we can for the great work upon which they are entering. We would urge anyone who can to remain at school until an adequate preparation is made.

Very truly, your brethren,

W. T. J. SULLIVAN,
H. R. TUCKER,
H. H. LONG.

Notice.

The next regular session of the Local Preachers' Conference of Mississippi will take place at Hazlehurst, Miss., September 23, 1887, at 10 o'clock. All local preachers are earnestly requested to meet with us, to confer together to increase our usefulness, and to aid our pastors in the work of the ministry. All pastors are also invited to meet with us, to help perfect our organization. Committees appointed at last Conference will be expected to make their report. Local preachers who can not be with us will send written reports of all work they have done.

Jackson Clarion, Brookhaven, Brandon, Hazlehurst and other papers friendly to this cause will please copy.

J. B. BOWEN, Pres.

Board at Centenary College.

MR. EDITOR: I am now in charge of Steward's Hall, at Centenary College. Young men studying for the ministry, with proper endorsement, can get board at Steward's Hall for $12.50 per month. Everything furnished except covering and their toilet. I will be one of ten to pay the expenses of ten young men to be educated here for the ministry, and boarding at the above hall—expenses to be paid monthly in advance. Who will assist in this noble work? Any young man can get board with me for $14 per month, by furnishing his covering and toilet. If the brethren will aid me in this matter, I will put board down to the lowest living rates. Yours truly,

H. P. BRADFORD.

JACKSON, LA., Sept. 8, 1887.

FELICITY STREET CHURCH.—The bids for building the new church were opened last Monday night, and Messrs. Kelley & Bros. were the successful bidders. We congratulate the Building Committee upon their having made a beginning. Now, then, let all the church members rally around their energetic pastor and his efficient committee. Having "a mind to build," let the matter be energetically pushed.

A Woman's Dress

is an important matter as regards their health. They are much more subjected to cold than men, and should be careful to protect themselves. But if they contract a cough or cold, they should take Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein.

Personals.

The Methodista Catholico, published and edited by Rev. J. L. Kennedy, at Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, is in hand. Though we can not read it, we are sure it contains good, solid matter, as the paper itself is neatly printed, and we find in it a sermon by John Wesley, from II Corinthians 1, 12. We found enclosed the lesson paper, entitled as follows: A Nossa Gente Pequena Destinada A Infancia.

It is a matter of universal regret that the great English statesman, Mr. Gladstone, felt compelled to decline the invitation to be present at the Centennial Celebration of the Adoption of the American Constitution, at Philadelphia. The people of the United States would go as far to do honor to Gladstone as to any man in the world, if they had the chance. The Irish question, however, engages his heart and head, and he does the right thing in staying at home and working for the success of home rule.

Bishop W. L. Harris, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died September 2. He was born in 1817, and had been fifty years a minister. Elected Bishop in 1872, he was at the time of his death officially second in seniority.

The latest news from the editor is to the effect that he is improving and will stay his time out. He should remain at the Springs long enough to work a permanent cure.

Rev. F. N. Parker, of Morgan City, was in the office last week and reports his work as flourishing. He is looking well.

Notes.

Mrs. Leavitt, of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, has been doing good work in China for the temperance and social purity cause. We are pleased to note that Miss. Laura Haygood, one of our missionaries, is doing all she can in the cause so dear to the women in all lands. One, writing from Shanghai, in the Union Signal, speaks as follows:

Before Mrs. Leavitt's coming no one would have believed that a woman could have gained access to the different platforms which she occupied. But with her presence among us the way seemed to open of itself, or, rather, ought it not to be said that it was the "Lord's doing and not our own"? It was a new thing for a woman to occupy a pulpit, and, naturally, there was more or less prejudice against it, even among Christians. Some were shocked, while others made themselves "conspicuous by their absence," but still the good work went forward. I think I may safely say that hundreds who had hitherto been indifferent to the claims of temperance and social purity reform, now for the first time in their lives began to realize what sad havoc the vices of intemperance and impurity are making among the nations of the earth.

Some were shocked and others disgusted at the horrible disclosures that only the Spirit of God could ever have given her strength to relate. In other ways than these there were discouragements, but nothing daunted, in her own sweet way, with all the gracefulness of a cultured, motherly woman, and the force and strength of a sound, logical man, Mrs. Leavitt said what she came to say, and accomplished what she came to do.

The editor of the Alabama Advocate uses strong language, and we can not help thinking him about right:

It is vain to say that the grand old hymns of penitence, of faith, of hope, of adoration, and of submission are no longer popular, and that the people prefer those which suit the age of childhood. That is the very thing we complain of—the fact that distresses and alarms us. The people are taught these songs by the preachers, and the preachers do this because they themselves prefer the little songs. And the reason they prefer them, we believe, is because they fit in with little sentimental sermons, and it is easier to tell a few pathetic or funny anecdotes than by prayer and hard study to work up good gospel sermons. There is no denying it. Much of the preaching of the day is as flimsy and shallow as are the popular songs. The two go together—jigitty-jigitty songs and jigitty-jigitty sermons. Whoever loves to sing the one is very apt to preach the other.

It is time to call a halt. Public worship is debased. Conscience is left untouched. The mind is not instructed. The heart is not stirred. The people are deceived as to their state before God. Sin is excused as a mere frailty. Repentance means only "quitting your meanness." Regeneration is a thing of self-culture. We say it is time to call a halt, and throw away all this miserable stuff called popular songs, and go back to hymns and tunes that sink the soul in penitence and then elevate it to true worship.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement to our agents for the securing of new subscribers from this state, we make the following offer:

For eight new subscribers, with cash in full, one set of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary—four volumes—bound in half Morocco; or for six new subscribers the full set bound in extra fine English cloth, sprinkled edge.

Here is an opportunity to secure one of the best Commentaries ever published. Read the following testimonials:

Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

This Commentary has received the hearty commendation of a large number of the leading publishers, biblical scholars, preachers and Sunday-school workers of the country. It is thorough, modern, compact, condensed and cheap. Its immense popularity is deserved. It is specially adapted to the family. "It is the cream of the Commentaries collected by three eminent scholars." Nowhere have we seen more valuable matter packed in the same space—four large 12mo. volumes. Price, $8.00.

T. O. Summers, D. D., LL.D., late Dean of Theological Department of Vanderbilt University, Professor of Systematic Theology; and Book Editor of M. E. Church, South.

I have the Commentary and make good use of it. It is plain, evangelical, and is a cheap and good Commentary. The notes indicate sound learning and extensive research. We endorse their exegesis in general as scholarly, sound and edifying.

A. M. Shipp, D. D., late Professor of Exegetical Theology, Vanderbilt University.

I take pleasure in saying that the Commentary of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown is a valuable, critical practical, and explanatory exposition of the Old and New Testaments, and is regularly recommended by me to my classes in Exegetical Theology.

T. F. Dodd, D. D., Professor of Hebrew, Ecclesiastical History and English Literature, Vanderbilt University.

I consider the Commentary an excellent work. Of all the complete Commentaries on the Bible I prefer this for general use. It is the one to which I resort most frequently. Considering the brevity, the perspicuity, and sound judgment displayed in its elucidation of the Sacred Text, I would advise the reader to provide himself with this in preference to all others.

Bishop J. C. Granberry.

The comments are brief, clear, pointed, thinking, practical and judicious. Few and apt words are chosen to explain the Scriptures. While they are the fruits of scholarly research and criticism, they are so plain as to be easily understood by any reader of average intellect.

Andrew A. Lipscomb, D. D., LL.D., Emeritus Professor, Vanderbilt University.

I have examined this Commentary sufficiently to express my very decided conviction of its eminent merits. It displays just the kind and degree of biblical scholarship that we need in these times, and accordingly is admirably suited to the large and growing class of Scripture students. The clear statement of facts and rules, the vigorous conciseness, the comprehensive scope of the work, commend it to the confidence and appreciation of all who seek wisdom, strength and comfort in the Holy Bible.—It consults the wants of the intellect and heart; it meets these wants, and does this so thoughtfully, so compactly, and so spiritually, that I am glad of an opportunity to call public attention to its rare excellence. It is excellent, very excellent.

B. M. Palmer, D. D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La.

It may be considered as having established its claim to be recognized as among the standard Commentaries upon the Bible.

The express charges are not included in the above offer, and it must be understood that cash accompanies all orders. The subscribers secured on this offer will not be entitled to any of the club offers advertised in the Advocate: but they can, by sending twenty-five cents more than advertised prices, less the two dollars paid to agents, secure the papers or magazines used in our club offers. It will be well for agents to so state to subscribers.

Now is the time to get in your best work. The offer, however, is good until December 1, next.

Publisher's Department.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

The phrase in a recent Sunday-school lesson, "One soweth and another reapeth," occasioned some perplexity to the little girl who rendered it, "One seweth and another ripeth."

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

"Mercy!" exclaimed Mrs. Homespun, when she read in the paper that Jay Gould made ten cents every time the clock ticked, "I should think he'd be worried to death for fear the clock would run down."

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Please keep this in remembrance.

The best way to please a man is to tell him what he thinks of himself. The best way to please a woman is to tell her what she thinks of herself.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and parents are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and diners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing it, grinding the teeth, losing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinning the teeth. Once be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

VERMIFUGE

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely unsuspected, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy to extreme old age—yea, daily mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observant of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it unlimited in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession "from all parts of the country, testify to its unbounded success. In fact, it never fails. It has consequently been given to children of all ages with safe gratification, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in the case, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The genuine name of Fahnestock is all-sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Nov. 30, 1885.

Messrs. J. E. Schwartz & Co., Pittsburg, Pa.

Gentlemen—I have used one of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your remedy can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, etc., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.

CAMBRIDGE, MD., Nov. 30, 1885.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in pronouncing it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a vermifuge is needed.

CALLING THE SANDMAN.

BY ANNIE M. LIGHT.

Now, niddy ned, and niddy dee dee,
O where can that loitering sandman be?
This baby's eyes are bright as phis, heigh—ho;
Now, where is that sandman lingering so.

O sandman, dear sandman, wherever you be,
Hasten, I pray, to this boy on my knee!

Perhaps he's at work far across the deep,
A-getting the little dip boys 'sleep;
Or tripping on through an Esquimaux town,
To fasten some winking eyelash down;

But sandman, dear sandman, what shall we do
To still this young infant's shout of "Goo, goo?"

The bee is asleep in the crimson rose.
And niddy nid ned the poppy's head goes;
The yellow chicks sleep 'neath the old hen's breast,
But here is my bird still out of his nest.

So sandman, dear sandman, o'er land and o'er sea,
Haste, sprinkle your grains in this young rogue's ee.

Soft the fringes drop o'er the bonny eyes,
Sparkling like the stars in the midnight skies;
Through the parted lips that two pearls disclose,
How the sweet breath comes, how the sweet breath goes.

Why so quick and so light the sandman stept,
We hardly knew when the baby slept!

MR. EDITOR: As Aunt Sue subscribes to your paper, and as we all live together, will it not allow us the privilege of writing a short letter? We have a nice Sunday-school. Mr. L. M. Grigsby is our esteemed superintendent. Mr. R. D. Webb is our efficient teacher. I am sorry to say we have no preacher. We have a comfortable house called Flat Lick Church, and we feel that the Conference has treated us unkindly in not sending us a preacher. Our church was formerly in the Minden circuit. Then for one year part of Brushwood circuit; then left out because our preacher died. We will answer Oscar E. David's question: There are twenty-seven books in the New Testament. In answer to Bertie C. Felps: King Saul was head and shoulders taller than any of his people. Will close by asking two questions: Where in the Bible is found, "For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it; and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it?" Next, Where is "galley" found in the Bible? Love for the ADVOCATE.

MR. EDITOR: Here I come again to speak a few words to the little cousins. I have been going to school this summer. I can write, but not well enough to write to you yet. The ladies have a missionary society here, and I am a member. I believe a "missionary girl like me is bound to make a missionary woman." How many of the little six-year-olds' can say this? I must say something about our church and preachers. Our presiding elder, Bro. Cassity, says that South Bossier circuit is the banner circuit of the district; and no wonder, for we have two of the banner preachers of the Louisiana Conference to wave over it—Bros. Blocker and Johns. My aunts, Tieia and Nanie, left us yesterday to visit relatives in Texas. My trunk was packed to go with them, but I backed out, because my dear mother was not going. Don't you think I did right? God bless the little cousins and dear old ADVOCATE.

LESLIE MAGEE.

DOYLINE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to the ADVOCATE, I thought I would write now. I take a great deal of pleasure in reading the little folks' letters. We have Sunday-school every Sunday in the month, except the third, and preaching twice a month by Bro. M. L. Burton. We all are surely pleased with him. I will now answer Bettie Carruth's question: "Grasshopper," is found in Judges vi, 5. I will now ask a question: What was Esau's birthright he sold to Jacob? I hope to see my letter in print. I will close, wishing the ADVOCATE much success.

Your friend,

ANNIE TERRELL.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. I am not going to school now. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Bro. Henry is our superintendent, and Bro. Harry is our minister. We have preaching twice a month. My papa takes your valuable paper. I love to read the little letters. I will close by asking a question: Where in the Bible is the word "darling" found?

HONOR OLD AGE.—The Germans have a story about a little girl, named Jeannette, who once went out to see a grand review. She found a capital place from which to see the soldiers pass, when she noticed a poor old woman in the crowd trying very hard to get where she could see.

Jeannette said to herself: "I should like to see the soldiers march, but it isn't kind in me to stay in this nice seat and let that old woman stay where she can't see anything; I ought to honor old age, and I will." So she called the old woman, and, placing her in the nice seat, fell back among the crowd. There she had to tiptoe and peep and dodge about to catch a glimpse of the splendid scene, which she might have seen fully and easily if she had kept her place.

Some of the people said she was a silly girl, and laughed at her. Jeannette was rewarded in her heart for her kindness to old age. A few minutes later a man covered with lace elbowed his way through the crowd, and said to her: "Little girl, will you come to her ladyship?" She could not imagine who her ladyship was, but she followed the man to a scaffold within the crowd. A lady met her at the top of the stairs, and said: "My dear child, I saw you yield your seat to the old woman. You acted nobly. Now, sit down here by me; you can see everything here." Thus Jeannette was rewarded a second time for honoring old age.—Sabbath-School Visitor.

DOUBLE SEEING.—If any one should say to a boy or girl having bright eyes, open to light and darkness, that they were blind, they would surely say, "Why, no! I see everything around me." But very many of you do not. I've seen bright-eyed girls step on their own sacques lying on the floor, and when they were told of it, say, "Oh, I did not see it." And I have seen them while hunting for things pull everything about on bureau and table and declare the book or the thimble or the handkerchief was not there, and some one else would look right after them and find it, and they would say, "I really did not see it." Boys will almost fall over the hoe in the path, and yet, when the father comes home and points to it, the boy did not see it before, though he may have walked past it and over it twenty times. What is the matter? Well, I think the mind did not see and remember. These children did not pay attention, and it is very unfortunate that they do not. Sometimes this habit of inattention and carelessness becomes so fixed that it causes trouble as long as they live; it wastes hours of time, and is an annoyance to everybody with whom they live.—Christian Union.

Is this an Age of Miracles?

The physician who has a large correspondence with his patients constantly hears the still, sad wail of humanity crying for help. Patients appeal to him for aid for whom he knows cure to be hopeless. Alas! why have they waited until man's best aid can be of little avail? The wisest physicians do not lay claim to work miracles. Great as are the virtues of Compound Oxygen, it must be called in before the undertaker. In cases of consumption, neuralgia, rheumatism, asthma and bronchitis, Compound Oxygen, as made by Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., has achieved wonderful cures. Send for pamphlet, describing the Home Treatment. The book will be sent free, by return mail.

A CHILD'S CHRISTIANITY.—Little Mabel's mother had long been dead, and while her papa was away from home she had no companions but her governess and the servants.

Her father had often told her not to admit to the house any person with whom she was not acquainted.

One cold wintry day a poor, ill-dressed woman stopped at the door and asked permission to warm herself by the kitchen fire.

"But," said Mabel, "my papa doesn't know you."

The woman was shivering with cold, and the rain and sleet dropped from her thin wraps.

A bright idea soon entered the child's head.

"Say," said she, "do you know Jesus?"

Tears started to the poor woman's eyes, and she began to tell how kind the Savior had been to her.

"Well," said the child, "if you know Jesus, you may come in, for papa knows him, and I'm sure he won't care."

Thus should the manifestation of a knowledge of the Redeemer's love for him be the countersign by which we are to know all true Christians.—Early Dew.

Household.

Hygiene for Housekeepers.

Good Housekeeping gives the following eloquent advice to housekeepers on the subject of taking care of their health:

1. Every woman needs to take regular exercise in the open air every day; and that exercise should not be in the nature of work, but of recreation.

2. As a rule, housekeepers need to eat more of simple food. If the food is simpler, less time will be needed in its preparation, and what it lacks in unwholsome richness and unnecessary variety, it will gain in nutriment and digestibility. The result will be an improvement in the health of all the family, and will injure no one but the doctor.

3. Less time ought to be given to the routine work of housekeeping and more to relaxation and recreation. All that "the best of wives" did not do, and for the lack of which she became an inmate of an insane asylum, the housekeeper ought to do. The woman who "always stays at home," who "never goes out of the house even Sundays," and who is "always doing something for her family," not only will "have no ideas outside of her home," but will soon come to have none even there.

The short of the matter is that women, if they desire good health, must not be confined so closely to the cares of the household. I know that many women will look upon this advice as absurd, and will say: "It is all very well for you to preach, but quite another thing for us to practice. A woman's duties involve a multitude of little things, the importance of which is never realized until they are omitted, and then he is the first to find fault. These things must be done. I can not stop, I can not find time to take out-of-door exercise and visit my neighbors. The work must be done, and I must do it."

Nevertheless the fact remains that when serious illness comes to the mistress of the house, the wheels of the treadmill cease to revolve, at least for her. Then the work either stops entirely, or goes on under other hands, and is cared for by other heads. The question is a pertinent one. Would it not be better to do less work while in health, and thus avoid the sickness? And even hired help is less expensive than medical attendance. The old maxims, "A stitch in time saves nine," and "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," are worthy of consideration in this connection.

THE ROMAN CURE FOR MALARIA.—Naaman's objection to the prophet's prescription has not lost its force, and the simplicity of the laws of health is often the most potent hindrance in the way of obedience to them. The medical virtues of lemons were slow in being developed, but once known they promise to be efficacious as they are simple. A physician in Rome, where malaria lies in wait for every tourist, thus describes their use: Cut a good-sized lemon into small pieces, rind and pulp. Add one pint of water. Boil down to half a pint. Strain and cool. Take a teaspoonful or more, as the stomach will bear it, an hour before meals. It is said to do all that has been attributed to quinine, without effecting the nerves or head as quinine does, and some physicians use it exclusively in place of that drug.

When we bring zeal without knowledge, misconceits of faith, carnal affections, the devices of our will-worship, superstitions deviations into God's service, we bring common fire to his altar; these flames were never of his kindling.—Hall.

MISCELLANEOUS.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a depraved to a healthy condition comes as near being a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles, which defy ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. These were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scrofula, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints, Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Eruptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scrofulous taint in the system. Many otherwise beautiful faces are disfigured by pimples, eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All sufferers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a fair trial,—avoiding all powders, ointments, and washes, and especially cheap and worthless compounds, which not only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the diseases they are fraudulently advertised to remedy.

MARTIN—MARY MOZELLE MARTIN, daughter of A. B. and Fannie Martin, born December 10, 1877, and died of congestion, August 4, 1887. Another sunbeam from the household is gone. She was all that the pride and ambition of father and mother could wish. giving, yet so young, the best evidences of that loveliness of disposition, sincerity of spirit and brightness of intellectual capacity that in a few years would have developed into a magnificent womanhood. God, in his providence, has taken her away, and we can only submit and be consoled with the exclamation that has fallen from lips divine: "Suffer little children to come unto me." After a few days of illness the black wing of death touched this fair form, and the flushed, fevered cheek grows pale, the last heart-throb is given, and mortality is swallowed up in immortality. Oh! this beautiful spirit, immortal, untarnished by the touch of time, pure and innocent, leaves this cold tenement of clay, and in transports of joy and gladness rises on rapturous wing, higher and higher, until it reaches the City of the New Jerusalem, and there, safe at home, rests under the widespread white wing of peace forever.

Father and mother, would you recall to this bleak world this lovely child who has crossed the river and has her home in heaven? I bid you cherish the sweet memories that will ever cluster around the name of your loved and lost Mozelle; but dash the wild wish away that would ask for her to come again. No, no! but rather make grander efforts to meet her in that eternal home of the blest. Her merry voice and joyous laughter will never be heard again on earth save when mother will sometimes hear the lingering echo, in memory's treasured halls, of a voice now stilled forever.

DANSBY—Resolutions adopted by Methodist Sunday-school Newton, Miss., August 28, 1887.

The committee appointed to draft resolutions in memory of our pupil and classmate, MISS MARY DANSBY, submit the following:

Whereas, An all-wise Providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved pupil and classmate, Miss Mary Dansby; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we feel the great loss we have sustained in this sad event, and that her death has caused a vacancy in our school and social circle that can not be filled by another! We will never hear her gentle voice again in our class, nor mingle our songs of praise together.

Resolved, That we will ever remember her as a sweet companion and friend; and let us, while we cherish her memory, strive to emulate her virtues, and at the same time humbly bow to the will of him that doeth all things well; and may her sweet influence, like the fragrance of a lovely flower, ever dwell in our hearts!

Resolved, That the Methodist school at this place has lost one of its most worthy members.

Resolved, That the whole school unite in a heartfelt sympathy with the family, and especially the mother of our deceased friend, and pray God to comfort and sustain her in this great trial.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, and also request the Newton Dispatch and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to publish the same.

MRS. EMMA MOORE, for Com.

RICHEY—MRS. SARAH ANN RICHEY (nee Harbin) departed this life August 8, in the sixty-third year of her life. Having been a sufferer for more than forty years, she looked to death as a kind reliever from pain. For six months her suffering had increased, and she would summon all her strength and endeavor to discharge her duties; but, alas! when death calls we must go. Sister Richey was ready when the Master came, having embraced religion and joined the Methodist Church in early life. She kept oil in her lamp by drawing from God's bounty. She was not permitted to attend the Lord's house often; but her home was a home for the preacher. Many times have we seen her rejoicing around the family altar. Her favorite song was, "Savior, more than life to me." "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

J. M. MORSE.

MAGEE—IDA BELL, infant daughter of our beloved friends, Dr. John and Mrs. Anna Magee, near Caseyville, Miss., died August 25, 1887, being nine months and five days of age. Death, it is said, loves a shining mark, and surely his aim was well taken in this instance. Dear little Ida Bell was one of the sweetest, most beautiful and lovely little cherubs that make the central charm of the family circle. But God has called her to himself, and she is now to her parental hearts treasure laid up in Heaven. The sweet little prelude to introduce to her coming loved ones the first notes of heaven's rapturous anthem. "Unto him that loved us," etc.

W. R. HINES.

LUCAS—ALBERT B. LUCAS, youngest son of Hon. John C. Lucas, was born in Kosciusko, Miss., October 23, 1861, and died in the same town, August 12, 1887. Albert was reared by pious parents, and had the advantages of a Christian home, with all its blessed and hallowed influences. All his life he was a member of the Kosciusko Methodist Sunday-school, of which his father has been the loved superintendent from its organization. In the year 1878, Albert, with quite a number of his Sunday-school classmates, professed faith in Christ and united with the church, and just a few days before his death he said that he knew he was converted at that time, and, though he felt that he had often been remiss in duty, still he had a good hope of eternal life. We feel assured that the young life thus so suddenly cut off has been renewed in a fairer, better clime. Albert was a young man of guileless spirit, kind and affectionate disposition, a favorite among his companions, and loved and respected by all who knew him; and, while he had his faults, he possessed many of those noble qualities of mind and heart which would have made him a useful and valuable member of society and of the church had he been permitted to live. But the great Head of the church saw fit to remove him, and we meekly bow in submission to the will of him who "doeth all things well."

R. P. MITCHELL.

TURNER—FRANCES REBECCA, daughter of Artemas Turner and Mary, his wife, was born in Livingston parish, La., September 16, 1885, and died in same place, June 5, 1887. Little Frances was the only child of her parents; and as a precious flower, removed from a good to a better place, so has she been transplanted into the fields of light.

Remarkable Surgery.

The science of surgery has made such wonderful progress in modern times, that the most intricate and delicate operations are now undertaken and carried to a successful issue. There are now several well authenticated cases of what is known as pneumotomy, that is to say, the removal of diseased portions of the lungs in cases of consumption. While, however, this delicate operation has sometimes been successfully performed, the risks attending it are so great, and the chances of recovery so slight, that it is seldom resorted to. The safest plan in consumptive cases is to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This will always cure the disease in its earlier stages, thoroughly arresting the ravages of the terrible malady, by removing its cause and healing the lungs.

An artist in finishing the portrait of a baby could not recall the curve of its eyelid; so she traveled ninety miles to get the expression of a little eye, essential to the truth of the portrait. It was Christ who said: "The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." How many miles a man will travel, hoping to get office; how many miles for the betterment of himself and family; how many years he will work to earn competence; but the miles are few he will ride to worship, the hours are few in which he works out his salvation. And yet if he work not out his salvation, better for him if he had not been born.—Southern Churchman.

The New Prize Story

is eagerly sought for, read with pleasure or disappointment, is then tossed aside and forgotten. But ladies who read of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, read it again, for they discover in it something to prize—a messenger of joy to those suffering from functional derangements or any of the painful disorders or weaknesses peculiar to their sex. Periodical pains, internal inflammation and ulceration, readily yield to its wonderful curative and healing powers. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

A man that studieth revenge keepeth his own wounds green, which would otherwise heal and do well.

GRANDEVILLE, SOUTH CAROLINA, June 12th, 1887.

DR. A. T. SHALLENBERGER, Rochester, Pa.

Dear Sir: My little five-year-old girl suffered a whole year with Malarial Fever, and all the doctors did not seem to help her. I heard of your Pills and bought a bottle. The second dose broke the fever, and in ten days she was a new child, and is now fat and hearty. We use no other medicine in our family. Respectfully,

H. SIMS.

ARTIFICIAL EYES

Are Now so Perfectly Made That No One Can Distinguish Them from the Natural Eye.

The Artificial Eye is not only a beautifier, but it serves other excellent purposes.
It enables the eyelids to move as freely as ever.
It restores the functions of the tear passages.
It prevents the eyelashes from turning within, causing inflammation.
It prevents distortion of features, as happens always in case of a young person who has the misfortune to lose an eye—and sometimes in the case of older persons.
Mr. W. BODINE, our Optician, has made a specialty of selecting and inserting them.

The Pastor's Manners and Manner.

Manners and manner have much to do with spiritual power. It is true that goodness is more important than anything external, and many ministers whose ways in public, and especially in the pulpit have always made people uncomfortable, have, after all, by the sterling qualities of their minds and hearts exerted wonderful power. Some of us knew a beloved minister of another denomination, recently gone to his reward, whose manners in ordinary intercourse were a perpetual affront to good taste, and who never appeared in the pulpit without severely trying his hearers' feelings, whose peculiarities, however, were so essentially part of himself that everyone bore with and almost condoned them for the immense intellectual and spiritual force he projected into every service. But such popular forbearance is not extended with a readiness that will justify indifference to manners and manner.

We must accept our own essential, God-given personalities not only, but we must just as surely make the most of them. We can observe good manners, we can improve upon an objectionable and repelling manner, we can cultivate grace of movement and gesture, we can even train voice. I recall another dear brother who is a strong, clear thinker, and an exceptionally neat writer, who really deeply feels every word he speaks, and whose voice within its natural compass, is as sweet as the tones of a lute, but who in public speaking has acquired a habit of playing between terrific explosions and inaudible whispers. Going along on his natural tones just long enough to make everyone feel how sweet they are, he will suddenly startle his hearers with a fearful detonation, and then, before they have had time to recover their composure, will drop into an undertone inaudible a very few away. This strange characteristic has unspeakably impaired his popularity and usefulness.

It would be wise, if our sensitive natures would bear it, for each of us to put himself under a capable and honest trainer, who would faithfully tell us just how we deport ourselves, and how we use our voices in the public service. Spiritual power is more affected by these matters than we are apt to think. Perhaps as good a rule as any to adopt in regard to pulpit manner is this—to try to avoid everything that would divert our hearers' attention from our message by drawing it to ourselves.—Rev. David Cole, D. D.

"Yes; I shall break the engagement," she said, folding her arms and looking defiant; "it is really too much trouble to converse with him: he's as deaf as a post, and talks like he had a mouthful of mush. Besides, the way he hawks and spits is disgusting." "Don't break the engagement for that; tell him to take Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It will cure him completely." "Well, I'll tell him. I do hate to break it off, for in all other respects he's quite too charming." Of course, it cured his catarrh.

I WILL TELL IT.—Many a physician has gained his practice by one patient telling others of his cure. Tell your neighbors that you have been to the hospital of Jesus, and been restored, though you hated all manner of meat, and drew near the gates of death; and, maybe, a poor soul just in the same condition as yourself, will say, "This is a message from God to me." Above all publish the Lord's goodness for Jesus' sake. He deserves your honor. Will you receive his blessing, and then, like the nine lepers, give him no praise? Will you be like the woman in the crowd who was healed by touching the hem of his garment, and then would have slipped away? If so, pray that the Master may say; "Somebody hath touched me." and may you be compelled to tell the truth, and say, "I was sore sick in soul, but I touched thee, O my blessed Lord, and I am saved, and to the praise of the glory of thy grace I will tell it, though the devils should hear it; I will tell it, and make the world ring with it, according to my ability, to the praise and glory of thy saving grace."—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

Sore or Inflamed Eyes Speedily Cured

By the use of Darbys Prophylactic Fluid. It allays the inflammation and irritation and is peculiarly efficacious by reason of its power in cleansing and destroying all poisonous matter. Chafing, bruises, tumors, eruptions, boils and sores, and those more serious and tenacious maladies, Scald Head, Salt Rheum and Erysipelas, are speedily cured by the Fluid.

The Object of a Church.

The chief object of the church should be to lead sinners to repentance. If a body of Christian people, in the community in which it resides, simply gathers the regular congregation of families Sabbath after Sabbath, good and desirable as that result is, does not fulfill the purpose for which God has called it into the kingdom of his Son. If that congregation should have no service for its own improvement and enjoyment next Sabbath morning, or for the Sabbaths of a month, but should be engaged instead in visiting the ungodly and non-church-going families around it to declare to them the truth as it is in Jesus, and to pray for and with them in their own homes, it would be performing the work for which God has instituted it better than many churches are at present. This is an extreme statement, and is made only for the sake of presenting the case strongly. To edify Christians and their families is useful and needful, but that is not the chief purpose for which the church exists. No church should be content, however large may be its regular congregation, however abundant may be its resources, unless it is leading sinners to repentance. John the Baptist, the forerunner of the King, preached repentance. When our Lord began he preached, Repent, for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand. The Apostles, as they were sent forth, preached repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ. There is joy in heaven over one sinner who repenteth more than over ninety and nine just persons who need no repentance. The church should be earnestly, heartily, incessantly engaged in endeavoring to lead the prodigal to repentance, and its joy should be, not that it has a large, strong, intelligent, cultivated and wealthy congregation, wielding a wide social influence, but in that it is constantly, by the blessing of God, leading sinners to repentance. No pastor should allow himself to be satisfied unless he is bringing into the church, through repentance, one after another of those who are not members of the Christian families which have long been connected with the congregation to which he ministers, or with other congregations. To lead sinners to repentance is the divinely appointed work of the church.—Christian Intelligencer.

Consumption, Wasting Diseases, And General Debility. Doctors disagree as to the relative value of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites: the one supplying strength and flesh, the other giving nerve power, and acting as a tonic to the digestive and entire system. But in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites the two are combined, and the effect is wonderful. Thousands who have derived no permanent benefit from other preparations have been cured by this. Scott's Emulsion is perfectly palatable and is easily digested by those who can not tolerate plain Cod Liver Oil.

It is said that sixty thousand millions of matches are consumed yearly in this country. Prices have fallen one-half and consumption increased one-third since the removal of the revenue tax.

The Texas Chautauqua.

MR. EDITOR: An invitation to lecture before the San Marcos Assembly, or Texas Chautauqua, as it is popularly called, gave me an opportunity recently to visit for the first time the Lone Star State. Shut up, as I had been, during most of the summer in the hot, dusty city, with rarely an opportunity to "breathe the inspiring breath of the fresh woodland air," the outward trip was a most enjoyable one.

Along much of the route the scenery is decidedly attractive. True, there are regions more picturesque. The scenery that greets the eye as you glide along the banks of the Juniata, or wind your sinuous way up the valley of the Potomac above Harper's Ferry, affords ampler material for the poet's pen and the painter's brush. Still, South Louisiana and Southeastern Texas abound in landscapes that are decidedly beautiful.

Just beyond the Crescent City you traverse miles on miles of rice farms, level as a table, dotted with cottages, checkered with aqueducts, and mantled with a marvelous luxuriance of golden-hued, sickle-inviting grain, waving perpetually in the breath of the sea. Occasionally, you penetrate a vast morass, from whose dirty lagoons a numerous horde of the degenerate offspring of the huge Mesozoic Saurians look lazily upon you. There are apparently interminable forests of the colossal, stately cypress, whose native foliage of dark verdure is almost concealed beneath an outer robe of Confederate-grey moss, which hangs from almost every twig and bough in graceful festoons, or in long, waving pendants of weeping-willow sombreness.

You enter the land of the cane, and as your steam-driven chariot whirls along for hours, scenes of exquisite beauty flit rapidly by. Long before you have passed the boundaries of "the Pelican State," you are in the region of treeless plains. As you look out from the car platform—eastward, westward, northward, southward—you see everywhere a carpet of grassy verdure, thickly dotted with flocks and herds, stretching away to the distant region, where the skies come down and kiss the sod. Scenes like these, as they swiftly unfold like a gorgeous panorama, one feels like describing in the language of the poet:

"All instinct with the radiant grace and bloom, Caught from the glories of a lovelier world."

San Marcos is a town of about fifteen hundred inhabitants, on the railroad that connects Austin with San Antonio. It is thirty-one miles from Austin, and fifty from San Antonio. It lies at the foot of the San Marcos Mountains, within less than a mile of San Marcos Lake, which is the source of San Marcos river. The valley of the San Marcos is like unto the valley of the Nile for fertility. One thing only it lacks to entitle it to be called the garden-spot of America—rain. This region is subject to long-continued droughts. The disastrous effects of these, however, human ingenuity will doubtless soon overcome. I predict that not many years will elapse before this entire valley will be irrigated by the waters of the river. San Marcos will have other railroad connections in the near future. It is rather a picturesque town, many of its residences extending far up the slopes of the mountain, and having considerable interspaces covered with groves of nature's own producing. The climate is quite salubrious.

Although sea breezes blow almost constantly, yet the two hundred miles of prairie which they have traversed have extracted almost all their humidity. The extreme dryness of the atmosphere is noticeable in many ways. You can sleep in the open air and scarcely find a trace of a dew-drop upon your locks or your garments. This climatic condition makes the place a health resort for persons afflicted with pulmonary diseases.

The San Marcos Assembly is domiciled on a spur of the San Marcos Mountains, lying just in rear of the town. This peak has an elevation of about two hundred and fifty feet above the valley. The tabernacle is substantially built, and is said to have a seating capacity of about 2,200. Just in front of the rostrum, and virtually forming a part of it, is an artificial, semi-circular mound of rugged rocks, which, however, are partially concealed beneath a profusion of vines and flowers, whose presence you do not need to be told is due to woman's refined taste and deft fingers. This flower-decorated mound is surmounted by an octagonal glass tank of considerable dimensions, in the centre of which there is a fountain, whose perpetual splash and sparkle add a novel charm to the scene. Numerous other fountains are playing day and night about the grounds. These fountains, and also the entire water supply of the encampment, have their source in the river, which also furnishes the power needed for their elevation. On the top of the tabernacle there is an observatory, which commands a wide-spread landscape of such surpassing loveliness that it reminds you of the rapturous language of Paul H. Hayne:

"Can heavenly bounty lavish richer stores
Of color, fragrance, beauty, and delight,
On mortal or immortal sight,
On any sphere that rolls around the sun?"

The mountain is partially terraced on three sides, each terrace forming a highway for pedestrians or vehicles; and these terraces sometimes intersect each other in graceful curves.

There are some natural curiosities in the regions round about. One of these is a huge natural terrace encircling a mountain peak, or rather several peaks. The sides of the mountain, both above and below, are covered with a thick growth of trees, while the terrace itself, which has an average width of perhaps a hundred feet, is as treeless as a highway, and as level as a table. It is not less than five or six miles in length. A more magnificent drive can not be found. This terrace is popularly called the "Devil's Race Track." The early settlers of this region seem either to have had great admiration for his satanic majesty, or else to have supposed that his dwelling-place was not far distant, for numerous localities bear his name. "The Devil's Cave" and "The Devil's Backbone" are other specimens of geographical nomenclature. The refined taste of my classical friend, Dubose, proposes to christen this terrace anew under the name, "The Drive of the Titans."

But the attraction of the place, so far as its natural features are concerned, is the San Marcos Lake and river. The water of the lake is, if possible, more transparent than a dew-drop. Its depth varies from fifteen to forty feet, and yet, wherever there is no vegetation to obstruct the view, you can see the bottom with the utmost distinctness. The source of these waters is another wonder. Imagine a river a hundred feet wide, and five feet deep, bursting forth, like a gigantic spring, from the base of a mountain, and you have an idea of the source of the San Marcos. The temperature of the lake is almost uniform, the annual variation being only about one degree, the average being about seventy-two degrees. The summer sun beats upon it, but it keeps its winter coolness. The winds of winter howl about it, but it refuses to part with its summer caloric. In summer it is delightfully cool for bathing. In mid-winter cattle stand in it for hours to keep warm. Another curious fact connected with this stream is, that it always rises about a foot and a half in the very dryest season of the year—the early summer. This, with its uniform temperature, is regarded as a proof that it is fed through a vast subterranean aqueduct by the snows on some far-off mountain summit.

But the most marvelous part of the story remains to be told. This pertains to the vegetation that finds a habitat in these crystal waters. I had read of this before coming here; but the half of its weird and unique beauty was never told by tongue or pen. It is one of those things that must be seen to be appreciated. In the water you find growing, with a genuinely tropical exuberance, a vast variety of plants, grasses, vines, mosses, water lilies, cresses, ferns, ivies, etc. Over a large part of the lake the surface is completely covered with strange-looking specimens of vegetation, which I have never seen elsewhere, called in common parlance "bonnets." They are not rooted in the soil, but simply float upon the surface of the water, and draw their sustenance from it. They are so abundant that boats can not go through them. This, however, is but one, and about the least interesting one, of a vast multitude of aquatic plants that here challenge your attention. These are rooted in the rocks that form the bed of the lake. So luxuriantly do they grow that, although the lake is from fifteen to forty feet deep, they often reach the surface. In other places their tops are only a short distance below the surface. To see these you must get in a boat. You can tell very little about them from the shore. The best time for making observations is when the sun is almost overhead—say, from ten to two o'clock. As your boat glides over the glassy surface, you look down into the aqueous depths, and you behold a variety of vegetable forms and colors that is marvelous. Every change of position brings a change of scenery. And not only the forms of the plants, but their groupings, are various and beautiful. Certain localities have had names given them. One remarkable group is called "The Peri's Palace." The plants have here formed an arch of large proportions, which requires no great stretch of fancy to liken it to the entrance to some antique palace. What furniture adorns the chambers of this weird palace in the waters no mortal knows, for no one has had the temerity to cross its threshold. Another locality bears the less pleasing name, "The Devil's Cave."

And not vegetation alone, but also animal life is here. It is delightful to watch the graceful movements of the finny tribes that sport continuously in these crystal depths. You can spend hours gazing into these waters without growing weary.

So far as my reading goes, this stream is unique among earth's water courses. A tropical river gushing forth in a temperate, maintaining, in all seasons, a uniform temperature, and displaying such a marvelous wealth of tropical vegetation—if its like exists on this terraqueous globe, I have yet to hear of it. It is one of the curiosities of the New World. If she could once lay eyes upon it, New York City would give millions to be able to reproduce it in Central Park. This stream has connected with it an Indian legend, which has been embalmed in song by a gifted daughter of Texas—Mrs. Pennell.

The Vincent of this new Chautauqua is Rev. H. M. Dubose, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now stationed at Tyler. Dubose was formerly a member of the Mississippi Conference. He is quite a remarkable man. Although only twenty-nine years of age, he has served as pastor several of the first churches in Texas. He is a man of large attainments and wonderful versatility. He has rare gifts as a speaker. All the rich and varied resources of the English tongue seem to be at his command. Moreover, he has that imaginative cast of mind which sends forth thought with the impress of poetry upon it. "He thinks in tropes." In beauty and elegance of diction, and in exuberance and range of imagination, he has few peers in the Southern pulpit. For the position which he here holds, as superintendent of instruction and commander-in-chief of the Chautauqua forces, he seems pre-eminently fitted. Invincibly firm, yet delightfully urbane, possessed of fine administrative capacities, inexhaustibly fertile in resources, and having a will-power that knows no such word as fail, he seems destined, as the leader of this movement, to become a benefactor to this great commonwealth. His efforts are ably seconded by his coadjutors, Rev. McIntyre, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Rev. W. H. Shaw, of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, who have charge respectively of the S. S. Normal and of the C. L. S. C.

This assembly is in its infancy. Only a few buildings have been erected. Visitors, for the most part, sleep in tents. This, however, is far less likely to be a source of discomfort here than it would be in most localities, as a summer rain is a rare occurrence. Plans are on foot for extensive improvements in the near future. The grounds have been leased for a term of ninety-nine years by three liberal, energetic, enterprising men, who are thoroughly possessed of the Chautauqua idea. These are the men above named—Dubose, McIntyre and Shaw. They propose before the next meeting of the assembly to complete the work of terracing already begun; to erect a ten-thousand-dollar hotel and a number of neat cottages; to put a small steamer on the lake, and to make sundry other improvements. When these plans shall have been carried out, only one thing more will be needed to make this place one of the most popular resorts in all Southland, viz: to give widespread publicity to its numerous attractions.

San Marcos is already widely known as a health resort for consumptives, and as a desirable winter residence for invalids needing a mild climate. It is not so well known as a summer resort, and yet a delightful summer resort it is. I speak now particularly of the assembly grounds. The valley is sometimes quite warm. The mountain, however, is generally comparatively pleasant, and then the breezes are almost constant. During the eight days of my sojourn, I did not see the forest leaves motionless more than once. The nights are delightful.

What sacred memories are destined to cluster about this unique spot in the years to come! Here, on this goodly mountain crest, overlooking scenes of enchanting beauty; here, underneath the shadow of the cedar, the elm and the mountain oak; here, where Mexic breezes, balmy as the breath of spring, blow unceasingly; here, where the song of the forest bird regales the ear by day, and the distant murmur of falling waters, like a mother's lullaby, soothes to slumber at night; here, where Polar snows and equatorial flora meet and mingle in a colossal fountain of matchless beauty; here, on San Marcos Mountain, by San Marcos Lake, unborn generations shall gather to rest from life's carking cares, to enjoy the sweets of refined social intercourse, to improve intellect and heart, and to study the works and the Word of God.

The Louisiana State Lottery.

No controversy has been joined in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE on an article I contributed, which appeared in the number of August 4, 1887; but I have been met elsewhere with the following arguments: That it is in accordance, and not in violation of the laws of the land; that forty thousand dollars are annually collected from it for a charitable institution. As to the first of these, nothing can make a thing righteous which of itself is unrighteous. "A clean thing can not be brought out of an unclean." "A bramble can not bear figs." If the civil laws of a commonwealth can change a vice to virtue, then Mormonism can be made holy, and plurality of wives a pious practice. The sacrifice and putting to death of infants among the heathen; the burial alive out of the way of aged, helpless, and infirm parents, is harmless and right, because the laws of the land maintain the practice. The legal establishment of houses of ill-fame, by granting them licenses, and taxing them that they might be protected, does not make their inmates virtuous. If so, then the law is righteous, and these establishments are thrown open for the free and unrestricted visits of our noble sons and pure daughters, without blot or blur. In all civilized and enlightened countries, where the Word of God is made the standard of law, upon which all officers, executive, take their oath of office, and upon which jury men and witnesses swear to do their duty and to tell the truth, acknowledging the justice of its pains and penalties, is acknowledged by this practice and usage to be the true standard of right and wrong everywhere. In every instance where the laws of the land antagonize the teachings of the sacred Scriptures, in granting more than one cause for divorce of husband and wife; in licensing liquor-selling and drunkard-making establishments; in permitting Sabbath-breaking industries, and in fostering gambling establishments as institutions upon the State, and largely affecting the morals of other commonwealths, are unrighteous and devilish laws.

Some appear to think, and do reason, that because the Louisiana State Lottery Company pays forty thousand dollars to sustain the Charity Hospital, it is a charitable institution, and ought to be patronized. The concern contracted to pay that forty thousand dollars in order to secure a constitutional existence. It was a bribe to the convention framing the constitution—a feigned charity with which to hoodwink the people of the State, and manipulate money from thoughtless thousands. It is unquestionably a bonus paid to secure its vampire life. Millions of dollars paid into the treasury of that concern, with the flattering unction laid to conscience, that it is patronizing a charity, would never lodge in the vaults of that company but for the faint hope of possibly drawing a premium of many thousand per cent. on the investment. The ruling motive by the company, and by the patrons of the company, is gain, and not charity. Besides all that, the Lord in clearest terms forbids moneys from any filthy or unclean source coming into his treasury. Read what is written in Deuteronomy xxiii, 18. This principle contemplates doing evil that good may come, which imputation Paul repudiates as a slander when charged upon him and his associates. "And not rather (as we are slanderously reported, and as some affirm that we say), Let us do evil that good may come? whose damnation is just." (Romans iii, 8.) According to Scripture teaching, the end can never sanctify the means.

As the extreme hazard, and sometimes impossibility of success, have been treated of in a previous communication, I will add this on that point: From what I have heard, and from what I have read, my conviction is that when a preacher buys a ticket, if it comes to be known he is a reverend, he is certain to draw a prize. No better advertisement could be given of the concern. The example and success to his flock is a powerful inducement to them to play victims to a game more hopeless of success in some of its features than roulette or round-table. These seem more successful than any other class in proportion. One other circumstance connected with this State Lottery, revolting to true lovers of morality, is that its tickets are on sale in bars and drinking saloons, in towns and cities, and on steamboats. I have never known or heard of their being sold elsewhere. Saloon keepers and bartenders who furnish cards and dice, who furnish rooms, who furnish tables and other furniture for gambling on any scale, large or small, mild or desperate, are the accredited agents of this offspring of the devil, fostered and nursed at the breast of the great State of Louisiana. This association alone is sufficient to repulse a truly honest man from an institution where whisky men and gamblers are its drummers and agents, where he is very certain to be loser, and where the concern is winner beyond a doubt.

(Christian at Work.)

It is surely singular when we can have the real power that we take its semblance instead. We only half believe, and thus we never inspire. What we want first is to surrender ourselves to the simple close-at-hand truths of the gospel, to begin in the primary department of spiritual schooling, to stay there until its truths have passed into us, and made us children before the requirements of that unchangeable law of self-surrender; then to follow naturally and obediently with lifted eyes, receiving direction and new light with every step. Half-surrender people are without deep conviction, and, therefore, without power.

(Presbyterian.)

Whatever outside Christian work we may do, therefore, let us not fail to look well to our own households. Jewish parents used to say that if they could have the exclusive control of their children until they were eight years of age, they feared no subsequent apostacy. If Christian parents will fill their homes with prayer and love and faithful teaching, and the sweet spirit of Christ, while their children's lives are tender and easily impressed, they need not fear that in years to come they will fail to be godly and noble men and women.

(Evangelist, N. Y.)

The power of persuasive preaching is always to be confronted by the hearer's testing and proving judgment. Even if an angel from heaven bring the message, the plumage of his wings and the music of his song are not the warrant of his teaching, but its harmony with the Word of God. All Christian hearers should be true triers of uttered doctrine, in order to see that the Word suffers neither addition nor abatement, remembering that God's Spirit witnesses only with the truth, and the Master commands the spiritual detection of false apostles. What a stimulus to true heralding to know that hearers searched the Scriptures to "see whether these things are so," not in a captious spirit, but in reverence for the inspired Scriptures!

One by one thy duties wait thee;
Let thy whole strength go to each;
Let no future dreams elate thee;
Learn thou first what these can teach.

AN UNPUBLISHED POEM.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

Alone I walk the peopled city.
Where each seems happy with his own;
Oh! friends, I ask not for your pity—
I walk alone.

No more for me yon lake resolves,
Though moved by loving airs of June;
Oh! birds, your sweet and piping voices
Are out of tune.

In vain for me the elm-tree arches
Its plumes in many a feathery spray,
In vain the evening's starry marches
And sunlit day.

In vain your beauty, summer flowers;
Ye can not greet these cordial eyes;
They gaze on other fields than ours—
On other skies.

The gold is rifled from the coffer,
The blade is stolen from the sheath;
Life has but one more boon to offer,
And that is—death.

Yet well I know the voice of duty,
And, therefore, life and health must crave,
Though she who gave the world its beauty
Is in her grave.

I live, O lost one, for the living
Who drew their earliest life from thee,
And wait until, with glad thanksgiving,
I shall be free.

For life to me is as a station
Wherein apart a traveler stands—
One absent long from home and nation
In other lands;

And I, as he who stands and listens,
Amid the twilight's chill and gloom,
To hear approaching in the distance
The train for home.

For death shall bring another mating,
Beyond the shadows of the tomb,
On yonder shore a bride is waiting
Until I come.

In yonder fields are children playing,
And there—Oh! vision of delight!—
I see the child and mother straying
In robes of white.

Then, then, the longing heart that breakest,
Stealing the treasures one by one,
I'll call thee blessed when thou makest
The paired—one.

THE CENTURION'S FAITH.

Matthew viii, 5-13.

GOLDEN TEXT: "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel."—Matthew viii, 10.

INTRODUCTORY.

From having studied the Temperance Lesson last week, we go back now to the immediate connection with the former lessons drawn from the Sermon on the Mount. First, after the coming down from the mount, the miracle of the cleansing of the leper is recorded. Then comes the subject of the present lesson—The Centurion's Faith. This centurion was a most remarkable man. He was not a Jew, but a Roman commander of one hundred men in the service of Herod Antipas. Jesus marveled at him—not in the sense of being taken by surprise, for the Savior knows all that is in man. The meaning is, that Jesus marveled, just as a man seeing a youth turning out exceedingly well from unpromising surroundings would say that the success was marvelous. He was a remarkable man, because Jesus preferred him to a place of honorable mention above his own people; and, more especially, because it was said that he would occupy a place in the eternal kingdom, when others more highly favored on earth would be cast out. The element in the character of this centurion which procured such distinction was faith. "Jesus said, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel." Faith is a fundamental trait in Christian character. Many Christians say: "The trouble with me is, I can't exercise faith. Oh! that I had faith." Mr. Wesley thus impressively characterizes the importance of faith: "Faith is that Christian grace which, if an individual possessed, even though he might be supposed to be wanting in all others, he could enter into life. Again, it is that which, if an individual lacked, though he might be supposed to be possessed of all the others, he never could enter the kingdom." The substance, not the exact words, of Mr. Wesley's deliverance is given. It will be beneficial to study the centurion's character and find out the mainspring of his wonderful faith.

I.—HIS HUMANITY.

He had a sick servant. He wanted him healed, not because he was deprived of his services, not because he was in danger of losing his property, but because "he was dear unto him." The captain of a hundred men, who had accustomed himself to the experiences of war, might have thought it to be unbecoming to his manhood to be thus tenderly interested in a sick boy. But, when he saw him "grievously tormented"—very ill—he was not only moved with compassion, but began earnest efforts to have him relieved. "The bravest are the tenderest, the loving are the daring." The centurion, knowing that his own heart was touched with sympathy for the servant, and conscious that he would do all that he could to relieve him, naturally transferred these same humane feelings, but in a greater degree, to him who, he had heard, was touched with the feelings of our infirmity; and thus he had faith that the great Physician would heal his servant.

II.—HIS HUMILITY.

He did not feel worthy even to go into the presence of Jesus. Matthew says the centurion came unto Jesus; but Luke, who is more circumstantial, represents him as conferring with the Savior through messengers. The two accounts can be reconciled by the understanding of Matthew's version, that one can be said to do himself what he accomplishes through others. He sent the elders of the Jews to represent him. Again, he sent friends unto him. His humility is clearly shown by his saying: "I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof." A want of self-appreciation is most apt to beget a corresponding appreciation in others. He who trusts in himself can be with difficulty brought to trust in others. On the contrary, when one has been brought to realize that there can be no relief from any other source which he has tried, he will cling all the more tenaciously to the last hope. When he becomes convinced that all earthly sources of relief have failed, then, with a despairing effort of faith, he grasps the Infinite.

III.—HIS LOVE FOR SACRED THINGS.

"He was worthy, for he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue." Though the centurion was not presumed to be a worshiper in the synagogue, nor to hold communion with the Jews, yet he had doubtless seen the commendable characteristics of the Jewish people, and their refining influences upon the community at large. He realized that the synagogue was the center whence radiated their transforming truths, the inspiration of their purity, pathos and power; hence he built them a synagogue. Now, it is the most natural thing that this interest he had shown, this money he had invested, should have caused him to have faith that the God of the synagogue would respond to his call. He had a property in the sacred cause, and on that account he believed that his claim would not be disregarded. Not in the sense that he had paid value received for any answer that God might give him, nor that he had merited the divine favor by his act, but the rather, that because he loved the people of God, and that because he had consecrated his substance to the upbuilding of the spiritual kingdom, therefore, God would be graciously pleased not to turn a deaf ear to his cry of distress.

IV.—HIS FAITHFUL FULFILLMENT OF THE OBLIGATIONS OF LIFE.

"For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it." The obligation here spoken of looks two ways. He was under authority, and he gave due obedience to his superiors, and he had officers and soldiers under him, and from these he exacted and enforced implicit obedience. Such an undeviating conformity to all obligations, whether higher or lower; such a clean record towards all those upon whom he was dependent, as well as those dependent upon him, would naturally beget the expectation that others would be governed by the same line of conduct. Confidence in oneself naturally begets confidence in others; while, on the contrary, a man who knows his own want of integrity, his own impurity, his own venality, will naturally judge all others by his own experience. St. John very clearly sets forth both of these principles in his epistle: "For if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things. Beloved, if our heart condemn us not, then we have confidence toward God. And whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments and do those things that are pleasing in his sight." The centurion was fully conscious that he had faithfully striven to discharge all the obligations which rested upon him, whether obedience to superiors or the demanding of obedience from his inferiors. If, by commanding any of his servants, he might relieve distress or fulfill an errand of mercy, he knew that he himself would not fail, or even hesitate, hence he had faith that the great Captain-General of the universe would not be recreant to the claim which the least of his creatures had upon him, but that he would "speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed."

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

1. Faith is an essential element in Christian character. "Without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

2. Faith is progressive. It can be cultivated. "Lord, increase our faith." "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." The exercise of the centurion's faith was not accidental, but was the legitimate fruitage of the careful sowing and the diligent cultivation of those precious seeds of humanity, humility, love of the church, and discharge of duty.

3. Faith is omnipotent. It excites the marvel of the Savior, and receives his highest encomium. It commands the right-hand place in the kingdom.

CHINA GROVE CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: This camp ground is in the eastern part of Pike county, nearly twenty-five miles due east of McComb City. It was projected in 1878 under the charge of Rev. P. Howard, but, owing to yellow fever epidemic, no meeting was held until 1879. Annually since, until 1886, meetings were held.

For several years back Satan has been quite prominent in instigating his servants to lawless deeds, trying to dishearten the sons of God and prevent future meetings. None was held last year. September 2 the camp-fires were again lighted, and the worship of God inaugurated for a series of days. Saturday morning quite a host of people were present. Many who had suffered previously feared as the shades of night gathered. Rev. J. M. Weems, P. E., and R. S. Gale, P. C., called the tent-holders to counsel. The sheriff, A. Boyd, was there to aid. All resolved that China Grove Camp Ground must be defended from violence. At twilight the enemy opened fire with the report of a tree cannon, followed by a fusilade of pistol shots upon all sides of the encampment, as an omen of what was intended for the night. The night service continued to its proper close. Then the Lord's defenders, sheriff and posse of preachers and tent-holders, went on guard, and during the night made many arrests, and secured evidence that will trouble others. By morning the enemy realized that the men on guard were in solid earnest, and that they must subside. Whisky is responsible for much of the evil doings, as tainted breath and empty bottles of the captured testified. From this time on, with exception of a few stray pistol shots, Sunday night, profound peace reigned.

The preaching was first-class every way; the singing, fair; the altar exercises, highly interesting. Most of the preachers and workers were young men, and several young ladies were not slow to render efficient service in prayer and song.

A notable sermon from Bro. Weems caused some forty heads of families to pledge to begin the duty of family prayer.

Twenty-five accessions and some forty conversions were the visible results.

The people feel happy that they were able, with God's blessing, to overcome the lawless element. New life has been infused, and good will follow. Oh, that every poor, misguided sinner that aided to violate the law could be converted before January 1.

R. B. DOWNER.

HATTIESBURG, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Since my last, the amount realized for the missionary cause at this place, as the result of the week of prayer, has been augmented. It foots up now, in cash and subscription, $20 75. Twenty dollars already forwarded to Dr. Kelley, Treasurer, at Nashville. Please note this: One family did without butter for a month, and gave the value of it to the cause. I forbear giving names.

SAM JONES CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: I am just home from the Sam Jones Camp Meeting, which commenced August 26 and closed September 4, and by request I write you a short account of it. We had a good supply of our home preachers, who did faithful work both in and out of the pulpit. We also had a good supply of altar workers among the laity, both male and female—all intent on promoting the true interests of the meeting. The result was a very good camp meeting. I did not ascertain the number of conversions; but we had them, bright and clear, at many of our altar prayer meetings. We had some very valuable accessions, but not many, from the fact that the great majority in that community are already members of the Protestant Churches. The congregations were generally large, especially on the two Sabbaths embraced in the meeting; and better behaved congregations I have seen nowhere. As soon as I saw the encampment, it looked like a new place compared to its appearance last year. The old railroad shanties, with the logs and other rubbish that deformed the encampment last year, were all burned up; and between twenty-five and thirty neat cottages, including the boarding and sleeping-houses, gave the camps a village-like appearance. The beautiful little creek, with its limpid stream fed by the Clayton Springs, that runs through the entire length of the grounds, has been straitened by ditching, and adds much to the beauty as well as convenience of the encampment. The tabernacle, which is one of the best I have seen, has been enlarged, and many other improvements are contemplated by the association. The encampment is in a valley, and, as the "mountains are round about Jerusalem," so the beautiful and romantic hills are round about the Sam Jones Camp Ground. As we have suffered both years from a cold wave that came upon us, the association seemed to conclude to have the meetings hereafter in the early part of August, which, I think, would be a change for the better. The ground intended for the encampment is ample for any number of cottages, and I was glad to find persons selecting lots to build on for next year. Except the Seashore, I know of no better place in Mississippi for a large encampment than at the Clayton Springs. The water, I think, is the best I ever drank. I detect no mineral qualities in it; but it has this peculiar quality: You may drink as much as you can hold without any inconvenience. I went there, from a most violent attack of pneumonia and inflammatory rheumatism, so weak that I had to be helped from the train to the J. A. B. Jones Cottage; but a free use of that pure water a few days made me feel like a new man. I was glad to see quite a number of visitors over last year from up and down the Valley railroad. All who live convenient to that road, and wish to enjoy a camp-meeting season, will soon learn the advantages it affords them.

J. G. JONES.

HAZLEHURST, MISS., Sept. 7, 1887.

PROVIDENCE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: There have been some thirty-odd conversions, twelve additions; and three protracted meetings held. Several families here moved from their river homes to Providence Camp Ground to escape malaria. So far all at the parsonage have escaped sickness. Self-denial not observed by all. Living on short rations, they inquired, Of what shall I deny myself? Twenty-six dollars were raised.

Some fields of cotton, near Rockport, have been destroyed by the army worm. Corn crop is quite good.

Prohibition prohibits in Copiah and Lawrence counties.

R. B. DOWNER, P. C.

TEXAS, MISS., Sept. 9, 1887.

SANDERSVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Our meeting closed last night. We have had a spiritual feast. Eight accessions, several conversions, and all the churches wonderfully blessed. Our meeting lasted seven days. Congregations large and attentive. Large numbers came forward on the last night for prayer. We feel thankful to Bros. McVoy, Maxey and Zachery for services rendered. Bro. McVoy remarked that our meeting here was the warmest he had attended for some time. Some received such blessings that they could but weep and praise God aloud. I thank God for such meetings! Yours truly,

L. J. JONES.

SEPTEMBER 3, 1887.

MOORINGSPORT, LA.

MR. EDITOR: The good Lord has been so gracious to us that we feel like telling it to everybody. When people are full of the love of God, they want everybody else to feel as they do, and to know how they feel. We have just closed a meeting, in which God has wonderfully blessed his people—in the conversion of sinners and in the sanctification of believers. This blessing called sanctification has impressed itself on us, and we have searched God's Word and our standards with carefulness and prayer. Being impressed with Bro. J. G. Jones' letter, which appeared in the ADVOCATE, of June 23, we went to God in earnest prayer for the blessing. On the night of August 9 God answered our prayer. Glory be to his name!

At our meeting just closed we were assisted, on Sunday, by Bro. W. F. Henderson, of Caddo, and a young brother from Marshall, Texas. We had a large congregation, and considerable interest. Monday, Bro. R. J. Harp arrived, and preached in the Spirit of the Master, and we had a good time. Bros. Harp and Henderson had to leave us on Monday—Bro. Harp on account of illness in his family, and Bro. Henderson to help elsewhere. Bro. F. J. Browning, of the East Texas Conference, arrived also Monday, and remained till Thursday evening. This brother throws great stress upon the blessing of sanctification. He pressed every believer who felt sin in his heart to go to the altar, and ask God to take it out and give them a clean heart. Many went, and twelve or fifteen of our most prominent people obtained the blessing.

Mt. Zion Church is where we held our meeting. We do not know the number of converts. We received six into the church. New family altars have been erected, and a great work done in the church. For this we praise the Lord, and take new courage in his work.

J. S. SANDERS.

RINGGOLD CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed our last protracted meeting on this circuit, and desire to let you and the brethren know what the Lord has done for us this year. The revival fire broke out with us on Saturday before the fifth Sabbath in May, and, blessed be God, it has been burning ever since. God has been with us in convicting, converting and sanctifying power at every service.

Our meeting at Andrew Chapel was the most wonderful meeting I was ever in. There were twenty-five to seventy-five penitents at the altar every night. Eternity alone will reveal the good done. We received nineteen persons into the church, some of whom are very promising young men. Our meeting at Andrew Chapel continued ten days.

We then went to Rocky Mount. Bro. Martin had the church well worked up when Bro. Miller and I got there. Bro. Miller lectured on temperance, at eleven o'clock. We called for penitents, and quite a number came. We received seven persons into the church at that service. The meeting continued until Friday night. Thirteen members were received at Rocky Mount. Glory be to God!

We began a meeting the next day at the Grand Bayou appointment. Bro. G. A. Mandeville was with me, filled with the Spirit and faith. He preached with great power; and God owned his efforts. We received ten members at Grand Bayou, making fifty-five on the circuit since May 1.

Bros. Davis and Martin are holding a meeting now over in the last survey. The Lord willing, I go to their assistance tonight.

Glory and honor and praises are given to God!

Many thanks to Bros. Mandeville, Miller and our local brethren for their earnest labors.

HARRY W. MAY.

ROCKY SPRING CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Our meeting at Hermanville was a glorious success—eternity only will reveal the true results. More than twenty professed to be converted; thirteen joined the church. We had a gracious revival in the church—a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. We thank God, and take courage.

H. D. HOWELL.

SEPTEMBER 6, 1887.

MARTIN CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: On Friday, August 26, we closed a very interesting and profitable revival at Russum station, which resulted in fourteen accessions, and a general revival of church members. Bro. N. B. Harmon, of Wesley Chapel, assisted, and did noble work for the Master.

Friday, September 2, we closed a meeting at old Cane Ridge. Here we received six members. The Lord poured out his blessings upon us. Everyone says it is the best meeting they have had here in years. Bros. W. B. and W. H. Lewis, I. W. Cooper, P. P. Bradford and E. B. O'Quin were in attendance, and gave their aid.

The self-denial collection from the circuit amounted to $17 5

Have received into the church both by certificate and on profession, up to this date, thirty-three, with five applications pending.

We lack only twelve dollars of having all our Conference collections in cash; and those twelve dollars, and more, too, are secured by good subscription.

We give God all the glory, and press forward, rejoicing.

Yours in Christ,

W. L. LINFIELD.

LEE, Miss., Sept. 6, 1887.

WESSON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: A former postal card from me must have lost its way, as its message has not appeared in the columns of the ADVOCATE.

The week of prayer and self-denial was observed by many of our members. Results: $57 30 from Wesson, and $24 9 from Beauregard. Total, $82 2 in cash, with more to follow.

A second series of meetings has been held at Wesson, resulting in twenty-three accessions and about tweny-five conversions. So far I have received into the church at Wesson seventy-six persons, and at Beauregard twenty-five, making one hundred and one in all, with several applications pending, and more to follow. During our last meeting we had three grand sermons from Bishop Galloway, one from Bro. Downer, and five from Bro. Watkins.

Sister Juliann Hayes, president Woman's Board of Missions, was with us the fourth Sunday in July, accompanied by the Spirit of the Master. New life was infused into the Woman's Missionary Society at Wesson; two life-members made; a number of active and honorary members gained, and a Juvenile Society formed.

T. L. MELLEN.

SEPTEMBER 8, 1887.

RALEIGH CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I have sent to Dr. Kelley $5 for self-denial—$2 from George Lightery and wife, and $1 from Sister Foster Abney, and $1 from James M. Pewett, and $1 from Mrs. Threcie Tanskingberger—all of Raleigh circuit.

We have been holding protracted meetings on the Raleigh circuit for some time; and we commence another on September 9. Our past labors have been crowned with success. We have received forty-two into the church up to date, and seventeen children have been baptized. The church has been revived, and backsliders reclaimed. There have been thirty or forty conversions, and the work goes on; and God be praised! We were assisted in these meetings by Revs. R. Burton, R. A. Sibley, F. J. Miller and E. Currie, the latter a Presbyterian. All did good work for the Lord. Pray for us.

J. B. EVANS.

KOSSUTH, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: On this, the Kossuth circuit, North Mississippi Conference, we have four churches. We have protracted services at each. Results: A gracious revival of the believers; sixty-two converted; forty-nine added to our church, with others to follow. We hereby return our thanks to our loved presiding elder, John H. Mitchell, of Corinth station; D. L. Cogdell, of Iuka station; M. W. Young, of Corinth circuit, and the local brethren, for ministering help; and give all the glory to God, from whom all blessings flow.

K. M. HARRISON, P. C.

EAST FELICIANA CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I have received thirty-eight new members up to date into our church on the East Feliciana circuit this year. The church has been greatly revived; souls are converted to God. Many of our new members will lead in prayer in public service. I expect to bring up a full report to Conference. Hallelujah! the Lord reigns!

The Church Alive.

Mr. Editor: In my last I gave you a reminiscence of the old Shilling Church, and how it declined. I now will give you a history of how the little hidden spring burst forth again, and how it is to-day flowing, pattering along like Tennyson's "Brook"—

"With here and there a foamy flake
Upon it as it travels,
With many a silvery water-break

Thank God always for the precious golden gravel that underlies all the little water-breaks of life!

The old church had died, though the house still stood upon the hill; but its large old chimney was down, its fallen benches also, while the bats and goats now rioted where the Word of Life had so often gone forth. Lively churches, but of another denomination, had grown up all around. The old families had given in their adhesion to these, feeling and knowing that religion and Jesus did not alone live in walls or sectaries. Everybody thought that Methodism there was dead—gone like the vanished comet long since lost. For long years the tramp of the horse that bore the circuit rider was still, and the Wesleyan banner was erected no more. The old warm, heart-inspiring songs of Wesley had died away.

About this time there came a girl into the neighborhood from Amite City. She had relatives there—all of whom (who were in any church) were Baptists. This woman was a real live-soul, inspiring Methodist. She loved that grand old church with a deep, enthusiastic love. She soon made many friends in the neighborhood, and drew the people to her by her kind heart and Christian integrity. She soon attracted attention, and it was thought she would unite with the large Baptist Church at Mt. Hermon; but she refused to sacrifice her household gods, or to desert the old faith taught her by her mother and grandmother. Through her influence she induced the preacher at Franklinton to send an appointment there, and she so won upon several young people in the neighborhood that a regular appointment was made at Mt. Hermon Schoolhouse, where she was teaching. By degrees Methodism began to take root in the hearts of the people, and at length a church was established there in that great Baptist neighborhood, not two arrow-flights from the other church.

At length a neat church building was erected, sashed, seated and made comfortable, and the little church kept on living, working and growing until it has reached first-class country proportions, and the old foothold of Methodism is again set down to stay.

The Baptist Church had seen proper to expel several members for permitting dances in a small way at their houses. One had let some young persons dance; another, perhaps, had permitted a candy pulling, and stated they could have danced had they wished, etc. They were turned out and went to the other church; but the great majority of members were first-class people who preferred the Methodist service. The four or five Adullamites who fled there, as did the people to David when he dwelt at Adullam, are all good, sober, steady men. Some of the wives of these still kindly remain and reign in Hebron, while their husbands abide in Jerusalem. Many families are thus divided on the two hills; but all live together in peace and quiet. The writer knows one man who, with one son and daughter, are in the Methodist Church there, while his wife and another son are in the other; but though thus divided, they live in great peace. The great point of difference is in the baptismal waters. They all love and worship the same blessed Jesus, all read the same Scripture, and all are bound towards the same goal; but the Lord often makes even the wrath of man to praise him, and two churches thus situated are apt to display more abundant zeal than they would if all were pulling together evenly.

The church there now is in charge of Rev. J. G. Sibley, a very able young minister, who is much endeared to the flock there. If the elders will permit him to remain another year, he will accomplish good results. The writer knows of no other Methodist Church east of Bogue Chitto river, and, as there is no work on the railroad worth naming between Amite City and Magnolia, Mt. Hermon is thus made a very important point. The church there numbers ninety-six members, and is in a condition to do much work if cared for as it now is.

The above is written to show what one weak, though determined woman can do when she is resolved to work for the Master. Permit me to close with two stanzas written by the writer, and published some years ago in the Advocate:

"Oh, woman's prayers and woman's tears!
What wonders in this vale of tears
Have they not wrought? Whole hemispheres
Have brightened 'neath their purity.

"Oh, may she, with her life-work done,
Find starry crown and garland won,
And round the Savior's shining throne
Greet all her household treasury."

Miss Gordon's Departure.

Mr. Editor: On Sunday evening, the fourth instant, there occurred here in our church, in Port Gibson, an incident of such an interesting character that it deserves mention in the Advocate. It was the occasion of the departure from our midst of Miss Addie Gordon for China, to engage there in missionary work under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Port Gibson is Miss Gordon's home. Here she has grown up from childhood: here she was graduated from Port Gibson Female College; here she gave her heart to God, and became a member of the church, and here on our church register her name will still remain. Naturally, great interest was felt by all in the community when it became known that she had resolved to devote herself to mission work. A special service was appointed for the Sunday evening preceding her departure, at which, it was announced, she would make some remarks. Dr. Marshall also, by invitation, came down from Vicksburg and took part in the service.

Such an event could not fail to attract a large crowd, for all were eager to hear from Miss Gordon's own lips the reasons that had induced her to make the evangelization of the heathen her life-work, and all desired to do honor to this noble and devoted young lady. After appropriate services Miss Gordon talked for, perhaps, a half-hour in such a way as to charm all who heard her. The modesty and grace of the true woman were displayed in everything that she said. All was unstudied, and yet every word was in its place. It was the genuine expression of real conviction, and, therefore, was the truest eloquence. All that was said was easy, natural and earnest, free from self-consciousness or display. She repudiated the idea that she was making a great sacrifice in engaging in missionary work. Many of her friends had thought that: but now they felt that she was right, and had chosen wisely. She manifested zeal and enthusiasm in her chosen work; but these were united with the soundest judgment. As a fitting conclusion, she sang in a clear, sweet voice a touching hymn of farewell, and before the beautiful strains had ceased tears were flowing from many eyes. Dr. Marshall appreciated the thrilling interest of the occasion, and followed in just such words as ought to have been said. His remarks culminated in an eloquent and tender address to our brave and unselfish young missionary.

The whole service was impressive and delightful. No one could fail to be elevated by the sublime spectacle of the consecration of a noble young life to the service of the Master. The scene will not be forgotten. On going away one after another said, "I never was so near heaven in all my life before." The meeting was a benediction to all who were there. I am sure that the cause of missions will henceforth hold a higher place in the estimation of the great number who were present.

We sorrow to lose Miss Gordon from our midst; but we rejoice that this church has been so signally honored in having her as its representative in the mission field. E. H. MOUNGER.

A Remedy in Kidney Affection.

"My kidneys were so affected I have been compelled to get up as much as ten times in one night. I had pains in my side, back and left shoulder, and when down could hardly rise. I was unable to bend my body without great pain. I tried Simmons Liver Regulator and my condition has improved so much that I hardly ever feel any of my old trouble."

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Editor: The Grenada Collegiate Institute has opened well, having more boarders now than at any time last year. Others will be coming in all the while to the first of October. This is one of our best schools, centrally located, accessible to all parts of our Conference, and under the wise management of President Newell maintains a steady and healthy growth. Our curriculum is broad, and our teachers the best that can be procured. Our discipline is very firm, and our work thorough. The health is almost unparalleled, there having been no case of severe illness in the institute for five years. Its Christian influence is strong and controlling (and let me say that we appreciate that there is no danger of making our school too religious). Special attention is given to the preservation of health. Now, besides all this, we have the best single piece of school property in the Southwest—a property worth no less than fifty thousand dollars (and this almost a gift by the generous people of Grenada). This is not a district school, but a Conference college, and every Methodist in North Mississippi Conference is equally obligated to sustain it. Do you ask how this is? Then I answer: This is true for the reason that we have accepted the property under the conditions it was tendered us (and we do now hold an unconditional deed) and this is what I call assuming the obligations of the property. Now, we are using the property, and have not met the obligations we are under. But what are the conditions by which the church gets possession of this very valuable property? Simply that we pay the nominal sum of four thousand dollars and establish a school. The school is established and more than self-sustaining, and now the only question is, Will we pay the amount of money required? I believe we will. We can not afford to do less, and this much we ought to do at once.

Four thousand dollars for over thirty thousand Methodists—oh, how easy! But some ask, What becomes of the money the school makes? Well, the Board of Trustees have wisely ordered that it should go to the improvement of the property. The four thousand belong to us, and not to the school. When we shall have paid that, we may inquire after the school's excess. Now, let me ask you, in the name of Christian education, to think on these facts and obligations.

Now, I must not fail to say that many of the good and generous people of North Mississippi have already contributed liberally—some by cash and some by note—which provides for a part of the above-mentioned debt, and for which we are thankful, and do highly appreciate. I am making a strong effort to liquidate the debt by the ensuing Annual Conference, and, with the prospect before us, no doubt we will reach this very desirable end. I hope to have (and believe I will) the sympathy and hearty co-operation of all the good people of North Mississippi Conference. We have upon us the same obligation of other Conferences to make in our own bounds a first-class school, and I believe we have as much pride. Let us feel the obligations, and be second to none.

From Hallo, La.

Mr. Editor: It has been said that "lies travel fast:" but of late truth seems to fly on the wings of the wind, or flash athwart the horizon of the church's sky with electrical rapidity. And truth will win the race notwithstanding the cry of the doubters. Prohibition does prohibit, and it is rallying its forces all along the line; and the line is long enough to circle this earth. Already, to its enemies, it is "terrible as an army with banners:" but to the white-ribbon host it is "beautiful as Tirzah, and as comely as Jerusalem." More than half the work for the "kingdom come" will be accomplished when some son of Rechab shall lay the giant, Alcohol, low with a pebble from the brook, "Prohibition."

Revivals do revive, and the watchword of the "workers of the Lord" is, "On to victory!" And the rallying cry is, "Down with the strongholds of the arch-enemy of souls!" Our revivals revive yet. Dr. West, our presiding elder, was sick and could not be with us. Bro. Tucker had no help until the last day, when Bro. Ellis, of Covington circuit, arrived, and preached twice with much unction. There were but two accessions to the church, but the membership was waked up and set to work. Sister Tucker, our pastor's wife, arrived after the meeting closed, and the Sunday following she, with a few others, started a ladies' and children's prayer meeting. We hope to keep it alive. One little girl, only nine years old, prayed yesterday at the meeting.

Bro. Tucker went from this meeting to one begun at Covington, to assist Bro. Ellis. We heard that a gracious work of grace was going on there; and the meeting has not yet closed that we know of.

"Hark! ten thousand harps and voices Sound the note of praise above."

Those blessed "harps and voices" are never mute. Every time an earnest prayer goes up to the throne of God, a new note may be heard; every time a soul is born, a grand chorus reverberates across the dome of the New Jerusalem, and the echo comes back to the Lord's agents, saying: "Work on, work on."

"Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Does his successive journeys run."

And the cry of the pessimist is lost in the "joyful sound of gospel grace."

The day our meeting closed Mr. J. E. Smith, of Covington, who had been with his wife on a visit to Maryland, arrived, and called to see us, having a few moments to wait for the P. and F. train. Seeing our church was not yet painted, he gave me $5 for that purpose. God bless the dear old man!

Our week of self-denial sent up a mite to the Lord's treasury.

Mrs. L. Crary Sadler.

Why do men and women professing godliness sometimes seek amusement in the theatre, the dancing hall, on the race-course, or at the card table? Pascal says: "If man were happy, he would be so much the more so as he were less diverted, like the saints and God." If Pascal speaks the truth, then those who seek the above-named amusements are not happy, because they are not really saints. Their godliness is more a name than a reality.—Zion's Herald.

Briefs.

It is easy to see where the relief of the workingmen is to be sought. They should save their earnings and give up their grog. Read this:

It is said that the laboringmen of the United States pay $800,000,000 a year for liquor, and that the entire banking capital of the country is $717,000,000. It follows that if the laboringmen would stop drinking intoxicating liquors for one year, and save the money which they annually pay for them, they would accumulate enough in that one year to buy out all the banks in the country, with $83,000,000 over to start a fund to buy up all the gold and silver mines in the country the next year. It is easy to see how liquor monopolists become so wealthy: and poor men make them so.—Western Christian Advocate.

Prof. E. P. Thwing, M. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., says, in an article in the September Homiletic:

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher said that the articulation of a single monosyllable by the president of Amherst College came to him in youth like a bullet. "It has remained in memory ever since. It gave an impulse to my whole life and affected my course and labor as a reformer. It was the effect of but a single word." Use, if you must, sesquipedalian words, "their voluminous coil intertangling like huge anacondas." The necessity of scientific discussion may require it, as when a surgeon treats Dysmorphosteopalinklastes. But such appalling occasions are rare.

An Englishman tabulates the percentage of Saxon and cognate words and those of Greek and Latin in the discourses of Beecher, Storrs and Talmage. Dr. Storrs uses 69 per cent. Saxon to 31 Greek and Latin; Mr. Beecher 91:9, Dr. Talmage 91:9. In the case of Canon Farrar the ratio is 84:12 and of Spurgeon, 87:13. These figures are worth thinking about in estimating popular success.

The speaker should recognize and obey the swift sympathy which connects sight and speech, vision and voice. In other words, his elocution will be unconsciously affected by a calm inspection of his audience as he stands before them before he speaks in prayer or sermon. In my early ministry, just as I was about to offer the invocation, one Lord's day morning, an aged saint, about ninety years old, came tottering up the aisle to her seat. Her loneliness, the lack of religious sympathy she suffered from at home, her warm love for the sanctuary and her pastor, and the thought of her nearness to the upper courts and the King in his beauty came over me like a sudden tidal wave. There were tears in my eyes and in my voice, too, when the silence of the sanctuary was broken by the opening prayer.

The power of the pause deserves attention. Merely as a vocal rest it is helpful. If it be only for two seconds, long enough to swallow the watery alkaline secretion that lubricates the parts, huskiness is avoided. This is better than to form the habit of sipping water. But the interspacing pause aids in the growth of self-possession. When an impressive word is spoken, a pause of one second is, occasionally, emphatic. Too oft repeated, it may give the character of hesitation, or theatric mannerism. Good sense will direct. The aid to the hearer is too obvious to need notice. We are only considering the comfort of the speaker. As George MacDonald has beautifully said: "A bird's song is made up of a warble and a silence; and the silence is a part of the song." It is a suggestive thought for hurried and worried speakers.

"Gale, Oberlin, Amherst and Auburn have added Inductive Bible studies to their course." This is what we have been trying to persuade our church schools to do. Are we trying to give Christian education with the Bible left out of the course?

A Rich Church.

The vulgar idea of a rich church has in it, as essential to it, the possession of a membership rich in property, high in social position, and potent in worldly influence. Its stewards, and other leading members, must reside in costly houses, manage large business enterprises, and, "clad in purple and fine linen," "fare sumptuously every day." Solidity somehow attaches to a congregation of railroad magnates, commercial princes, successful lawyers, eminent physicians, professors and other celebrities, with possibly a millionaire or two. The people say of such: "That is a rich church." An imposing and expensive temple of worship, with an outside look of wealth, and an inside air of elegance in pulpit and pew, and from echoless floor to lofty ceiling every appointment perfectly adapted to the refined tastes of the most select and fashionable; the sacred desk filled by an eminent divine of high salary and resonant periods; the choir calculated to please the most fastidious and exacting critic by its artistic rendering of operatic music—all these, and more of pretension and folly, go to make up, in the view of the many, a rich church. Well, when the Son of God, through John, said to one of the seven churches: "But thou art rich," surely He had no reference to a church whose people were "all for style." To get at his meaning we have only to consider his teachings and the spirit of his gospel.

What, then, in the view of the Lord Jesus, constitutes a rich church? "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." It is easy to see that the really rich church is the spiritual church, whose members are personally pious. The character of a church is no more and no less than that of the individuals composing it. That a church may be rich in spirituality, the piety of its membership must be actual and thorough. The church-veneering of form and ceremony can not make a man truly spiritual. He is a Jew that is one inwardly and circumcised in the heart. That is a rich church whose members are more than book members, in that they have not only been duly registered, but have been regenerated and made God's spiritual children, having put off the old man of sin and put on Christ. Having been born of the Spirit, they have the testimony—the abiding testimony—of their sonship and heirship of God. "Perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord," they are daily growing in grace; and, going on to perfection, they live consecrated lives and are wholly God's in heart and practice. A church composed of persons who are soundly converted, and who live godly lives, is a spiritual church, and, hence, a rich church. That is a rich church which has divine unction in its services. The prayer and class meetings can not be dry and sparsely attended in a church rich after the divine sort. The true people of God will not neglect the assembling of themselves together for spiritual worship, nor will they be dumb children, but "swift witnesses" for him who has said: "Ye are my witnesses." The preaching of the Word in a genuinely rich church, filled, as it necessarily will be, with the warm atmosphere of believing prayer, can not be otherwise than in the power and demonstration of the Spirit. The pastor, himself a man of God, will surely be fired of the Holy Ghost, and prevail with God and man whenever he stands to prophesy before such a people. A rich church is one that has a teaching ministry. Oh, what a waste of God-given opportunities there is right along on this line of pulpit ministration! How much is there of vapid theorizing, wise utterance and soaring eloquence; and devoid is it all of the life of the Spirit. How much of attitudinizing and striking for effect, and how much forgetfulness of the deathless souls in the pews! Says Paul: "Whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom; that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." This warning, teaching, Pauline style of preaching is a sore need of our day. There should be more of the "manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God." A rich church is pervaded by a spirit of love. As a family of God, and having his love shed abroad in their every heart, there is constantly flowing, unhindered, throughout the membership the full stream of Christian love. A church made up of those who are bound together by the pure love of Jesus, and whose hearts are knit each to other by unfeigned mutual affection, is indeed a rich church. The members of it, instead of stirring to jealousies and strife, are found ever "provoking one another to love and good works."

The rich church is distinguished for its universal activities. Not only does it keep in operation the regular internal church work, but it has old and young actively engaged in various benevolent and Christian enterprises in the outside community. Having a heart, hand and purse for Christian work the world over, it is thoroughly missionary; and, while engaged in temperance and various charitable works among the distressed and degraded at home, it prays for "all men," and sends forth its money and its men and women to the "regions beyond," where teeming millions are still in utter darkness. In many ways, and all the time, the church rich after the divine idea is found "spending and being spent" for the glory of God in the saving of souls. May the Lord multiply the numbers of those churches who have the true riches in the personal piety of their members, the divine unction of their services, the teaching power of their ministers, the controlling spirit of love, and their active zeal for God and souls!

From Georgia.

MR. EDITOR: The Georgians are regenerating their lands with fertilizers and improved implements and methods of cultivation. Years ago they saw that they must either enrich their lands or leave them. First, Guano — bird-droppings from the Lobos Islands—was brought over in ships and sold to the planters; then fertilizers were manufactured at great expense by wealthy companies; now almost every neighborhood, and sometimes individuals, compound the elements which the soil lacks, and feed the exhausted lands till they produce abundant crops. Once men plowed up and down hill; afterward they adopted hill-side ditches; now they run every row as nearly on a perfect level as possible, making terraces if the hills are very steep. Every middle, too, must be flat when the cultivation is complete, so that there are no deep furrows to collect water and start washes. How unwise and wasteful the old methods seem to a farmer of the present day! Millions of dollars' worth of fertilizers is used, and the crops are immensely increased.

Grape culture is getting to be a profitable industry in some parts of the State. The largest and handsomest vineyards are near Griffin. Most of them are owned by Germans, who are Good Templars, and neither make, buy, sell, drink nor give away any intoxicants. Think of a single vine, eight or ten feet high, bearing fifty or one hundred pounds of grapes, worth from five to twenty-five cents per pound! I heard of bunches of grapes raised near Greenville, Ala., that weighed five or six pounds each. Delaware grapes were selling in Atlanta at twenty-five cents per pound when I passed through the city in August. The grape crop rarely ever fails. No fruit is more wholesome. Canaan of old had no greater attraction for the people of God than the grapes it produced. I see no reason why, in the good time coming, all the world should not eat grapes at their meals three times a day. Only the best hotels furnish them at meals now. Mankind are beginning to learn the vast and varied capacities of the earth for producing all things needful for health and pleasure. From the earth God fills our hearts with food and gladness. The coming man will live less on hog meat and more on wholesome fruit.

All Georgians are taking more or less of lively interest in the State Fair to be held at Macon, and the Piedmont Exposition soon to be displayed at Atlanta. Considerable rivalry exists between the two cities. Ex-President Davis is expected to attend the Fair at Macon, and President Cleveland the Exposition at Atlanta. The cities and the country people are ever alive to their temporal interests.

Meantime, the church still stands and grows. Not many remarkable revivals are reported, yet Christianity lives and advances. A few weeks since, I attended a quarterly meeting at Standing Rock Church, in Coweta county. Cotton was growing less than a year ago on the spot where the church now stands. The community had been under Universalist influence for a half-century or more. Late in last year they determined to have a bush-arbor meeting under Methodist auspices. The result is a commodious church with one hundred members, a good Sunday-school, well attended, regular preaching, prayer meetings, and other means of grace.

On Saturday of quarterly meeting there were two hundred and fifty persons present; dinner was provided for all, and more than one hundred and fifty remained to the close of the Quarterly Conference.

Under the Sixteenth Question, as the presiding elder, Rev. H. H. Parks, continued to call on member after member of the Conference for his report, I began to wonder if all twenty-five of them were local preachers. I soon found, however, that he was holding a Quarterly Conference class meeting. If the brethren, who either did or did not (and most of them did) read their Bibles, pray in their families, enjoy religion, take the church paper, and strive to fulfill the duties of their offices, are not the better for the questioning so kindly administered, they ought to be.

This church is within four miles of two Methodist Churches in small towns. But the country people will not attend city churches. They desire churches of their own, and they must have them. So, too, people living in the suburbs of large towns must be provided with churches to suit their tastes and convenience.

W. L. C. H.

According to the following, giving one's tenth is not enough in the case of the rich. If the 1,000,000 Southern Methodists would give just one-tenth, every one of them, we would realize money enough to put into execution the grandest plans for the saving of the race. Read this, from Pittsburgh Advocate:

One who believes that every dollar belongs to God, and is to be used for him, will not imagine that he has discharged all obligations by giving a tenth to the Lord. There are multitudes in the land who, after giving one-tenth of their increase, might fare sumptuously every day, gratify every whim, and live with the most lavish expenditures. Would that fulfill the law of Christ, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me"?

City Mission.

The bi-monthly meeting of this live organization was held Tuesday night, at Carondelet Street Church. The attendance was good, and much interest manifested. The reports of the chairmen of committees showed that a large amount of work has been done by the Mission during the hot months. Multitudes of people have heard the gospel at the out-door services, and a number of mission schools have been organized, and are in successful operation. Hundreds of children, heretofore unreached, are now being taught the truths of Scripture. An act of incorporation, thoroughly prepared by Rev. F. S. Parker, was adopted, and also a resolution, looking to the immediate taking of the proper legal steps to that end. A city missionary, at a living salary, was provided for, and Bishop Key will be asked to appoint the best man he can find in the Louisiana Conference to fill the position. The outlook on the mission line is very encouraging for New Orleans Methodism. Our pastors should not rest until they have all their membership enrolled in the City Mission. One dollar per year is all it costs.

It was with deep regret that the Mission accepted the resignation of their secretary, Rev. F. S. Parker, who will shortly leave for California. On motion of Dr. J. B. Walker, seconded by Dr. C. F. Evans, it was carried:

That this society tender to Bro. Parker our cordial thanks for his diligence, promptness and efficiency in the secretary's office; secondly, That our beloved brother has our heartiest good wishes for his happiness and usefulness; and, thirdly, That we commend him to the esteem and love of the people of his new field of labor.

Church Entertainments.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate has the following hearty endorsement of a sermon preached by our Carondelet Street pastor:

Rev. B. Carradine, pastor Carondelet Street Methodist Church, New Orleans, preached a sermon in his church against church entertainments. The sermon lies before us, published by the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE Print. Fifteen objections are made to church entertainments. Among the objections are these: That there is no warrant or example for them in the Scripture; that the name and practice is a misconception of the mission of the church; that it neutralizes and defeats God's plans and labors in behalf of the spiritual life of his people; that it creates the impression on the world that the great aim and struggle of the church is for money; that it is an open humiliation of Jesus Christ by placing his cause as a mendicant at the feet of the world; that they produce the most unhappy differences and dissensions in the congregation; the educational tendencies are evil; it entails spiritual loss on the church by destroying the lines and distinction which God has drawn between the church and the world. Bro. Carradine discusses these and other propositions, and exposes this insidious and destructive evil. We do deplore the existence of this evil. We are surprised that so few of our brethren see its pernicious effects. We are pained that so many of them allow it to exist without protest. It is worldly, essentially so, and in spirit and letter in direct antagonism to the church of God, violates its constitution, subverts its principles. Bro. Carradine comes to this godly conclusion: "That from the beginning to the end, from top to bottom; that horizontally, perpendicularly and diagonally; that frontwise, sidewise, edgewise, or anywise; no matter how it comes; that whether taken in small portions or great doses; whether practiced on a limited or extensive scale; that still in principle, spirit and practice, it remains an evil, and as such I believe that it never has had the divine smile and blessing, and what is more, never will have." To all of which we say, Amen and amen.

It got into the papers that Gov. Hill, of New York, would give $25 to the parents of every pair of colored twins born in 1887, and in one day ninety-three pairs were reported from Maryland and Virginia alone.

Notes.

One of the grandest displays ever made in America was that of the Centennial of the Constitution, in Philadelphia, last week.

The annual amount spent in Great Britain for liquor if put into sovereigns, and set in line, would reach 2,000 miles.

The number of American visitors in England this season has been down at 90,000, and they have left among our English cousins the small little sum of $4,000,000.

We rejoice in the information we have of the auspicious opening of the popular Institution—the Huntsville Female College. The president, Rev. A. B. Jones, D. D., LL.D., writes: "School opened better than ever before in its history."

We note that Bros. M. B. Chapman and W. B. Palmore have returned from their Eastern journeying. Their interesting, breezy letters to St. Louis Advocate have been greatly enjoyed by the many readers of that excellent paper.

In another week all of our vacationing, seaside-resting pastors will be at home and at work. Invigorated in body, and the fish eaten by them gone to help the brain, their people may justly expect of them solid sermons and a vast amount of pastoral work.

From the report of the late meeting of the American Bible Society we learn that the receipts in August were $57,479 81, and the issues from the Bible House during that month were 61,683 volumes, they having issued since April 1, 437,432 volumes.

We visited Gouldsboro on Sunday and found that, under the pastorate of Bro. Earle and superintendency of Bro. A. Daniels, Esq., a flourishing Sunday-school is in progress at that point. Bro. Earle has large audiences to greet him there. Bro. Daniels has a house for the Sunday-school, and has a lot for a church. It is well situated in the square bounded by Madison, Perry, Franklin and Copernicus streets.

The New York Sun, of September 4, has this:

Assemblyman Charles Smith is about to open the most gorgeous drinking saloon in Essex street. The floor is inlaid with silver dollars which are cemented in the marble floor in holes bored in alternate slabs—heads and tails up alternately. The handles of the beer pumps are mounted with silver dollars. The place is named "The Silver Dollar," and the sign bears a huge counterfeit of obverse and reverse of that much-coined coin. The Assemblyman has chosen a location near the police court with a keen eye to the place where the biggest crowd is always to be seen in Essex street. There are to be seen in the saloon in all about 700 silver dollars.

To what pains do the devil's agents go to lure to ruin the souls of men! The laws of the land protect Charley Smith and all the saloon tribe in their traffic, and the men and women who would by law shut up such man-traps appeal in vain to existing parties, and are denounced by politicians as "disturbers and fanatics." Thank God, the skies are brighter, and the whole matter will yet be set right by the sovereign people!

Few Fragments.

Whether the saloon be open or closed does not individually affect me. But it is a question of life or death to many of my weak friends. For my friends' sake, close the saloon!

Intemperance is not a question of nationality. The Yankee drunk with Kentucky whisky, and the cowboy drunk with California wine, are no less beastly than the Irishman drunk with Holland gin, and the German drunk with lager beer.

"Commerce would be paralyzed if the manufacture and interchange of intoxicants would be discontinued," some one facetiously remarked. Yes, the dividends of rich stockholders of incorporated distilleries and breweries would cease; but the bitter tears of many wives and mothers would also cease flowing. Dividends or tears—which?

Political preachers, because they advocate temperance, and even prohibition; knowing the terror of the Lord, we persuade men to comply with the conditions of reconciliation; knowing that drunkards will be excluded from heaven, we persuade them not to drink, and at the same time persuade our legislators by proper enactment to remove the pitfalls besetting the pathway of the weak.

Certainly, there are many other vices besides intemperance which ministers of the gospel must combat, such as dishonesty, by conveniently failing, making our friends pay for our family's extravagance; Sabbath desecration, vulgarity, gambling; but who will say, that they are not persistently inveighed against? The vender of lottery tickets is as despicable a character as the vender of whisky and beer.

The Millersburg, Ky., Female College has had a very auspicious opening. We are informed that the boarding department is nearly full, and that in every way the outlook is encouraging. We make note of the fact that Rev. Sam Jones has both a daughter and a niece at Millersburg.

We learn by postal from Mansfield, La., dated September 15, that "Mrs. Kitty Green Grace, wife of the president of Mansfield Female College, died yesterday, after a lingering illness, in the assured hope of everlasting life." Dr. Grace will have the sympathy and prayers of his brethren throughout the connection.

Rev. John Pipes, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, writes us from his home in St. Louis, Mo., that he expects to spend the winter in Louisiana and will be present at the Conference in Shreveport, next January. The Louisiana Conference could hardly hold a session without Bro. Pipes, and he will be cordially welcomed by his brethren.

The Independent has analyzed it and presented it in this way: Argument No. 1. Assassination, illustrated in the cases of Haddock, of Iowa; Gambrell, of Mississippi, and Northrop, of Ohio. No. 2. Murderous assault, illustrated in the case of Duncan, of Tennessee. No. 3. Suppression of speech, illustrated in San Antonio, Texas, where a meeting on a public square was interrupted by rotten eggs and other missiles from the hands of saloonists. No. 4. Mob violence, illustrated in Amesbury, Mass., where the saloonists organized a mob and took possession of the streets. No. 5. Intimidation, illustrated in Wichita, Kan., where the saloonists published a card, threatening death to the one who made the first complaint against the liquor dealers of the town.

Take them in the ascending order: Intimidation, mob violence, suppression of speech, murderous assault, assassination. The utter wickedness of this whole business is clearly seen in the arguments used to uphold it.

We clip this from the Western North Carolina Baptist:

Among the visitors present at our services in Hot Springs Church, last Sunday, were Justice Campbell, of the Supreme Court of Mississippi, and wife, cultivated Baptists, and Dr. U. W. Carter, editor of the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of New Orleans. We had afterward pleasant social interviews with these distinguished strangers. Editor Carter and ourself, as fellow-craftsmen of the quill, we trust will see more of each other after this in the columns of our respective papers.

Rev. John Hannon, D. D.

In the best of spirits, Dr. Hannon gives important information to the Richmond Advocate. We do not wonder at his exhilaration. This building of a $3000 parsonage "for an old bachelor" is very suggestive. Read this:

The late "overflow" of the River of Life in our big revival leaves the soil of the "Memorial" rich, fertile. Good, full, ripe ears everywhere visible. "A leave of absence to the pastor as long as he deemed necessary." Then, during the four weeks' absence of the pastor, the week of prayer and self-denial just "kept itself." Without a suggestion from the pastor, the brethren determined upon meetings every night. Bro. Acree, Bro. Peterson and Bro. Cheatham gave them a night each. They managed the others themselves. The collection will reach $250. Amen! amen! Then not satisfied with this, they invest their superabundance of spiritual life that can't find escape through class meetings and weeks of prayer—in a $3,000 parsonage, and all of this for an old bachelor parson away from home! Amen! Thank God for the Memorial Church. "May her tribe increase!" Amen!

ROYAL GIRLS. By M. E. W. Sherwood. Illustrated. Boston: D. Lothrop Company. Price, $1 25.

One thing readers will learn from this volume by Mrs. Sherwood, and that is, that girls who happen to be born princesses are very much like those who are born in ordinary households, and that human nature is pretty much the same in a palace as it is in an American farm-house. But they will learn, too, that in most royal families the daughters are subjected to a course of discipline and training more severe and exacting than ever fell to the lot of an American girl. They are obliged to study early and late; they must have not only a thorough knowledge of the languages, of music and of court etiquette, but also of the politics of their own and other governments; they must know something of statecraft and of diplomacy, for no princess knows what station she may be some time called on to fill. No American girl need envy them, says Mrs. Sherwood. "They are in chains, all of them. They must be careful what they say, do, think even. With royal girls, what interrupted destinies, what cruel disappointments, what unhappy marriages, what a contrast between the desire and fulfillment do we constantly see." There are certain things in which Mrs. Sherwood thinks they might serve as models to American girls, with whom she frequently compares them. The volume contains sketches of the royal girls of Italy, of Spain, of Denmark, of Russia, of England and of Germany, and two chapters are devoted to "Carmen Sylva," the Queen of Roumania and the Empress of Austria. The author describes very entertainingly the home-life of some of these girls, and the rules of etiquette to which they are obliged to conform. The volume is well illustrated with portraits.

TRUE STORIES OF AMERICAN WARS. From records and famous traditions. Illustrated. Boston: D. Lothrop Company. Price, $1 25.

The twelve capital stories that make up this volume will furnish a rich feast for patriotic and venture-loving boys and girls. The statement upon the title-page that they were drawn from old records and family traditions is literally true; each story has its appropriate basis of fact, and some of them are very slightly embellished indeed. In every family of the older States there are legends of the old Indian wars which have never been written; and records of suffering and privation, of deeds of daring and heroism, which to-day seem almost incredible. And fresher and more vivid than these are the tales of the Revolution, the battles, skirmishes and marches in which our ancestors participated, comparatively few of which have been told outside the family circle or the localities where they occurred. There is not a town along the shores of Connecticut and Massachusetts but has its traditions, and something more than traditions, of deeds that took place during the later war of 1812, as stirring, perhaps, as any of those of older times. From this great mass of material the authors represented in the volume have drawn the narratives they have here set down. Among them is the story of the capture of the British General Prescott, in command at Newport, by a picked party of Americans under Colonel Barton, one of the most daring exploits of the Revolution. Another is the narrative of the raid of the Indians upon Royalton, Vt., in 1780, when the village was burned and several of the inhabitants murdered. Other sketches are entitled, "A Revolutionary Purucoat," "The First Blow for American Liberty," "Joel Jackson's Smack," etc. Most of the stories are illustrated.

"A ROMANCE OF PROVIDENCE." W. B. Ketcham, publisher, 71 Bible House, N. Y. Price, $1 25.

This is a very interesting work that has just appeared. It is a history of the Church of the Strangers, of New York, of which the Rev. C. F. Deems, D. D., LL.D., is pastor. It contains a finely executed portrait of Dr. Deems, and has other illustrations.

That Church of the Strangers was no doubt an outgrowth of the peculiar situation in which Southern people in New York found themselves immediately after the war.

The book shows how people from all sections, of all creeds and nationalities, were gathered about a thoroughly live and consecrated man of God, and a special providential work successfully carried on for years.

We have received from George F. Wharton & Bro., No. 5 Carondelet street, the following:

To Our Agents.

As an inducement to our agents for the securing of new subscribers from this date, we make the following offer:

For eight new subscribers, with cash in full, one set of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary—four volumes—bound in half Morocco; or for six new subscribers the full set bound in extra fine English cloth, sprinkled edge.

Here is an opportunity to secure one of the best Commentaries ever published. Read the following testimonials:

Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

This Commentary has received the hearty commendation of a large number of the leading publishers, biblical scholars, preachers and Sunday-school workers of the country. It is thorough, modern, compact, condensed and cheap. Its immense popularity is deserved. It is specially adapted to the family. "It is the cream of the Commentaries collected by three eminent scholars." Nowhere have we seen more valuable matter packed in the same space—four large 12mo. volumes. Price, $8.00.

T. O. Summers, D. D., LL.D., late Dean of Theological Department of Vanderbilt University, Professor of Systematic Theology; and Book Editor of M. E. Church, South.

I have the Commentary and make good use of it. It is plain, evangelical, and is a cheap and good Commentary. The notes indicate sound learning and extensive research. We endorse their exegesis in general as scholarly, sound and edifying.

J. M. Shipp, D. D., late Professor of Exegetical Theology, Vanderbilt University.

I take pleasure in saying that the Commentary of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown is a valuable, critical practical, and explanatory exposition of the Old and New Testaments, and is regularly recommended by me to my classes in Exegetical Theology.

T. F. Dodd, D. D., Professor of Hebrew, Ecclesiastical History and English Literature, Vanderbilt University.

I consider the Commentary an excellent work. Of all the complete Commentaries on the Bible I prefer this for general use. It is the one to which I resort most frequently. Considering the brevity, the perspicuity, and sound judgment displayed in its elucidation of the Sacred Text, I would advise the reader to provide himself with this in preference to all others.

Bishop J. C. Granbery.

The comments are brief, clear, pointed, thinking, practical and judicious. Few and apt words are chosen to explain the Scriptures. While they are the fruits of scholarly research and criticism, they are so plain as to be easily understood by any reader of average intellect.

Andrew A. Lipscomb, D. D., LL.D., Emeritus Professor, Vanderbilt University.

I have examined this Commentary sufficiently to express my very decided conviction of its eminent merits. It displays just the kind and degree of biblical scholarship that we need in these times, and accordingly is admirably suited to the large and growing class of Scripture students. The clear statement of facts and rules, the vigorous conciseness, the comprehensive scope of the work, commend it to the confidence and appreciation of all who seek wisdom, strength and comfort in the Holy Bible. It consults the wants of the intellect and heart: it meets these wants, and does this so thoughtfully, so compactly, and so spiritually, that I am glad of an opportunity to call public attention to its rare excellence. It is excellent, very excellent.

B. M. Palmer, D. D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La.

It may be considered as having established its claim to be recognized as among the standard Commentaries upon the Bible.

The express charges are not included in the above offer, and it must be understood that cash accompanies all orders. Review of the Modern Fathers.

A Consideration of the Theories of Modern Methodist Writers, and of the Historic and Scriptural Doctrines of the Methodists.

BY REV. JNO. M. CROW, A. M.,
Louisville Conference.

Dr. Fitzgerald says: "This Review of the Modern Fathers is clearly the product of a mind that has wrestled manfully with the questions discussed. He has something to say, and says it in his own way. The glow of earnestness gilds and warms every page. He gives a reason for all his positions, and dogmalizes delightfully. He criticises his seniors modestly and respectfully. Transparent love of truth characterizes the book. He fights in the open field and uses the weapons of honorable warfare."

The author prints in cheap form for the more general circulation. 143 pages. Price, only 25 cts.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the one certain remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and admirers. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

VERMIFUGE

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy; therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge. It is free from all poisonous drugs, and may be given with perfect safety to the most delicate infant. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy; therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. TORNEY—MISS MARY EMMA TORNEY was born in New Orleans, December 20, 1857, and died at the Seashore Camp Ground, August 24, 1887. She joined the Carondelet Street Church under the ministry of Dr. W. V. Tudor, and found God very much like Lydia, whose heart opened to receive the grace and salvation of the Son of God. Very much like her conversion was her religion—calm, but not the less deep and thorough. Some years ago she took an increased interest in church work, and for that period of time led the singing in class and prayer meeting. She was gifted with a most powerful voice, and she consecrated her gift to the Giver. She was not the only one benefited; but hundreds as well, who listened and were gladdened and strengthened. At this time she was the picture of health and strength. But suddenly almost without a warning disease settled upon her and the fine voice for months was laid low. What a sharp, grievous trial was here! From possessing the strongest voice in the congregation she was reduced to a whisper. But the grace of God was sufficient. She felt his presence and love through it all, and was upheld. All through her sickness, as her pastor, the writer discovered that the everlasting arms were about her. She knew in whom she believed. She was removed in the present summer to the Seashore Camp Ground. Here the last weeks of her life were spent in her beautiful, sacred retreat, surrounded by the people of God and daily hearing from her lips the prayers and songs of Zion. It was a fitting place in which to die, a proper time to go. And on the very day preceding her intended return to the city, God spoke the word of release, and carried her to his own city. From the songs of earth she went up to the songs of heaven; from worship below to the perfect worship above. May God in his own good time bring us all to that heavenly land! PASTOR.

BRIDGER—The ethereal sky has been darkened by the sombre cloud that so suddenly overshadowed the happy home of our friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Bridger, of Brandywine Springs, Miss. The angel of death, descending, grasped within his cold embrace their sweet little JOHNNY, July 5, at 12:20 o'clock P. M., and bore him away to the One who gave and hath taken away. That precious little jewel was four years old, March 10, last. Bereft parents, we extend to you our heartfelt sympathy in this your saddest hour. The thought may, perhaps, at times, flit through your minds that you have been wronged. If such be, we ask you to banish it; for, dear parents, while we pen these lines both he and his departed brother are basking in the sunshine of eternal happiness on the green banks of sweet deliverance, commingling their angelic voices with the phalanx of heaven in singing anthems of praises around the great white throne. Can you not trust little Johnnie with the one who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not"? His are the ways of wisdom and eternal fellcity. May he pour into your bleeding hearts the balm of peace and resignation to his divine will! Methinks I hear now the echo of his light footsteps and prattling voice in the Sunday-school at Brandywine Church. A FRIEND.

HARRISON—WILLIAM COOK HARRISON died at his home, near Pleasant Valley, Webster parish, La., after an illness of six days, with swamp fever, on August 29, 1887. Bro. Harrison was born in Columbia county, Ga., April 4, 1846; was married to Miss Georgia A. Webb, December 23, 1869; emigrated to Louisiana in 1881. His wife and four children are left behind. He joined the Methodist Church about one year ago. What a blessed thing it was for him that he did at last make up his mind to serve God! From the time of his conversion to the end of his life he kept up his religious duties. The very night of his conversion he established his family altar and always kept it up. Though forty years of age when he turned to worship the Lord, yet when he turned, he turned with all his heart. May God comfort the bereaved ones!

HENRY S. JOHNS.

LEE—MISS SARAH A. LEE was born June 28, 1839, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1850, under the ministry of Rev. Allen Cassell. In the year 1879, under the ministry of Rev. J. S. Parker, she reached a state of peace with God, in which she lived until death removed her hence to that rest that remains for God's people. For many years Miss Sarah was a great sufferer from bodily afflictions. None but God, angels, and her sister know of other sufferings through which she passed in God's furnace. But we remember that "these light afflictions which are but for a moment, shall work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory above," at God's right hand. May God's blessing rest upon the surviving sister and bring her to the one above!

J. W. ELLISON, Pastor.

MAGEE—Departed this life, in Washington parish, La., August 23, 1887, ROSA JANE MAGEE, daughter of Mrs. Celia Magee, aged twenty-one years, five months and twenty days. The writer has known her since she was a little child, and has always known Rose to be a sweet, lovely girl. In school and Sunday-school she was ever obedient and gentle, loving to read her Bible, and so often repeating the twenty-eighth Psalm, which was her favorite chapter. Her devotion to her mother, love for home, and kind, forgiving spirit to all, caused her to be admired and loved by every one. She was confined to her bed thirty-three days, with bilious typhoid fever, suffering greatly, and, though she longed to be well again, she bore her illness with such a sweet, gentle spirit, ever trying to cheer all around her. On being asked if she was praying and trusting in Jesus, her answer was, "Yes," in that same calm, sweet voice she always had. She was buried in the family burying-ground, near her sweet home. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Mr. Eady, amid a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. Her favorite chapter was read, and her favorite song, "Sweet Bye-and-Bye," sung. May God sustain and comfort her heart-broken mother, sisters and brothers! is the earnest prayer of

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

TUCKER—MISS MELISSA JANE, daughter of Isaiah and Melissa Tucker, was born in East Baton Rouge parish, La., August 27, 1861, and died June 26, 1887, aged twenty-five years, nine months and thirty days. Melissa was the youngest of six children, and at the age of twelve years she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It was my happy privilege at the same time to give my heart and life to God and his church with her and our cousin, Allen Westbrook, both of whom have preceded the humble writer to their immortal home. She was living with our brother and brother William, of Zachary, La., when she was taken with chills and fever on Sunday before her death. She was impressed from the first of her sickness that she would not likely recover. Accordingly on June 26, at 1 o'clock A. M., she grew suddenly worse with congestion of the stomach. She, realizing the change, said that she must die, and then prayed this short, but fervent prayer, "Oh Lord God, come and save me for Jesus' sake." And then exclaimed, "He has saved me!" After which she closed her eyes in sleep to await the resurrection morn, while her spirit returns to God who gave it. Her brother,

J. N. TUCKER.

LAWRENCE—ASBURY COKE LAWRENCE, son of H. N. Lawrence, was born on September 8, 1811, and died in Crawford, Miss., on July 9, 1887, aged forty-six years, ten months and one day. He professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, twelve months ago, and was married to Miss M. M. Mason, February 9, in Wilcox country, Ala. His wife and five children mourn their loss. He was afflicted for some time, and the writer often talked to him about his spiritual interest, and he said his afflictions, he thought, would all work out for his good. Just before he became speechless he said he had no fears of the future and was resigned to the will of God.

J. P. GAINES.

Might as Well Die on That as Anything Else.

When one has suffered an month after month, consulted all the best "Medicine Men" within reach, tried all the remedies suggested by sympathizing friends, still suffers on, becoming weaker and more wretched, it is little wonder that such an one becomes despondent, and cries out, "I might as well die of one thing as another, and therefore will try anything, even the Compound Oxygen."

Mr. Alonzo Clark, chief salesman in the large business house of Davis, Collamore & Co., of New York, was so greatly reduced by long continued lung trouble, proceeding from malaria, that the doctors gave him up. They said, "If you have any business affairs to arrange, you had better arrange them soon, for you can not live long." He had all the symptoms of advanced consumption. By this time he thought the doctors had done all they could do for him, which they verily had, at the rate of ten dollars a visit. Somebody dropped a hint in his ear about Compound Oxygen, and he thought he might as well die on that as anything else. But on taking it for a little while he found he was not going to die. To make a long story short, Mr. Clark is again at his post in the store on Broadway, and attending to business with his old-time regularity. He is, as might be expected from his experience, a very firm believer in Compound Oxygen.

This Compound Oxygen has a history embodied in a very interesting two hundred page treatise, which is sent by mail on application to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Keep your temper, man; keep your temper! What is the use of getting vexed and angry at every little thing calculated to annoy you? The cows may have broken into the corn, and the hogs may be rooting in the meadow, and neither of them may be able to see the place where they got in, so as to get out; but what's the use of getting mad about it? That will not help the matter. They don't care how mad you get; it is all the same to them whether you are mad or pleased. But the madder you get, the worse you'll feel. Better save your strength for mending the fence, so they will not get in again. Keep cool. Don't get mad till you have time to think the matter over and see whether it pays or not.—Methodist Recorder.

What Young Men May Do.

Wait not, young man, until you reach mature age before you give some sign of usefulness and renown. Stand not in the background as your elders pass up to win the golden prize for which you should strive to be an earnest competitor. Had the great Macedonian been thus inactive, where, at thirty-three, would have been all his fame and glory when his mighty sword was returned to its scabbard by the hand of Death?

At thirty-seven, Napoleon had fought his greatest battles, and the world was paralyzed under the shock of his victories. In 1776 Washington had just celebrated his forty-fourth natal anniversary, and the wild throbbings of a mighty nation's young heart was felt throughout Europe. At the age of thirty-three Jefferson won immortality in his Declaration of Independence; and at thirty Alexander Hamilton became illustrious as the chief framer of our glorious Constitution.

When only twenty-three the author of the Loci Communes had gained a popularity that never waned, as the fiftieth edition testified. Zwingli was famous before he had attained the age of forty; and Luther was not thirty-two when his power was felt at the Disputation of Leipsic, and the corruptions of papacy trembled at the threatened overthrow.

It was young men in the pride and vigor of their early manhood that Moses selected to spy out the land of Canaan; and Joshua's spies to Jericho were beardless youths full of unflinching courage and daring adventure.

David, Solomon and Saul achieved their greatest success in early life, and John the Baptist and the Apostles were young in years when their great life-work of perfect and holy consecration was measured in mighty deeds and heroic sacrifices.

Last of all, but the noblest and highest example, we give in the Divine Intercessor, whose sacred young blood at thirty-three left its crimson stain on Calvary's rugged brow in a full and voluntary atonement for human guilt and transgression.

And you, young men, are squandering your precious years in supineness and inactivity, waiting to grow older before you begin your God-assigned mission in life. Work now: tarry not, for soon will come the summons when your hands will be folded, and your busy feet stiffened for that long rest under the earth clods.—Baltimorean.

"I Don't Want Relief, But Cure,"

is the exclamation of thousands suffering from catarrh. To all such we say: Catarrh can be cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It has been done in thousands of cases; why not in yours? Your danger is in delay. Enclose a stamp to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for pamphlet on this disease.

REACTION OF A BUSINESS.—It is impossible that a man's business, whatever it may be, and whether deserving of the name or not, should do otherwise than react upon himself. And the reaction will be so much the more intense as he gives himself up body and soul to the trade or the occupation he has chosen. We can easily imagine a "respectable" saloon keeper in a city, as he passes by some disreputable "dive" whose very name is a moral stench, asking himself, "Am I a dog, that I should ever do a thing like that?" And still, how can he know? He is gaining wealth by selling poisoned drinks over a counter. His "trade" is of no possible advantage to any human creature save himself, and to himself only in the mean sense of making him rich. There is in his trade and his associations not one thing to suggest to him a manly motive or a generous thought. Upon the contrary, if he were to entertain any such, his business, so called, might become an impossibility to him. He knows perfectly well that to many, at least, of his customers he sells ruin and disgrace at ten cents a glass. Everything about his trade is as morally offensive as is to any but a demoralized nose the stench that lingers about his premises. Who is to tell what he may in time become? Who is to guarantee that whatever will put money in his own pocket will not grow to be for him legitimate "trade," even down to that which is meanest and vilest of all?—Standard.

DISEASE lies in ambush for the weak. A feeble constitution is ill adapted to encounter a malarious atmosphere and sudden changes of temperature, and the least robust are usually the easiest victims. Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier will give tone and vitality and strength to your entire body.

A Great Man's Greatest Thought.

At a dinner at the Astor House, when Daniel Webster was Secretary of State, under President Filmore, after a period of silence which fell upon the company of some twenty gentlemen who were present, one of the guests said:

"Mr. Webster, will you tell me what was the most important thought that ever occupied your mind?"

Mr. Webster slowly passed his hand over his forehead, and in a low tone inquired of one near him:

"Is there anyone here who does not know me?"

"No; all are your friends."

"The most important thought that ever occupied my mind," said Mr. Webster, "was that of my individual responsibility to God." And after speaking on this subject in the most solemn strain for twenty minutes, he silently rose from the table and retired to his room.

This incident, related by Harvey in his Reminiscences, serves to illustrate the attitude of great minds towards eternal things. Great men are not scoffers. The men of flippant jeers and godless jests are men of small calibre and shallow intellect. It is not the wise man who has "said in his heart there is no God." It is not the great man who casts off fear and restrains prayer before him.

A great man comprehends something greater than himself, for he is but the image of a divine Creator, marred, defaced and distorted by sin, yet bearing testimony to the dignity and grandeur of the divine original, whose glory is so faintly shadowed in the man whom he has made, and endowed with intellect, and will, and conscience, and whom he has made to feel in the depths of his soul the importance of his "individual responsibility to God."—The Christian.

NEGLECT of ordinary Kidney diseases frequently brings on Bright's disease of the Kidneys. If you have reason to suspect any Kidney troubles, take in time Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and Kidney Balm.

God needs men and reads men; he knows what you can do, and will call you to do it. Be ready to move, and the way will open before you. Readiness is not impatience.

It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. "Sometimes a fog will settle over a vessel's deck and yet leave the topmast clear. Then a sailor goes up aloft and gets a lookout which the helmsman on the deck can not get. So prayer sends the soul aloft; lifts it above the clouds in which our selfishness and egotism befog us, and gives us a chance to see which way to steer. —Spurgeon.

A beautifully illustrated work, entitled, "The Camp on the Brule—An Idyl of the Northwest," has been received, with the compliments of E. P. Wilson, general passenger agent of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad. Ten days in the delightful region of the Brule is our chief desire for a part of a summer vacation, after reading this work.

A GOSPEL PREACHER DESCRIBED.—The man who takes upon himself to analyze, explain, enforce the gospel scheme in all its broad details; to show to fallen man its grand and paramount design; unfold the category of its weighty claims; place high in bold relief its present joys and future blessedness; expose the dark and dire deformity of sin, with all the changeful phases it assumes; trace out its nature, operations, and results; bring from the treasury of truth things new and old; give prominence to what may lend an upward impulse to the soul, and check its downward course—should have distinct and clear perceptions of his work; a head in which the law of order is obeyed; a heart full franght with love to souls; a spirit fed with hallowed, not with self-enkindled, fire; a sympathy, the counterpart of his who spent his life in doing good to man; a quenchless zeal, with charity combined; an aptitude of speech to give his theme effect, not substituting sound for sense; not noisy declamation, turgid rant, the fitful outbursts of impassioned zeal, untempered from above. His subjects drawn from wisdom's fount should be dealt out by wisdom's sacred laws; in manner calm and dignified; enunciation grave, and blent with solemn awe. I reverence the man who elevates the cross; who preaches not himself, but Christ; gives glory to his Master in his work, and labors on at his command. Such men deserve the benediction of their race.—Irish Christian Advocate.

Rev. James L. Forsythe.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS, MISS., Sept. 19, 1887.

Consumption, Wasting Diseases,

And General Debility. Doctors disagree as to the relative value of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites: the one supplying strength and flesh, the other giving nerve power, and acting as a tonic to the digestive and entire system. But in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites the two are combined, and the effect is wonderful. Thousands who have derived no permanent benefit from other preparations have been cured by this. Scott's Emulsion is perfectly palatable and is easily digested by those who can not tolerate plain Cod Liver Oil.

THE ARROW AND THE SONG.

BY LONGFELLOW.

I shot an arrow in the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For, so swiftly it flew, the sight
Could not follow it in its flight.

I breathed a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong
That it can follow the flight of song?

Long, long afterward, in an oak
I found the arrow, still unbroke;
And the song, from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.

Angry Si.

BY REV. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

MR. EDITOR: The late Dr. McFerrin used to tell the following suggestive story: In Giles county, Tenn., there lived a gentleman who owned a servant by the name of Si. Among the duties entrusted to Si was that of penning the sheep at night. On returning home one evening late the master found Si in an angry, sullen mood, whereupon the following conversation took place:

"Hello, Si! what's the matter this evening?"

"I'm mad."

"Who are you mad at, Si?"

"I'm mad at you, Massa."

"Why, what have I done?"

"I'se mad at you, Massa, 'case I aint penned dem sheep."

Now, how many persons do we find in the church who would excuse themselves for failure of duty by bringing a charge against some one else? Every pastor in all the land has had an experience in this line. Who has not heard the Board of Stewards censured and condemned by an indifferent, stingy membership? If the preacher is not paid, the stewards are charged with the failure, be they ever so faithful. They ought to have seen that the pastor was paid, though the church failed to respond to their call. The sheep aint penned, and they are mad.

Again, how often do we meet with this same Si-like spirit in the other collections. The Missionary Board is in debt because of the failure of the church to do its duty; the holy wrath and indignation of some are aroused, and they quiet their own consciences by charging upon the Board a reckless spirit. The preacher presents the causes of the church, and from their abundance the people respond with pittances, and then charge upon the church that there are too many collections. The interests of the church suffer, and the complaints of many abound. Cause: They "aint penned dem sheep."

This spirit finds its way into other than the finances of the church. I have known a Sunday-school to struggle and struggle, and finally close its doors. Of course, the parents are in no wise responsible for the failure. The superintendent and teachers ought not to have let it die. The presence of children and encouragement of parents are not at all essential to the life of a Sunday-school. So, again, the sheep are not penned, and somebody is mad.

Week after week the pastor announces prayer meeting "next Wednesday evening at half-past seven or eight o'clock." A few faithful, godly women constitute the congregation; and should the men of the church be present, out of a male membership of many intelligent gentlemen only one or two can be found who will lead in the prayer; and should the pastor be absent, the meeting goes by default altogether. Thus the church goes on from month to month, until finally the discovery is made that the spiritual state of the church is low, her growth is small, the meetings are not interesting, and Zion is languishing. Conclusion: The preacher has not done his duty, and a new pastor is in demand. Si is mad, and some one must bear the blame.

And so it also goes in the pastoral work. "Well, brother, come in. Is this our new preacher? I thought you never would get to our house." And yet that very same brother has never been to church, nor visited the pastor, nor in any way expressed any appreciation of his presence in the community.

I once said that he who attends most closely to his own duties has less time or disposition to complain of others. Was I right, Mr. Editor?

From "Gilderoy."

In some parts of the country there is an increasing demand for sound doctrinal preaching. It need not be of the polemic or controversial kind, particularly; it need not be of old-time personal or abusive style. Our young people, and many of our middle-aged people, need to hear the doctrines of God's Word strongly stated and ably supported by the Word itself. There is great need for this, and, I may say, there is a demand for it. In some parts of the country our people are slowly drifting into an indefinite—if not into an indefinable—state as to their religious views. This is unfortunate. People ought to know what they are, where they are, what they believe, and why they believe it. They need instruction. There can be no very high order of religious life and character without a sound substratum of religious doctrine underneath it. Doctrine has much to do with life and living—more, indeed, than most people are willing to allow. It will not do to ignore or to decry that which has been clearly revealed in the divine Word. There are some peculiar dogmas or tenets to which, perhaps, undue importance has been given. Our zeal for these is, generally, in exact proportion to the silence of the written Word about them. We grow exceedingly tenacious about some hobby, feebly supported by the hook, or, perhaps, supported only by some interence "keg-drawn-out." When we speak of doctrines we refer to the great fundamental principles, clearly taught in God's Word, on which the salvation and spiritual growth of the soul depends. These are matters of direct revelation, and we dare not be indifferent to them. Our people ought to know what these doctrines are, and how to prove them by the Word.

In some sections of our country there are preachers, mainly those in evangelistic work, who demean and ridicule doctrine and doctrinal beliefs, as if these things were a mortal sin, and yet they are teaching doctrine all the time, and some of the doctrines they teach are far more human than divine. Some people, easily misled, are falling into the notion that regular pastors preach doctrine instead of the gospel, and that evangelists preach the gospel as opposed to doctrine. This is a sad mistake. The gospel is, in itself, a system of good news in sound doctrines. There is in it the doctrine of divine love, of mediation, of the vicarious suffering of the Son of God, of repentance, faith, regeneration, justification, sanctification, adoption, worship, the direct and indirect witness and work of the Holy Ghost, and final salvation. It is impossible to preach the gospel without preaching the fundamental doctrines of God's holy Word. The dogmas of the churches and the doctrines of God's Word are different things. God has put precious little stress on some things greatly overstrained by some of the churches—perhaps, by all of them.

The great revival of scriptural holiness under John Wesley and his coadjutors began and continued under strong doctrinal preaching. The power and permanency of this work grew out of this fact. Namby-pamby preaching, anecdotal and pathetic, will result in a full crop of namby-pamby converts, worth little in the hard work the church has to do. Many of the revivals we have now make doctrinal preaching imperative on the pastors. This must be done for the establishment of those hurriedly picked up and compelled to come into our churches by the evangelist. The evangelist goes on his way and leaves the most important and hardest part of the work to be done by the faithful pastor. The indoctrination and training of young converts is an essential part of God's plan as set forth in the gospel of Christ. It is very unfortunate that so many people have come to regard the pastor and the evangelist as in a state of antagonism to each other; but so it is. Neither the evangelist nor the pastor are wholly free from blame for having helped to create this impression on the public mind. But for the faithful work done by the pastor the reaping of the evangelist would be impossible, and many, if not most, of his sheaves would go to naught but for the labor of the pastor after he has gone. The pastor and the evangelist are really the complements of each other—the one can not well do without the other. The evangelist need not gaff the pastor and minify him before the public, nor hold him and his work up for public ridicule, as some evangelists do; and the pastor need not show spleen whenever an evangelist proposes to come to his charge. In all this it is to be understood that I refer to regularly constituted pastors and authorized evangelists.

In the Methodist Church evangelists, as such, are not provided for by law; but the administration has been flexible enough to allow some men, who seem to have special gifts, to work in this department. Some of the most useful evangelists I know are among the strongest doctrinal preachers to be found among us. A revival that comes from preaching the doctrines of the Bible will not need reviving.

Seashore Camp Ground.

This property belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and is managed by a Board of Trustees that are elected annually by the District Conferences of the three controlling districts—New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile. The trustees receive no compensation, though the tax on their time and energies is considerable. They can only attend an occasional service; they must look for their reward in the next world. Here they are censured, blamed, and severely criticised; sometimes justly, perhaps—for they don't claim infallibility—but often unwisely. Many times they are severely criticised by parties that only see one side of the situation. They render judgment when only half the testimony is in, and that all on one side of the case. I have heard the management of the restaurant severely criticised by some, and commended by others. Some have asked why no provision have been made for preachers' wives. Others have asked, Why do they provide for preachers at other people's expense? They say it is a very handsome thing for the trustees to do, if they have the means; but if they can only do it by increasing an interest-bearing debt, the matter becomes questionable. I once attended the Seashore Camp Meeting; was furnished tickets to take my meals at the restaurant. It seemed to me that at least forty other preachers took their meals there. I had a very delightful time; enjoyed the services at the tabernacle very much. I was there for rest, recreation, enjoyment. I made the best of it. At the close of the meeting I accidentally learned that the restaurant had failed to clear expenses by several dollars. Now, I felt a little ashamed that I had been a party to increasing the debt on these grounds. As I did not go there with any intention to preach, or take any part in the service, I went merely for my own enjoyment. I have been there more than a dozen times since, but always at my own expense. I heard several preachers at the last camp meeting, who understood the situation, say: "Why not allow us to pay half price, or why not charge the preachers at least fifty cents a day?" "No preacher would be displeased if a cot in the preachers' tent was furnished him, and he charged half price at the restaurant." Some families that go there feel that if they entertain preachers on the ground, it is their privilege to make their own selection among their friends, and to invite and entertain whom they please. The departure made by the presiding elders this year, in selecting a few men to do all the preaching, has been highly commended by some, and condemned by others. One old preacher said, "It's the best thing you ever did." Another said, "Say what you please, it worked well." An old presiding elder that has been in charge there, said, "It's the very thing." Before Dr. Parker was made a Bishop, he said to me, "It is what ought to be done if we could do it." I heartily approve of the plan, and hope it will be continued.

T. S. WEST.

Defense of Bishop Galloway.

In Mr. Davis' letter, published in the Jackson Clarion, he intimates that Bishop Galloway had neglected other duties for the temperance cause. Mr. Galloway can not defend himself without seeming to boast; but there are thousands who can tell Mr. Davis that Mr. Galloway stayed in the city of Vicksburg when it was stricken with yellow fever, and nursed the sick and relieved the poor as though he knew no such word as fear, and as if he possessed the widow's "cruise of oil and the little meal in the barrel" that would not "fail until the famine was removed from the land." He and his heroic wife went down to the very borders of the river of death, and came up with the love of all the people of Mississippi.

Mr. Galloway, though a young man, is Bishop in a great church, not because of his talents and executive ability, though he has much of both, but because of his "capacity for hard work" in any and every field of God.

Even if the reproach were true, would Mr. Davis tell an oculist, who had cured many blind, that "he ought to pay more attention to the liver"? Is Mr. Davis going to join the crowd who hold magnifying glasses over the white robes of God's servants, and gloat over the specks they find, and who excuse men who live beastly lives, saying, "They are good-hearted fellows at the bottom"?

Mr. Davis called Bishop Galloway's attention to the opium curse. In our county I have known of three women, the daughters of confirmed drunkards, who were and are opium eaters. In the same period I can count twenty-three drunkards, four of them boys who died from strong drink shortly after their twenty-first birthday. One sober, talented Christian gentleman, shot down by a drunkard; and one beautiful woman (the daughter of a drunkard), who fell to the level of a beast—victims to strong drink. Which is the "mote," and which the beam?

FRANK FARRER.

Giving, an Act of Worship.

Eighteen hundred years ago giving was as certainly considered an act of worship as praying.

Jesus found fault with hypocrisy, but not with giving or bringing in alms. With the whip of cord he assisted those merchants to leave the temple; but he did not drive out those who brought offerings. He did not drive out the poor widow who came with one little mite. He commended her gift more than the rich who had cast in great sums. So it was the spirit in which they gave, not the amount, that Jesus took note of. Giving was known before the Temple was thought of. As an act of worship, it was older than the law of Moses, older than Jacob, for Abraham gave tithes to Melchisedec.

Giving is a part of natural religion. It has been held as a duty by all people in all times. It is not peculiar to the Christian system or enjoined alone in the Bible. Heathen nations give offerings to their gods, and even the aborigines of our own country were not unschooled in the doctrine of giving. Wherever worshipers were found, part of their worship was to give gifts.

The giving of a part of our substance was a consecration of treasure as the Sabbath is a consecration of time. The ancients believed in it, and practiced it; but some modern Solons have discovered that the ancients were behind the times, and that to give or not to give is purely optional with everyone's own way of thinking, and they pride themselves on being "free thinkers." They say there is no duty, no worship, no glory, unless it is for some great thing that will be a credit to their names.

Others say: "Oh! we could tolerate these church folks if they were not always saying, 'Give, give, give.'" Do we not receive, receive, receive all the time? "Streams of mercy without ceasing" call for gifts as well as songs.

We pay tribute to the government without murmuring. Why not pay tribute to God without compunctions visitings of stinginess? We are only asked to give what we are able to spare. The poor man's turtle-dove was as acceptable to God as the rich man's bullocks.

They of the olden time gave the best and the first, not the leavings and the last. Sure for us it is "more blessed to give than to receive."

MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

VICTORY.—"In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world." These were the last words of our Lord's last discourse; and ever after we feel their power in the actions, the bearing, and the words of his servants. They wrestle against the world and principalities and powers, but as men who are on the conquering side, and who know that their Lord has already overcome these enemies, and triumphed over them in the cross. Therefore, they also are "more than conquerors through him that loved them," and they record their conviction, that "whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even (their) faith." In the Apocalypse this spirit is still more distinctly felt; for there the virtual victory becomes a visible victory, both for the Lord and for his people. Every promise in the seven epistles is addressed to "him that overcometh;" and the last epistle unites the victory of the servant with the victory of the Lord: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me on my throne; even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father on his throne." When the prophetic visions are to commence, the opening of the book is represented as the result of victory. The first vision represents one who goes forth conquering and to conquer; and then, through all the changes of the conflict, we have the anticipations and presages of final victory.—Progress of Doctrine.

Current Coins.

(Zion's Herald.)

All can not be as eloquent as Apollos, or as powerful in reasoning as Paul, as overwhelming in exhortation as Peter, as persuasive as John: but every one may be as holy, as thoroughly consecrated to God, and as filled with the Holy Spirit, as were these mighty apostles. While the highly-endowed by nature must constantly feel that there is, after all, a painful impotence in the highest human effort; that the simple gathering of a crowd and securing the pleasing voice of applause, does not exhaust the preacher's function, or meet the demands of his own conscience, those to whom these somewhat perilous gifts are not entrusted, must feel all the more the need of that promised, always near at hand, surely available by persistent faith and prayer, supplemental and all-prevailing power of the Holy Spirit.

(Standard.)

Be careful of your pastor. If you want him to preach you good sermons, if you want him to do his best work, indulge him a little. Give him time for his study-room work. Don't press him too hard with other ministries toward the closing hours of the week. And as to teaching the Bible class just before preaching, it is possible he can do it, but assuredly it will be at an expense which you, yourself, as well as he, will presently feel when he comes to the sermon. Moreover, hold him in check a trifle, if need be, after the discourse. Naturally he feels in some cases somewhat more sociable than usual, and is ready to talk. But our best authorities tell us it is bad for the preacher. Let him be quiet, give him a few moments' rest. That is, if you wish him to preach well for you the next time.

(Western Christian Advocate.)

When Huxley recommends that the Bible be read in schools, and Herbert Spencer admits that there is no moral power in science, and it is known that Emerson manfully advocated the continuance of prayers at Harvard, it is worth while for the American statesman to pause and consider whether the safety and permanency of American institutions will not be promoted by giving prominence to Christian morality in our system of education. The removal of the Bible from the public schools is a crime against the State, and we are so sure that the people will see it so after awhile, that we confidently anticipate the restoration of the now largely discarded book, and that at no very distant day. Even men who have little faith in it divinely revealed religion, must admit the importance of an authoritative standard of ethics. Public virtue is as important to the State as general intelligence is, and will do quite as much to guarantee its permanency.

(Southern Churchman.)

St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Romans, tells them he had prayed to have a prosperous journey to come unto them; but he took care to say "by the will of God." He did get to Rome, but his journey was by no means prosperous; sent there as a prisoner; got shipwrecked; got bitten by a viper; had troubles enough. Had we made such a journey we would have thought it most disastrous. So God gives part of our requests at times, but not all. Sometimes he gives no part, knowing what is best for his children. Yet the apostle was not discouraged. He was as earnest in prayer after as before; knew its power. So not only prayed for others, but earnestly besought the prayers of others. How often does he beg, "Brethren, pray for us." One thing we may be sure of: if we do not get what we ask for, we shall get something better, if it only be submission. But this is a wonderful blessing for any man to get submission to the good and wise God. So plain we ought to be submissive, so hard always to submit to God with gracefulness.

The popular impression is that it costs nothing to publish a newspaper. The world at large sees no reason why a newspaper should not be given away to every needy person, to every reading-room, and to every Christian Association, and, in fact, to everybody and everything that does not find it quite convenient to pay for it. And a large portion of the community see no reason why the newspaper should not employ Rev. A. B., or C. D., or Mrs E. F., the widow of the late esteemed G. H., to write for the paper, as an act of charity. Friends sometimes say to the editor, "X. Y. is a most excellent man, and very needy; it would be a great help to him if you would employ him to write on your paper." In one instance, in the experience of the writer, one only, a person has said, "Rev Z. A. is a very worthy man; he could write a good article for you on so-and so. If you will employ him to do so, I will pay for it; and here is the money." We were led into this train of remark by observing a statement that it has cost $100,000 to establish and sustain the Advance, of Chicago, the organ of the Congregationalists of the Northwest; and that it has cost $100,000 to establish the Interior (Presbyterian), Chicago.

DAN'S WIFE.

Up at early morning light,
Sweeping, dusting, setting right
Ogling all the household spoils—
Sewing buttons, tying strings,
Telling Bridget what to do,
Mending rips in Johnnie's shoe,
Running up and down the stairs,
Tying baby in her chairs,
Cutting meat and spreading bread,
Dishing out so much per head,
Eating as she can, by chance,
Giving husband kindly glance—
Toiling, busy life
Smart woman
Dan's wife.

Dan comes home at fall of night—
Home so cheerful, neat and bright;
Children meet him at the door,
Pull him down and look him o'er;
Wife asks how the day has gone:
"Busy time with us at home!"
Supper done, Dan reads with ease—
Happy Dan, but one to please!
Children must be put to bed;
All the little prayers are said;
Little shoes are placed in rows,
Bedclothes tucked o'er little toes:
Busy, wearing life—
Tired woman,
Dan's wife.

Dan reads on and falls asleep—
See the woman softly creep:
Baby rests at last; poor dear,
Not a word her heart to cheer.
Mending basket, full to top,
Stockings, shirt, and little frock;
Tired eyes and weary brain,
Side with darning, ugly pain;
"Never mind, 'twill pass away:"
She must work, but never play;
Closed piano, unused books,
Done the walks to pleasant nooks;
Brightness faded out of life—
Saddened woman,
Dan's wife.

Fire-stairs, tossing to and fro,
Fever holds the woman low:
Children wander free to play,
When and where they will to-day:
Bridget falters—dinner's cold,
Dan looks anxious, cross, and old;
Household screws all out of place,
Lacking one dear, patient face.
Steady hands so tired and true,
Hands that knew just what to do,
Never seeking rest or play,
Folded now and laid away,
Work of six in one short life—
Murdered woman,
Dan's wife.

The Sunday-School Lesson for October 9, 1887.

BY C. G. ANDREWS, D. D.

THE TEMPEST STILLED.

Matthew viii, 18-27.

GOLDEN TEXT: "Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?"—Matthew viii, 26.

INTRODUCTORY.

After the healing of the centurion's servant, as narrated in the last lesson, our Savior went into Simon Peter's house at Capernaum. He was in the habit of stopping there, and, doubtless, Peter or Andrew had invited him on this occasion for refreshment, of which he must have stood in great need, after his wearisome labors of preaching and healing. The hospitable intention seemed about to be thwarted, because the housekeeper, Peter's wife's mother, was sick of a fever. But in this case, as well as in many others since, where Jesus was invited, the benefit he conferred was greater than that intended to be bestowed upon him. He touched her hand, or, as Luke says, he rebuked the fever, and it left her. Then she arose and ministered unto them. Both the touch and the rebuke, which cured the fever, indicate a miraculous power. It would seem that the fever, as one of his servants, had gone farther than was proper, and he rebuked him for his error. After this miracle, and as the day wore away, many possessed of devils were brought unto him, and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick. Thus a prophecy was fulfilled which had been spoken by Isaiah nearly a thousand years before: "Himself took our infirmities and bore our sicknesses."

FAITHLESS FOLLOWERS.

Verse 18. "Now when Jesus saw great multitudes following him." The working of miracles, and especially the healing of the sick and the casting out of the evil spirits, very naturally drew great crowds of people to him. "He gave commandment to depart unto the other side." The other side of the Lake of Gennessaret. Perhaps the reason for going was to escape the bustle of the crowd. Jesus ever delighted in retirement.

19. "A certain scribe came, and said, Master, I will follow thee wherever thou goest." A political officer who kept the records of civil magistrates. Not many of this class had anything to do with Christ; but this one, impressed by the miracles and blessed teachings, was moved by the impulse to offer his life. He was a volunteer, and meant well, but had not counted the cost.

20. "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head." This reply was to show the precarious life of Jesus, and to bring to the consciousness of the scribe what he had to expect in following the Master, who here calls himself "the Son of man"—words declaring his humiliation as well as his divinity.

21. "And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father." Not one of the apostles is here meant, but one of those who followed the Lord and attended upon his ministry. He was willing to be a follower, but must first discharge certain domestic obligations. His father was not actually dead, but aged and infirm, and he wanted to minister unto him as long as he lived, and bury him; then he would be free to follow Jesus.

22. "Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead." Those who are called to preach the gospel of Christ should not permit any secular or domestic entanglements to interfere with their service. These matters ought to be attended to by those engaged only in worldly duties.

FAITH TESTED.

Verse 23. "And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him." Mark has it that Jesus said to his disciples, "Let us go over unto the other side." To the other side of the Sea of Galara, where he was to heal the desperate demoniac, and to give the Gadarenes an opportunity to hear the gospel.

24. "And behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea." The Sea of Galilee was very liable to these sudden squalls, from its deep basin skirted by lofty mountains, through whose gorges the wind sweeps with fury. But probably this tempest was excited by Satan. He is called the prince of the power of the air, and he raised the great wind which destroyed Job's sons. Here was a grand opportunity for the enemy of souls. The Author of salvation, and all the preachers of the gospel, were together in one little boat. The thought of submerging that boat with its precious freight must have filled Satan with diabolic eagerness. "But he was asleep." Mark is more minute, and says that "he was asleep upon a pillow in the hinder part of the ship." The narrative brings out most impressively the humanity and divinity of Jesus. His being asleep shows him to be a man under the necessity of repairing the wasted energies of the body. The faith of the disciples failed because of the raging storm and of the sleeping Savior. They must inevitably go down, and there was none to care, none to help.

25. "And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us: we perish." Mark has it: "Carest thou not that we perish?" Luke repeats, "Master, Master." Their fright destroyed their faith and made them unmindful of the courtesy and reverence due their Savior.

26. "Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith?" Unbelief is always full of fear. It was natural that there should have been an apprehension under danger; but faith should have suggested that relief was nigh. They had some faith, or they would not have applied to Christ; but it was little, as they feared exceedingly, even though Christ was in the ship. Faith dispels fear in proportion to its strength. "Then he arose, and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm." He treated the sea just as he did the fever disabling Peter's wife's mother—rebuked it. The one was his servant just as was the other, and they both obeyed him. Here ought to have been an evidence to the disciples of the divinity of Christ, for, doubtless, they had read in Psalm lxxxix: "Thou stillest the raging of the sea: when the waves thereof arise, thou stillest them." Just as one word of Christ quieted the agitated face of the sea, so by his word and influence he can calm the most troubled soul if it will call upon him and believe in him.

27. "But the men marveled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him?" Their marveling was another indication of their want of faith. Had they been thoroughly grounded in the Scriptures, and had they implicitly trusted Christ as the Son of God, they could have adopted the language of Job: "I know that you canst do everything, and that no thought can be withholden from thee." The thought that the very Being of whom such sentiments had been affirmed in the Scriptures was right there in the boat with them, was flesh and blood just like themselves, and had so recently been in such unconscious sleep as not to hear the howlings of the same winds which he had stilled, was more than they could understand. The form and the habits were those of a man, but the works were the works of a God. "Without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh."

PRACTICAL LESSONS.

1. Where Christ summons, we must follow, regardless of hardships.

2. Christ must have the supreme place in our affections. "He that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me."

3. Life is fitly represented by a tempestuous sea. All who sail "over to the other side" must expect storms and tempests.

4. There is no danger, there need be no fear, to those who apprehend that Christ is in the vessel.

Fifty Dollars from Columbia, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I notice with regret that the Lambuth fund has of late been growing very slowly. I suggest to the laymen of our church who read the ADVOCATE that it is time for us to come forward and fill up the subscription list. Enclosed please find fifty dollars which the writer feels impelled to give to the cause. Let us, the laymen of the church, to whom, as the trustees of the bounty, God has given the means, contribute freely and, in proportion to the blessings he has bestowed upon us, to send the gospel to Japan. A nation, great in everything but its idolatry, is stretching forth its hands to us for the Bible. Never, it seems to me, since the "cry from Macedonia" was there such an appeal to the church. Surely, we can not be deaf to the import of the tidings which Bro. Lambuth, in his later letters, sends us. The ruling classes, the intelligent among this wonderful people, throwing away their idols and groping for a purer faith, see the dawn of Christ's kingdom, and call to us for light.

Bigotry, superstition and intolerance, the intrenchments of the kingdom of Satan in other heathen lands, before which our missionaries have toiled and died, have, it seems, been leveled and smoothed away in Japan. May we not see the form of our blessed Master standing over in the East, having cast out the legion of devils that have afflicted that beautiful land, calling to us, one and all, to join in the amazing work of sending the message of salvation to our brethren sitting now clothed and in their right mind? Do we believe that at the last great day, when the advance guard of the throng of the redeemed begin to come up from the East, preceding a host whom no man can number, it will be a source of pleasure to us that we kept our money in our pockets, and that others will enjoy the thrill of eternal gratitude that will swell forever in the remembrance that they had a part in the redemption of this people?

Brethren of the church, let us who are laymen resolve that, instead of leaving the Lambuth fund at $1,000, we will not stop at ten times that amount, but make its limit as elastic as the emergency requires. The church ought to and will send to Japan, if we supply the means, men of the highest talent and culture, and of the purest devotion to the cause of Christ, to aid in carrying on the great work of evangelizing of an empire. Let us not turn away our eyes as we read the appeal, and say that we have done enough for the cause of missions this year already. Let the meaning of the words of Christ sink into our hearts as we ponder upon our duty: "Lovest thou me?" "Feed my sheep."

LAYMAN.

From Richland Circuit.

MR. EDITOR: I have sent Dr. Kelley $54 60, for week of self-denial, from Richland circuit, North Mississippi Conference. Being away from my work most of that week, the program, much to my regret, was not carried out. But this excellent people, who read the church papers, entered into the spirit of the occasion, denied themselves, and paid above amount. Of that amount all, as far as I could ascertain, was paid by individuals and families who take the church papers, excepting $1 25. Find enclosed $1 for Lambuth call from Mrs. E. J. Cameron.

T. CAMERON.

From the Work.

CHINA GROVE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have held one protracted and two camp meetings on this work this year, and now send in my report.

My protracted meeting was held at Sartin's Church, assisted by Bros. Hoover, Regan, Steavens and Alford. God blessed us. Church revived; seven accessions; four infants baptized.

First camp meeting was held at Topisaw, beginning on Friday before the fourth Sabbath in August. Continued five days. This meeting was a success—good attendance and splendid order. God was present at every service, and his power displayed. Results: Forty accessions, and about fifty conversions. The following were present, and did good work for the Master: Bros. Weems, Young, Holloman, Burton, B. F. Lewis, Crymes, Featherstun, and several local brethren.

Our second camp meeting was held at China Grove, beginning on Friday night before the second Sabbath in September. Continued four days. Results: Twenty-five accessions, and about forty conversions. Satan was present, and his name was "legion," and for awhile we thought he would gain the victory; but, after we succeeded in capturing twenty-five of his bravest young men, and turning them over to court, peace was declared, and the work of the Lord went on; and we had one of the best meetings ever held on that camp ground. Our help was Bros. Weems, Watkins, Young, Downer, Burton, G. H. Galloway, and our local brethren—all of whom did good work as preachers and policemen.

Two more protracted meetings to hold, and then get ready and be off for Conference. Collections will be all up in full.

"O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good; for his mercy endureth forever!"

R. S. HALE, P. C.

MANY, LA.

MR. EDITOR: As you have not heard from this part of the Lord's vineyard, I will send you a few items to let your many readers know what the good Lord is doing for us on the Many and Sabine circuit. The fire was first kindled at Bayou Scie, the first Sunday in July, when twelve persons came forward and applied for membership. We had a real Holy Ghost meeting, and many shouts were heard in the camps of Israel. Our protracted meeting began at Bayou Scie on Friday before the second Sunday in August, it being the time of our third quarterly meeting. Our presiding elder, the Rev. J. B. Cassity, was with us, and preached and presided to the satisfaction of all who were present. The results of the meeting were as follows: Twenty-eight accessions to the church, and some conversions, and the church greatly revived. We have had most excellent meetings at each appointment where we have held protracted meetings. We have received into the church up to date over one hundred persons, and have been permitted to witness many conversions. We have just closed a meeting at New Hope of about two weeks' duration, resulting in thirty-four accessions to the church, and about sixty conversions. The Rev. Robert Fuller, the Methodist evangelist from Texas, was with us, and preached some most excellent sermons, and labored faithfully and earnestly for the salvation of precious souls. Our work is far behind financially, but we expect by the help of the good Lord to present a better report to Conference than heretofore. Pray for us, that we may win many more souls to Christ before Conference. Yours in Christ,

H. A. HOLTZ, P. C.

HAYNESVILLE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I closed a meeting at New Salem Church, Haynesville charge, on the fourth instant, which lasted nine days, with very fine results. The church had been praying specially for a revival for some weeks prior to the beginning of the meeting, so when I went to the church I found many of the members in good trim, ready and willing to work for the glory of God and the salvation of souls. The church graciously revived. Many conversions, and many added to the church. Four new subscribers to the ADVOCATE.

I commenced a protracted meeting in Haynesville Church on last night, September 11. Expect to continue it for ten or twelve days.

C. R. GODFREY.

TIBBEE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I was appointed to the Tibbee circuit as a "supply" by Rev. R. G. Porter, presiding elder of Columbus district, about the middle of the month of March, last. We have been moving along pleasantly and harmoniously.

There are three appointments on the work, at all of which we have held protracted meetings with good results. We were assisted in the meeting at this place by Rev. J. T. Cunningham, of Daleville, Miss., the father of the writer, and a member of the North Mississippi Conference. I never witnessed a more deeply spiritual meeting. Nearly all the congregation were already members of the church, but we had six accessions.

Our church-house at Mayhew is the joint property of the Baptists, Cumberland Presbyterians and Methodists. We had there a union meeting. It is perfectly beautiful to witness the harmony and brotherly feeling that subsists between the various churches, and the hearty co-operation on the part of members with their pastors and with one another in "every good word and work."

We closed our last meeting, at Kilgore Chapel, on the night of the eighth instant. Rev. J. D. Cameron, of West Point, was with us, and served us faithfully and with great acceptability. Our people all love Bro. Cameron. Our young Bro. Craddock was also with us, and preached twice. We have had a gracious season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord all over the work, whose salutary influences are visibly manifest.

Our missionary assessment has nearly all been subscribed, and our collections generally are being promptly met. We have, in addition, just ordered a bell for the Tibbee Church, and received and forwarded $9 the week of prayer and self-denial.

We have many reasons for which to praise the name of the Lord. Pray for us.

H. T. CUNNINGHAM.

POPLARVILLE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: To-day I forward to Dr. I. G. John, of Nashville, the results of the week of self-denial, amounting to upwards of twenty dollars. I could not well report sooner, as it takes a month to make a round on my circuit. If all the charges in our church will do as well as ours, the debt will be paid.

We have held three protracted meetings during the summer; the first of which at Purvis, embracing the second Sunday in June. Six accessions, and the church to some extent revived. The second at Oak Grove, La., embracing the fifth Sunday in July, continuing five days. The membership were to some degree revived. The third was held at West Pearl, commencing August 13, and ending the night of the seventeenth. Results: Two accessions, eight conversions, and the church refreshed. Bro. G. R. Ellis, of Covington, preached two sermons for us, the last day of the meeting, with fine effect.

This is by all odds the most spiritual church on the work. This little society of about thirty members, all told, has a Sunday-school, a woman's prayer meeting, and a Ladies' Local Parsonage Society. These people love the Lord and their preacher, too.

We commenced a series of meetings at Poplarville last night, to be continued several days. Hope to be able to have good news from it for the ADVOCATE soon. Pray for us.

J. N. TUCKER, P. C.

SEPTEMBER 16, 1887.

HOUSTON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed a meeting at Wesley Chapel, which, in many respects, was attended with great power. The church at that place had suffered much from having had seeds of dissension sowed within her sacred precincts. To a very great measure these seeds were eradicated by the grace of God, and many of the brethren love each other better than ever before. There was not such an ingathering of souls into the church as we have had on former occasions, but all the Christians have promised to be more consecrated.

Yesterday, the last service of the meeting, we took up a collection to meet the financial demands of the Conference, and received, in cash and good subscription, over fifty dollars.

Bros. E. G. Kilgore and H. R. Tucker rendered us invaluable service, both in and out of the pulpit, during the meeting. Glory be to God!

EUGENE JOHNSON.

HORN LAKE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed my round of protracted meetings on the Horn Lake circuit. While it is not what we desired, yet we have great reason to thank God for what he has done for us. We have had thirty-one accessions up to date—and we think others will join—and as many or more conversions.

Bro. J. W. Bell, of Hernando and Coldwater, helped us at one meeting, and Bro. T. J. Herron of the C. P. Church, helped us at another meeting. Both did good and faithful work, for which they will accept our thanks. I have held two meetings without any ministerial help; but God was there, the church worked, and we had a glorious time.

I am well up with my Conference collections. Have it all but a little, in money and good subscription. Have paid $50 to foreign missions.

The church is in a good condition, spiritually; nothing lacking, only the work is a little behind with the preacher's salary, but we think it will all be paid as we are serving a good people. To God be all the glory!

A. P. LEECH.

COCKRUM, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have wound up the ball of protracted meetings, and will pen you the results. I have had forty conversions, and fifty additions to the church. I do not know that I have ever had as good meetings as I have had this season. At two of my meetings I never saw the power of the Spirit so signally displayed. Beside the conviction and conversion of sinners, backsliders of long standing were reclaimed and made to rejoice in their first love.

And, Mr. Editor, what rejoiced me greatly was to have conversions ranging from eight to fifty years of age. I am always glad to see old men and women converted, but gladder to see the children. As I realize the very potent fact that the future success of the church is in the children, give me the children, and I will invade the empire of the enemy, and conquer it for Christ much sooner and easier than I can with the old who have had no training in the church. God bless the children and youths of our Zion!

H. L. VAUGHN.

SEPTEMBER 15, 1887.

HOMER, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Just returned from Lisbon, where we have had a gracious baptism. Many converted, and ten precious souls added to the church. The membership wonderfully revived and quickened. Our Arizona meeting was pentecostal—fifteen additions to the church, leaving only two or three in the neighborhood out of the ark of Christ's church. Almost the same state of things at Lisbon. With young men's prayer meetings and Woman's Missionary Societies, etc., at Homer, Arizona and Lisbon, we realize that we are a live and working church. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ" for these successes all along the line! People, kind, hospitable, generous. The church has backbone. We sent Dr. Kelley $87 15 in week of prayer and self-denial.

In Christ, affectionately,

T. R. WHITE.

SOUTH BOSSIER, LA.

MR. EDITOR: We began a protracted meeting at Cotton Valley, on Saturday, August 27, and continued one week. Results: nine accessions to the church, and membership greatly revived. Bro. Foust, of the North Bossier circuit, was with us, and did good preaching till the close, for which we are very thankful.

Last Tuesday we buried one of our best members at Pleasant Valley, Bro. W. C. Harrison.

The work is improving generally. We bless God, and take courage. Yours in Christ,

HENRY S. JOHNS.

WAYNESBORO, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed a very gracious meeting at this place (Waynesboro). There were quite a number of very bright and joyful conversions. The church and whole community revived and reconsecrated.

There were ten accessions to the church, and I think others will follow. The meeting is said to have been the best ever known here. To God be all the praise!

Your brother,

E. F. EDIAR.

Dedication Day at Robeline, La.

MR. EDITOR: Our Methodist people here, in Robeline, have great cause for thankfulness that our efforts to build a house to the Lord our God have been crowned with such signal success. About one year ago, under the most discouraging circumstances, this work was undertaken, and by perseverance, the united efforts of our people and the blessing of God we now send the glad tidings to all our friends, that the work is done, and that the first Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Robeline, La., stands complete, neatly and tastefully furnished, a thing of beauty and the admiration of my people. Let our friends rejoice with us.

Sunday, August 21—the day of dedication—was lovely in the extreme, and, as our new church bell pealed forth that the hour of service was at hand, all nature seemed to smile, and our people could appreciate, perhaps, more sensibly than ever before the sentiments of the Psalmist, when he said, "The mountains skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs." The people of the surrounding country had been notified through the papers, and otherwise, of the time of dedication, and at the hour of service our church was filled to its utmost capacity. God put it into the heart of Bishop C. B. Galloway not to disappoint us; so at the appointed time he chose this text—"O Lord, I beseech thee, send now prosperity"—and preached an hour and a half to a delighted congregation. After giving a clear and concise statement of the negative side of his subject, and making some judicious criticisms on the views of many in relation thereto, he proceeded to discuss forcefully "in what consisted the prosperity of the church." The Bishop was in his happiest mood. Every point was well taken, and every nail driven and clinched with a master's hand. Expressions of supreme satisfaction were given here and there over the congregation, with an audible "Amen." After the sermon, and before the dedicatory exercises, the Bishop lifted in a few minutes, in cash and subscription, more than enough to pay the indebtedness on the church. We were all delighted to hear the Bishop stress the Word, in the address to the officers of the church: "Set apart from all unhallowed or common uses." It is too often the case that our houses of worship, dedicated to the service of Almighty God, are used for unhallowed or common purposes. May God help every pastor, for it is the duty of the pastor to see to it that our Discipline, in letter and in spirit, is fully carried out on this subject.

At four P. M., on Sunday, to a large congregation, the Bishop delivered a lecture on "Prohibition." His reputation as a successful leader and lecturer in this cause had preceded him, and, of course, the multitude were eager to hear what he had to say. He lectured for one hour and forty minutes to an audience apparently enthused—all wishing him to continue. His argument was logical and conclusive. All were convinced that his position on the subject was a correct one. He clearly proved, among other positions taken, that no such thing as a sumptuary law really existed in this country, and that the word "sumptuary," as applied to the prohibition law, was simply an ignis fatuus, intended by designing men to mislead the unwary. The lecture has gone forth on its errand of love and mercy, and I am sure it will produce abundant fruit in all time to come.

When Bishop Galloway arrived on Saturday morning, I had a protracted meeting in progress, assisted by Rev. J. B. Cassity, our presiding elder, and Rev. J. M. Beard, of Mansfield, La. Bishop Galloway entered into the spirit of our meeting at once, and at eleven A. M. preached a soul-stirring sermon from the text—"For he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye." Also on Monday following, at eleven A. M., he preached an excellent sermon from the text—"I am debtor both to the Greeks, and to the barbarians; both to the wise, and to the unwise." The fruit of the Bishop's visit among our people is apparent; but none can estimate the result of his labors. He has won the golden opinions of our people. May his sheaves for the Master be a thousandfold!

The work of my protracted meeting, thus so auspiciously begun, continued to grow in interest and power under the fostering care and glowing zeal of Bros. Cassity and Beard. The Holy Spirit was in every sermon preached. God owned and blessed their labors abundantly, in reviving the membership of the church, reclaiming backsliders, and the conversion of souls. There were four accessions and four conversions. I had to close my meeting temporarily to meet engagements elsewhere. Will renew the attack soon. An unusual spiritual interest at all my appointments. Am looking and praying for a glorious harvest. More anon. R. S. ISBELL.

Two Camp Ground Scenes.

"I stood on the bridge at midnight." A chasm, spanned by mighty bars and tires and beams and pillars, a strong and gigantic thing, space defying; a bridge of man's workmanship—a railroad bridge, over which the booming locomotive took unhesitatingly its way, and trains of ladened cars flew over in safety. Beneath, in the deep valley, a sleeping multitude. The moon made earth bright and lovely with its rays, and lent to every grotesque shape a graceful curve and shadow, a line of beauty. Unutterable peace!

Hist! I thought—yes, it was a cry! Oh, mournful, chilling, horrifying scream of awful agony! Above the sudden hum of voices it rose, terrific: "Oh, my God, my child!" Then sudden stillness. Then again: "Oh, my God, my child—is—dead—dead—dead! Oh, save him! save him! See—he dies! Oh, my God, my child! my precious child! my darling boy! Oh, great Lord, my only, only one—my all is dead—dead—dead!" And, now, once more that pleading, heart-rending cry, ending in one piercing shriek, throbbing, rushing, filling all the air with its thrills and thrills of quivering misery. Silence. A voice at my side, murmuring: "Oh, would she call thus loudly on God to save his soul? Oh, would she?"

When next the voice rose on the midnight air it spoke forth joyous praise to God; no longer seeking to stab the blue vault of heaven and reach him on his throne, and command by its trumpet eloquence the mercy of an unheeding God; but in softer strains, speaking, as to one near and dear, words of heartfelt gratitude.

* * * * * *

Years have rushed past, one by one, led by the swift locomotive, Time. Twenty peaceful years, in which Divine Goodness had made souls happy, by his descending grace, in this "grand junction" of Christian freight trains—trains, loaded with the responsibility of men, to bring to Jesus!

Again, standing under the same stars, watching the same calm moon sail through the hillowy clouds, near the self-same bridge, I saw a lightning express round the curve and rapidly approach. Its light shone on the tires and spaces, gleamed on the polished rails and spike-heads, and threw its increasing radiance on the figure of a man—a man prone on the bridge, dead—dead asleep or (terrible thought!) dead drunk! Too late for any human power to save—too late! Over the insensible form came the cruel cars, and then swept on, leaving a crushed and torn and mangled, bleeding object—no longer a man.

The news flew from lip to lip, the crowds, of sleeping people were roused, and soon the horrible body was surrounded by crowds, removed from the bridge, and the few marks of identity found. Tottering from the awe-struck circle came a woman—a woman furrowed by care, withered by age and blanched by agony. Bending over the mutilated remains, she gently touched the piece of coat clinging yet. With slow, benumbed movement she took out a letter. It was her son! No tear fell, no cry arose now; but, turning to the waiting throng, with awful calm, she said: "In this letter I told my only son, I would that God had been merciful enough to take him from me that night when, twenty years ago, I thought him leaving me and called on God to save him. Oh! better, better that than a drunkard's lot. Oh! that he had died, a pure, unspotted soul, and gone to Him! Now my old age is filled with mourning, too painful for cries and tears. My son's spirit—where will it take its everlasting flight to-night?"

Ah! that she had prayed as loudly, as earnestly for the salvation of his immortal life as for his physical welfare!

Woman's Work.

MR. EDITOR: As you never seem to grow tired, but each week give prominence to mission work, we come with our part and ask for the encouragement of the old workers, as well as those who have recently enlisted, to favor us again, that we may show them how the Lord has blessed us. Steadily are we growing in numbers. Societies have been organized in places that have but lately awakened to a sense of their duty. Several dead auxiliaries have been revived, and the interest deepens and broadens. God is helping us.

Our first quarter we reported eleven new auxiliaries; the second, just forwarded Miss Helm, speaks for itself. Since June ten new auxiliaries, two revived, adding 187 new members; three juvenile societies, with 67 members. Total members, 1,310. While our president, Mrs. Juliana Hayes, was with us last July she revived the work greatly. Made six life members, adding $120 to our treasury, besides many new workers. The report from nearly every auxiliary is cheering. We, as a society, have cause to rejoice: This work is not all for the heathen. We received a rich reward, a refreshing of our own spirits. We feel the influence of the Holy Spirit, and can desire no better proof of its acceptance of God than what he has given us in our own Bettie Hughes, our young missionary, who is now on her way to China. A friend, writing of the day of her departure from Meridian, says: "All day there seemed something so sweet and peaceful about her. She seemed lifted above the affairs of this life. I never saw her look so sweet and lovely, or speak with more earnestness, or have brighter hopes. It was good to be with her. There was a sacredness about the place I can not describe."

She leaves father, mother, sisters and brothers; gave them into the hands of the Lord to keep, while she goes forth to battle. Could we desire any more? Oh, sisters, God is with us; let us be more faithful to our duty. Miss Bettie, in company with four of our Board and several others, sail from San Francisco, the twenty-first, on "City of Pekin." Let our prayers follow them. There has been no trouble in raising the required amount for the outfit. It came promptly, and loving friends prepared her wardrobe. All was done that could be for her welfare and comfort. We who could not assist in this last labor of love feel that we were deprived of a great privilege. Now, that we will soon have a representative in the great field of heathendom, let us come up with our prayers and renewed consecration to the cause of "woman's work for woman." Let us work as we never have before. God may honor us again by calling some dear young girl to follow. Then we must be ready. Sit not idle, but go forth sowing seed for the Master.

Departure of Miss Hughes.

Last week Miss L. Elizabeth Hughes, who had been accepted by the Board of Missions, and assigned to work in China, took her departure from Meridian, Miss. A large gathering of friends came to bid her good-by on the night of the twelfth instant at Mrs. Smylie's. After spending an hour with her in pleasant conversation, prayer was offered for her safety on her journey and success in her labors, by Rev. A. D. McVoy, her devoted friend and teacher.

It will be recollected that, three years ago, a call was made to educate a young lady as a missionary at the E. M. F. College, at Meridian. This call was promptly responded to by contributions from different States, which continued to come while she remained in college for two years, defraying nearly the whole of her expenses at reduced rates. Miss Hughes passed a brilliant examination before the Board of Missions. She impressed everyone as an earnest, devoted, faithful Christian, eminently adapted to the work. In addition to what had hitherto been collected for her here, at Seashore Camp Meeting, and, in addition to the amount sent for her outfit and traveling expenses, about eighteen dollars were contributed by the congregation here on the Sabbath before her departure to furnish some additional necessities, and a little pocket money on the journey. Meridian has surely done nobly. She was fully equipped for her work. She was born at Daleville, Lauderdale county, Miss., and is about twenty-four years of age.

It was an affecting sight to witness the final scene. Not an eye was dry that looked upon her for the last time. There were her aged father, her sister and her brother, borne down with grief, yet bearing themselves up with calm resignation. The mother had been left at home, enduring the separation from her cherished daughter with wonderful Christian fortitude. She, herself, though feeling keenly this long separation, was greatly sustained by the feeling that she was now stepping in the path where the voice of duty called from above, and, with calm resignation, she bid us all an affectionate farewell.

She was joined at Artesia by Miss Addie Gordon and Miss Lula Lipscomb. These three young missionaries are Mississippi's contribution of Methodism to the China Mission—and a precious contribution it is, for they are well-educated young ladies.

Thirty years ago Bro. Lambuth and his wife left Mrs. Smylie's home for China, and now Miss Hughes leaves the same home for the same distant land.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Review of the Modern Fathers.

A Consideration of the Theories of Modern Methodist Writers, and of the Historic and Scriptural Doctrines of the Methodists.

BY REV. JNO. M. CROW, A. M., Louisville Conference.

Dr. Fitzgerald says: "This Review of the Modern Fathers is clearly the product of a mind that has wrestled manfully with the questions discussed. He has something to say, and says it in his own way. The glow of earnestness gilds and warms every page. He gives a reason for all his positions, and dogmatizes delightfully. He criticises his seniors modestly and respectfully. Transparent love of truth characterizes the book. He fights in the open field and uses the weapons of honorable warfare."

Briefs.

The proceedings of the seventeenth Annual Convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union has been sent us by our friend, D. H. Buckley, Esq. It was held at Walnut Street Theatre, in Philadelphia. The report of the secretary showed a membership of 50,924 and 757 societies in the United States. Master Workmen Powderly, of the Knights of Labor, was present as a delegate, and said, in the course of his remarks, that he "had not tasted intoxicating liquor for nineteen years; had been among all nationalities, and had always found that the one great curse of life was intemperance. Wherever he found misfortune and sorrow he could trace its source to liquor." This Roman Catholic movement is destined to become a power for good.

Prof. Drummond, author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," delighted the large audiences at Mr. Moody's Bible Meetings in Northfield, Mass., by his address and sermons. We give our readers a sample of his preaching on I Corinthians xiii:

We find by analysis that love is a compound thing like light. As a man takes a prism and lets the light show through it, and the light is broken and separated into elements, so we can analyze love and get the spectrum and elements of it. And by it we get common names representing ordinary virtues which can be practiced by all. The nine names, colors of the spectrum of love, are: Patience, kindness, generosity, humility, courtesy, unselfishness, good temper, guilelessness and sincerity. These constitute the supreme gift—the stature of the perfect man. They relate to man to-day, not to-morrow or in eternity. Patience, "love suffereth long," represents love as passive. Waiting to begin. Kindness represents love as active. Christ's time was largely taken up in making people happy. There is but one greater thing than happiness, and that is holiness, which is not in our keeping; so the greatest thing we can do is kindness. After these things have been done we must go back into the shade. Generosity is a part of love. Love is not puffed up, which shows that we must have humility. Love does not behave itself unseemly. Politeness has been described as love in little things. Love "seeketh not her own," and, therefore, is unselfish. A man prides himself on standing up for his rights, but he should give up his own if necessary. There is no happiness in having or in getting, but in giving and in serving others. He that would be great, let him serve: and he that would be happy, let him give. Love is not easily provoked, and good temper is a requisite. It is commonly spoken of as if a bad temper is an infirmity or a misfortune, but it is not a thing to smile at. It is a blot on our otherwise perfect life. It is the blackest sin and is a symbol of a want of love at the bottom. It shows that he must go to the root and smother his whole nature. How can a man with this lack of love enter the kingdom. Guilelessness is love which thinketh no evil. Courtesy is love in society, good temper is love restraining, guilelessness is love believing, and sincerity, love learning. Guilelessness is the virtue for suspicious people. Love does not rejoice in this or that issue, but in the truth.

Waiting at the Pool.

My prejudices against the poets are giving way, and I have lately come to think that Mr. Longfellow was "really" a right clever fellow, using the work "clever" in the English sense. The reason of this change in my mind is that I have been testing the philosophy of one of Longfellow's lines, and have proved it to be eminently true. I came to this place to test the virtue of these waters. I had heard and read of that virtue, but had no experience in the matter. After all, what does a man know outside of his personal experience? So I came to test and try and have an experience. I came with a very large faith, founded upon the narratives of prudent and judicious friends; and faith is always and in anything a capital fluid. I came with the resolution to make the experiment as thorough as possible, and to give to it an abundance of time, but had no idea I would devote four solid and uninterrupted weeks to it. The fact is, I secretly thought that I could not be spared from the ADVOCATE office that length of time; but now I publicly say that I have come to believe that the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE would not collapse if I should never get back to the office again. How prone we mortals are to imagine that a great deal of progress depends upon our individual effort, and if we could not do our part, many things would gallop to the dogs! I have come to recognize a sly sarcasm from Paul's pen, in his Epistle to the Galatians, when he uses these words: "James, Cephas and John, who seemed to be pillars." If those "first three" were only seeming pillars, we little folks need not lay the "flattering unction to our souls" that we or our work is indispensable to the development of God's providence. When I came here, my faith was so large and my hope so high and my desire so eager and my dollars so few that I expected to leave within twenty-one days a cured man. But, as the days began to run into weeks, and faith to weaken and hope to lower, and dollars became fewer, it began also to dawn upon my mind that there was a sense to the poet's line,

"Learn to labor and to wait,"

which I had never appreciated; and, after studying it somewhat, I have reached the conclusion that "waiting" is as much an art and as much to be studied as "laboring."

The fact, as we see it in every-day life, is that nothing excites more impatience and calls forth more ugly language from men and women than having to wait. If a man has to wait for his dinner, he gets as snappish as a cur. If he must wait for the train, the whole railroad fraternity becomes the object of his vituperation. The sick man can't wait for his medicine to act upon his physical nature. And so it is everywhere and in everything: the hardest thing to do is "to wait." It is an art to be learned. It does not come naturally. It requires close study and persistent practice to bring the art to perfection. Well, this lesson I have been studying; and the more I study it, the more I am impressed with the profound philosophy of the poet, when he exhorts us:

"Learn to labor and to wait."

How often the same exhortation is found in the Scripture: "Wait on the Lord." David said: "I waited patiently for the Lord." We read of quite a company of sick folks at Bethesda's Pool "waiting for the moving of the waters." And here by these waters I have been waiting these four weeks for the healing that I so much need and so ardently desire.

The lessons to be derived from this waiting are many and valuable, and I trust will be of as much service to me and to the church as the health which this waiting is bringing me.

C. W. C.

Facts in Connection with the Cure of the Man Born Blind.

BY T. A. S. ADAMS, D. D.

1. His blindness was not direct evidence of sin in either him or his parents. We should be careful lest we call that a judgment which is only a providence. Instead of any punishment inflicted on this man, either directly or indirectly, his sufferings were all incidental to the revealment of the divine goodness to the very ones who were discussing the question of sin. That physical disease is remotely traceable to sin may or may not be proved. The present case shows only this: There is evil, both moral and physical, in the world; whether the former is due to the latter or not, it is true that a physical disease may be allowed or created, if from that the divine power can be shown in presenting the cure of the moral.

2. The use of clay and spittle seemed irrelevant to the cure of the disease. The Jewish physicians, like ours, had very fine theories of diseases and their cure. But still their patients grew worse or, at least, no better. Somehow those of Jesus always got well. That the clay and spittle were the physical remedy in this case I fully believe. That the same treatment would have cured the next blind man I do not believe, or Jesus would have used it. But Jesus knew all things. He knew the physical cause of the disease, and the physical remedy for that special case. That there was any miraculous virtue imparted to the clay and spittle I do not believe. The miracle was in the knowledge of Jesus. Nobody knew what to do for the poor man; Jesus knew exactly. He did not need to thumb over books or compare similar cases. He knew this by itself.

3. "I went and washed." Why he should have been told to go when he could not see—never had seen—the way to Siloam, is not easily explained. Jesus seems to command the impossible as well as to do it. But we may note the fact that, although born blind, the man was expecting somebody to cure him. Human nature is always expecting the impossible. Sinners are expecting to go to heaven, yet they know that the unclean shall not enter there. On the other hand, the order to go to Siloam is not so impossible of execution—the man had legs, and his sense of sight had been largely substituted in feeling. Jesus will not use any power in helping when we can help ourselves. The man could walk, and wash after he got to the pool. He was commanded to do what he could, even under the gravest difficulties. These are no excuse for not obeying in all cases. I think, to considerable extent, all our faculties are subject to our personal will-power. I believe thousands die annually because they wont live. The man exercised all his powers, and God showed that he was fit to be trusted with more. It is literally true that none are so blind as they that will not see. How forcibly did Jesus present this truth to those self-sufficient, skeptical Jews who came to open the discussion with him!

4. Side issues. The Jews assume Jesus to be a sinner. They, therefore, accept the fact of the cure, but say to the man, "Give God the praise." What sanctimonious impiety! Of course, the poor fellow thanked God; but, if he did, was that any reason why he should revile the man who had touched him? They next appeal to the man's parents. They reply that he is himself a competent witness. A return to him raises a new question, viz: Here is a man who has cured a blind man in your very midst, and you know nothing about him, while you pretend to know all about Moses who lived fifteen centuries ago! A truly wonderful thing. You are making a great noise about me and the way I was cured. I tell you exactly how it occurred, and you say you do not believe a word of it. Here you say you take Moses for your proof, and yet you can not state one fact as existing between you.

We deduce the following from these facts:

1. The unconverted is not in a condition to prescribe the means of his conversion. Think of this man yelling out, as Jesus begins to apply the clay: "What are you doing? Stop! That's not according to reason!"—and such like expressions. He was born blind—he knew nothing reasonable or unreasonable in the matter of eye-salve. Yet the unconverted—the man born blind to spiritual light—pretends that God's methods of converting are absurd.

2. The conversion of one man in a certain way does not make it necessary that another should be converted in the same way. They may seem to be affected exactly alike. Of this matter God is judge; and every convicted sinner must pay more attention to the divine convictions than to human directions. Many a man is kept for months and years in darkness because he listens rather to the directions of spiritual quacks. Since Jesus came into the world he is accessible to everyone that will come to him; and no unconverted man has any business stopping and trying the eye-water of those shopkeepers at the door. Go in, and let Jesus heal you.

3. No one is a competent witness of spiritual things except a converted man. Those who have witnessed the change in another can not say whether it is the divine power. The parents of the blind man rejoiced; but they were incompetent to testify that the man had his own eyes or how they were restored. As a magician, the Lord might have put the man under a spell, and sent him around at will. But a cross-examination of the witness shows that he is evidently master of his own movements and uses his own faculties. Christianity can never become a matter of tradition, hearsay or of philosophy. It is a system of facts. It can never fossilize. No writer of history will ever theorize as to its growth as geologists do in reference to the earth's strata. Gibbon and others have tried it, and shown their supreme stupidity. The testimony never dies. It lives in every converted man. He knows that he has a new sense and a new life. He knows that he was blind—he knows that he sees. Other facts may become foggy; these never can. However well others may be satisfied with their old objections, he knows that those objections are not worth the breath that utters them.

4. Christianity will never go to sleep upon the issues that involve humanity's interest. When the machine-makers and bosses have come in and monopolized the grace of God, and propose to leave the great masses of mankind in slavery, ignorance and poverty, Jesus will appear without among the reeking crowds, and, where pollution seems to have done its worst, and hell seems to have fixed guaranty titles instead of mere mortgages and trust-deeds, there will he do his works of divine power and infinite grace. But since his witnesses can never die—however corrupt the church may seem to have grown—God will see to it that a pure seed shall be left; and his grace in the church will triumph at the last.

Prisoners of the Lord.—A Sermon.

(Ephesians iv, 1.)

Paul declared himself a prisoner of the Lord. He had been apprehended, and was safely placed and kept in the confines of divine grace. All true children of God are prisoners after this manner. Let's see about it.

1. Is there a court-warrant for arrest? Certainly. "Compel them to come in." With stentorian voice resounds the command throughout the land: "Prepare to meet thy God!"

2. Sinners assiduously seek to evade arrest. Like criminals shadowed by detectives, fleeing from State to State, sinners hide behind all manner of subterfuges. God laments: "Ye will not come unto me, that you might have life."

3. Heaven's officers tire not in effecting arrests. They go into all the world, seeking luckless sinners who, like Cain, endeavor to hide themselves from the face of God. From the dominion of atheism, from the precincts of superstition, from the marshes and morasses of debauchery and devilish vices many prisoners are brought in. Many lost sheep found in the wilderness.

4. As prisoners of the Lord, we are safe in the arms of Jesus. Satan has great wrath; he would, if he could, wrest us from our safe confines and, spiritually, lynch us. Christian encountered lions, but not on the way to the Golden City.

5. Our prison life affords great benefit. We are dead to the world. Now we live subjectively; are free from the corroding cares of morbid ambition's wild chase. It was in a dungeon that John Bunyan devised his "Pilgrim's Progress." Our lives being hid with Christ in God, we, too, often stand on Pisgah's height and view the loved landscapes of Canaan. Yes, there are restraints; we must not conform to this world; but all this redounds to our good. Luther, at first, believed his confinement at Wartburg a great affliction; but it saved him from the persecution and possible execution at the hands of an enraged Pope. And, besides, during the two years of nominal prison life at Wartburg, he found the necessary quiet and leisure for the great work of translating the Bible in his mother-tongue.

6. May a Christian fall from grace? Certainly. Our experience answers loudly in the affirmative. We are assured of the possibility, for often there was but a narrow frith between us and recurring dark despair. We may fall from grace, as prisoners may break out of prison—a difficult task. Thick walls of mercy surround us; iron doors of a bright Christian experience shut us in. Above and beneath we discover divine goodness. Break out? It is possible; but, no, we will not. Said Peter: "Where shall we go?" The Count of Monte Cristo broke out of prison, and, with dagger in hand, exclaimed, "The world is mine!" But, alas! the fashion of this world passeth away.

7. The prisoners of the Lord are (Zechariah ix, 12) prisoners of hope. The things hoped for will soon be realized. On the sweet fields of Eden there is liberation. There we shall know even as also we are known. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, what God has prepared for them that love him." Soon faith will give way to blissful sight; soon hope to rapturous fruition.

JEAN PAUL.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Southwestern Methodist records that, at a late meeting of the St. Louis preachers, Dr. John Mathews reported for his charge, Centenary, as follows:

During the year there have been 355 accessions; seventy adults and 50 children baptized; 104 removed with letter; 17 deaths; 41 left without letter, or otherwise lost sight of. Total gain, 355; total loss, 163; net gain, 192. Spiritual condition of the church, good. Greater interest manifested in class meetings.

Notes.

We take this clear-cut statement from an exchange:

High license in Jerusalem.—"If Judas had received $1,000 instead of thirty pieces of silver, would God have justified his conduct?"—Canon Wilberforce.

The distinguished English divine puts the high license idea in its proper place. Christians do not want the liquor traffic at any license.

This cheering news we clip from the Toronto Christian Guardian:

French Protestantism is making praiseworthy efforts to combat socialism and materialism on the one hand, and ultramontanism on the other. A circular has been addressed to the Protestant ministers and laymen of France, suggesting the formation of an "Association for the Practical Study of Social Questions." Evangelical religion in that country is in need of all the strength which union can give, and this combination of its forces for the purpose of counteracting the spread of skepticism and intolerant ecclesiasticism is a wise and opportune movement on the side of truth. The proposed association will employ the Revue de Theologie Pratique and other religious organs in the presentation of evangelical truth, and in opposing skeptical error. The best thought and feeling of Protestant France are behind the movement, and will strive earnestly for success.

This, from the same paper, is worthy of thought:

Mr. Gladstone once said that "the practice of systematic beneficence will prove the moral specific in our age." It may safely be asserted that if the practice of systematic giving according to ability was general in the church, it would bring into the treasury ample means to carry on effectively all the social and religious enterprises of the age. If it was important in the apostolic age, when the church embraced comparatively few, for every man to give according as God had prospered him in his gatherings, it is a still more important element of success now, when the church embraces millions, to bring all the tithes into God's storehouse. God has placed in the hands of those who belong to the church abundant means to carry on his work in the world. All that is needed is liberality to use it aright. The best use that can be made of wealth is to apply it to help forward those movements that bless and elevate our fellow-men and honor Christ.

Looking over our few acres of Christian effort, we may imagine that not much progress is being made in the evangelization of the world. Taking a view of the entire field, however, we find everything to encourage. The Son of God is moving grandly to the conquest of the nations. Says the Missionary Advocate:

We look back on the first ages of Christianity, and sigh for the gifts of tongues and for pentecostal blessing; and yet in the last century more has been done to give the Bible to the world than was done in the first ten centuries of our era. Twenty versions at the most were made in a thousand years; in the last one hundred years one hundred and twenty have been made in languages spoken by more than half the globe. There are more conversions in heathen countries in the present day, in proportion to the number of preachers employed, than there are at home. Even when Constantine proclaimed Christianity as the religion of the Roman Empire, the nominal Christians did not exceed one-hundredth part of the population of the entire globe. Nominal Christians now form one-fifth. Each new generation of the modern world consists of 30,000,000 of children, and they have to be Christianized one by one. Of these 30,000,000, 6,000,000 (one-fifth) become nominally Christian, and a considerable portion of them really Christian.

We can not believe that in our patronizing Conferences there are any men who can justly be styled self-seeking presiding elders. However, it will do no harm for all of our preachers to read the following:

Methodist preachers profess to find their providential work at the hands of the Bishop. If they seek their own work and try to secure it through the influence of their friends, they falsify their profession and do violence to the polity of the church to which they belong. If the doctrine or polity of a church does not suit a member, if he is honest he will withdraw at once. Remaining in a church is prima facie evidence that he believes her doctrines, is satisfied with her polity, and intends to obey her requirements. How, then, can any good Methodist pastor figure for his own appointment, or seek the office of presiding elder and try to get the influence of friends in securing the appointment? No good Methodist will do either, and a man who is not a good Methodist is certainly not the man for presiding elder. A presiding elder should be a man of middle age, with experience, ability, adaptation and piety, and one whose righteous soul abhors the modern and un-Methodistic fashion of scheming and wire-pulling. He ought to be a good judge of human nature, able to read a man at a glance, and one who has learned how to talk, and how not to talk, as the occasion may require. He ought to be a level-headed man, with practical common sense. "Uncommon sense" is no doubt all right in its place, but its place is not in the presiding eldership. "Star preachers" do not make good presiding elders. Their orbits are too eccentric to fit the grooves of a district. We object to any man for presiding elder who has sought the office, or done so much as turn his hand over to secure the appointment. While we remain in the itinerancy, we prefer to serve under Methodists who love God, and not under place-seekers and schemers. We want godly and manly men whom we can respect.

North Mississippi Conference Notice.

I wish to call the attention of the brethren to the resolution adopted at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference in reference to the publication of the minutes, viz: "That preachers in charge of circuits, stations and missions be required to collect from their respective charges the sum of one dollar to defray the expense of publication." If we fail to carry out this resolution, it is probable there will be no minutes next year.

The Tide Is Rising.

We have reports from the Missouri, Western Virginia and St. Louis Conferences. The collections reported for foreign missions at the Missouri Conference show an advance upon the collections of last year of $1,007 30; while the collections reported at the Western Virginia Conference are nearly double those of last year. The St. Louis Conference reports an increase of $776 16. The tide is rising.

Several weeks will elapse before some of the Conferences will meet. Will each pastor make a prayerful effort to bring up his foreign missionary assessment in full? "The Master hath need of it." The fields are open and men are waiting to go. The success of our missions is largely in the hands of the preachers.

The College at Port Gibson.

Port Gibson Female College opens well. The buildings are undergoing beautifying repairs. The plasterer's trowel and the painter's brush are being used by skillful hands, and the house within will soon be as fresh and cheery as the shades without are inviting and airy. The girls are smiling at the new dress the old college is putting on, and the faculty are happy at the prospects of a successful session. So parents may send their girls along, assured that they will be made comfortable and be well taught at Port Gibson.

Consumption, Wasting Diseases,

And General Debility. Doctors disagree as to the relative value of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites: the one supplying strength and flesh, the other giving nerve power, and acting as a tonic to the digestive and entire system. But in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites the two are combined, and the effect is wonderful. Thousands who have derived no permanent benefit from other preparations have been cured by this. Scott's Emulsion is perfectly palatable and is easily digested by those who can not tolerate plain Cod Liver Oil.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement to our agents for the securing of new subscribers from this date, we make the following offer:

For eight new subscribers, with cash in full, one set of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary—four volumes—bound in half Morocco; or for six new subscribers the full set bound in extra fine English cloth, sprinkled edge.

Here is an opportunity to secure one of the best Commentaries ever published. Read the following testimonials:

Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

This Commentary has received the hearty commendation of a large number of the leading publishers, biblical scholars, preachers and Sunday-school workers of the country. It is thorough, modern, compact, condensed and cheap. Its immense popularity is deserved. It is specially adapted to the family. "It is the cream of the Commentaries collected by three eminent scholars." Nowhere have we seen more valuable matter packed in the same space—four large 12mo. volumes. Price, $8.00.

T. O. Summers, D. D., LL.D., late Dean of Theological Department of Vanderbilt University, Professor of Systematic Theology; and Book Editor of M. E. Church, South.

I have the Commentary and make good use of it. It is plain, evangelical, and is a cheap and good Commentary. The notes indicate sound learning and extensive research. We endorse their exegesis in general as scholarly, sound and edifying.

A. M. Shipp, D. D., late Professor of Exegetical Theology, Vanderbilt University.

I take pleasure in saying that the Commentary of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown is a valuable, critical practical, and explanatory exposition of the Old and New Testaments, and is regularly recommended by me to my classes in Exegetical Theology.

T. F. Dodd, D. D., Professor of Hebrew, Ecclesiastical History and English Literature, Vanderbilt University.

I consider the Commentary an excellent work. Of all the complete Commentaries on the Bible I prefer this for general use. It is the one to which I resort most frequently. Considering the brevity, the perspicuity, and sound judgment displayed in its elucidation of the Sacred Text, I would advise the reader to provide himself with this in preference to all others.

Bishop J. C. Granbery.

The comments are brief, clear, pointed, thinking, practical and judicious. Few and apt words are chosen to explain the Scriptures. While they are the fruits of scholarly research and criticism, they are so plain as to be easily understood by any reader of average intellect.

Andrew A. Lipscomb, D. D., LL.D., Emeritus Professor, Vanderbilt University.

I have examined this Commentary sufficiently to express my very decided conviction of its eminent merits. It displays just the kind and degree of biblical scholarship that we need in these times, and accordingly is admirably suited to the large and growing class of Scripture students. The clear statement of facts and rules, the vigorous conciseness, the comprehensive scope of the work, commend it to the confidence and appreciation of all who seek wisdom, strength and comfort in the Holy Bible. It consults the wants of the intellect and heart; it meets these wants, and does this so thoughtfully, so compactly, and so spiritually, that I am glad of an opportunity to call public attention to its rare excellence. It is excellent, very excellent.

B. M. Palmer, D. D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La.

It may be considered as having established its claim to be recognized as among the standard Commentaries upon the Bible.

The express charges are not included in the above offer, and it must be understood that cash accompanies all orders. "Habit" is hard to overcome. If you take off the first letter, it does not change "a bit." If you take off another, you have a "bit" left. If you take off another, the whole of "it" remains. If you take off another, it is not "t" totally used up. All of which goes to show that if you wish to be rid of a bad habit, you must throw it off altogether.

IMMENSE BARGAINS.—The great piano dealer, Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., is now offering some of the greatest bargains in pianos and organs. This popular merchant means business, and he has put prices of pianos and organs down so low as to put them within the reach of all. You will be astonished to see what money can be saved by dealing at this popular house. Indeed, it is a source of pleasure to have dealings with such a house as that of Philip Werlein. Now, that the prices have been reduced, and terms offered are so convenient, every one will avail himself of the opportunity. Write to Mr. Werlein for catalogues and prices.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S

ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, and B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and epidemics are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing what is offered, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.

VERMIFUGE

Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.

Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It can frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in the selection, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The double name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.

Yours, etc., J. V. HUBBARD, M. D.

JAMARIDGE, MD.

Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

Our Young People.

A WAY THEY HAVE.

The little brown hen, with her chickens ten,
Is out for a stroll in the sunshiny weather;
"Cluck! cluck!" is her cry; "little chicks, we will try
To scratch for our living, and keep all together."

The [redacted] sheep you would think her asleep—
Is proud of her lambkin that skips through the clover.
"Dear me!" hear her say, "it is morning an May,
And lambs will be lambs—don't you know?—the world over."

Good Brindle, the cow, with a satisfied mien,
Through dingle and dell takes the path to the meadow,
And her long-legged calf, not so pretty by half,
Trots close to her side, like a frolicsome shadow.

The dear little birds that can sing without words,
Guy trifles at the robins and martins and swallows,
Have builded their nests for the ones they love best,
Safe rocking in tree-tops or hidden in hollows.

Each mother avers, if the baby be hers,
"My child is the sweetest, let whose be the other."
We declare it of you, darling Brown Eyes or Blue:
In this happy old world 'tis the way of the mother.

MR. EDITOR: As you were so kind as to publish my last letter, I thought that I would write again. I want to tell you something about our Sunday-school here in Lauderdale. We have a very fine Sunday-school. Mrs. Pigford is my teacher, and I like her very much. Dr. Stevenson said, at the first of the year, that he would give a prize to the one that memorized the most verses in the Bible. I am the only one that is working for it now. Let me tell you that there were three besides me at the beginning of the year, but they have all stopped and I am the only one that is trying to get the prize now. Well, I will close by answering some of the little cousins' questions. I will now answer Oscar David's question: There are twenty-seven books in the New Testament. I will also answer Bertie C. Felps' question: It was King Saul that was a head and shoulder taller than any of the rest of the people. It is found in I Samuel ix, 2. I will also ask a question: How old was Adam when he died? I remain, Your little friend,

HENRY P. LEWIS.

LAUDERDALE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As there are so many letters from the girls and boys, I thought that I would write one. We are having a protracted meeting at this place now. Bro. McClendon is helping papa with it, and we are looking for Bro. Harper to-day, as our quarterly meeting will be held to-morrow. I will answer Lucille and Shelby Martin's questions: "For the bed is shorter than that a man can stretch himself on it; and the covering narrower than that he can wrap himself in it." It is found in Isaiah xxviii, 20. "Galley" is found in Isaiah xxxiii, 21. I will also answer Ethel Lee's question: "Darling" is found in Psalms xxii, 20. It is also found in Psalms xxxv, 17. I will close by asking a question: Where in the Bible is "candlestick" found? I remain your little friend,

MARSHALL M. MCNHOLLAND.

FLOYD, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: As you were so kind as to print my other letters, I thought I would write again. I am going to school now, but it will close in four weeks for a short vacation. Papa is a steward of Union Church. I will not answer any questions this time, but will ask the little cousins several questions: How many times is "Rhoda" mentioned in the Bible, and where found? How many chapters, words and verses are in the Bible? How many times does the word "Lord" occur in the Bible? How many times does the word "reverend" occur in the Bible? What verse in the Bible contains all the letters of the alphabet except the letter "j"? What two chapters in the Bible are alike? I will close for this time for fear that my letter will be too long. With many wishes to the ADVOCATE.

A Quaint Little Sermon.

Mr. Harvey was riding slowly along the dusty road, looking in all directions for a stream, or even a house, where he might refresh his tired, thirsty horse with a good draught of water. While he was thinking and wondering, he turned an abrupt bend in the road, and saw before him a comfortable farmhouse; and, at the same time, a boy ten or twelve years old came out into the road with a small pail, and stood directly before him.

"What do you wish, my boy?" said Mr. Harvey, stopping his horse.

"Would your horse like a drink, sir?" said the boy, respectfully.

"Indeed he would, and I was wondering where I could obtain it."

Mr. Harvey thought little of it, supposing, of course, the boy earned a few pennies in this manner; and, therefore, he offered him a bit of silver, and was astonished to see him refuse it.

"I would like you to take it," he said, looking earnestly at the child and observing for the first time that he limped slightly.

"Indeed, sir, I don't want it. It is little enough I can do for myself or anyone. I am lame, and my back is bad, sir; and mother says, no matter how small a favor may seem, if it is all we are capable of, God loves it as much as he does a very large favor. And this is the most I can do for others. You see, sir, the distance from Pamesville is eight miles to this spot, and I happen to know there is no stream crossing the road that distance; and so, sir, almost everyone passing here from that place is sure to have a thirsty horse."

Mr. Harvey looked down into the gray eyes that were kindling and growing with thought of doing good to others; and a moisture gathered in his own as, a moment later, he jogged off, pondering deeply upon the quaint little sermon that had been delivered so innocently and unexpectedly.—Youth's Companion.

WHERE HE LEARNED IT.—He was a pretty little fellow, but it was his manners, not his looks, that attracted everybody—clerks in the stores, people in the horse-cars, men, women, and children. A boy four years old who, if anybody said to him, "How do you do?" answered, "I am well, thanks;" and if he had a request to make, be it of friend or stranger, began it with "Please." And the beauty of it was that the "thanks" and "please" were so much a matter of course to the child that he never knew he was doing anything at all noticeable.

"How cunning it is," said a showy woman to his mother as they sat at dinner at the public table of a hotel one day, "to hear that child thank the waiters and say 'please' when he wants anything. I never saw anything so sweet. My children have to be constantly told if I want them to thank people. How well you must have taught him, that he never forgets."

"He has always been accustomed to it," said the mother. "We have always said 'please' to him when we wished him to do anything, and have thanked him. He knows no other way."

The showy woman looked as if she did not need any further explanation of the way in which habits are formed.

Probably you do not.—Wide Awake.

A little girl six years old was on a visit to her grandfather, who was a New England divine celebrated for his logical powers. "Only think, grandpa, what Uncle Robert says!" "What does he say, my dear?" "Why, he says the moon is made of green cheese. It isn't at all, is it?" "Well, child, suppose you find out yourself!" "How can I, grandpa?" "Get your Bible and see what it says." "Where shall I begin?" "Begin at the beginning." The child sat down to read the Bible. Before she got more than half through the second chapter of Genesis and had read about the creation of the stars and the animals, she came back to her grandfather, her eyes all bright with the excitement of discovery: "I've found it, grandpa! It isn't true, for God made the moon before he made any cows."

Household.

Notes for Housekeepers.

To clean nickel on stoves use soda wet in ammonia. Apply with an old tooth-brush and rub with a woolen cloth.

One part of red raspberries to six or eight parts of currants, either for canning or preserving, greatly improves the flavor of the currants.

Young children should by all means wear the spring-heeled shoes—that is to say, shoes with no heels at all, but only a thickening of the sole under the wearers heel. We know of children wearing these shoes at the age of eight years. They regret to part with them.

Instead of applying fresh blacking every time a shoe needs shining, it might be well to work up the blacking already on the shoe, which can be done by means of a moist sponge. A wise shoemaker declares that great injury is done to shoes by the plentiful use of blacking which is seldom rubbed or scraped off.

THE USE OF BLUEING.—It is well to remember that too much blueing renders clothes yellow after a time. Inexperienced or careless servants think the more blueing in the water the better for the wash; and it is a difficult matter to convince them that the clothes will look far better if only a small quantity be used. As blueing varies so much in intensity experience only can teach the required quantity. Usually half a teaspoonful to a cup of water is sufficient. It should always be diluted before it is put in the tub; as, if not thoroughly mixed before the clothes are put in, unsightly streaks will be the result. If the clothes are soaked over night one tablespoonful of pure water ammonia in each tub of water will materially lessen the labor of washing.

HOW TO PROMOTE HEALTH.—After all that has been stated of the effects of the atmosphere in high altitudes or at the level of the sea, the influence of forests and ocean, of sea coasts and interior places, humidity and dryness, cold and heat, the winds, electricity, and ozone, and no matter what of other conditions, the paramount considerations for the promotion of health are an abundance of pure air and sunshine and out-door exercise. Without these, no climate is promotive of health or propitious for the cure of disease; and with them, it is safe to say, the human powers of accommodation are such that it is difficult to distinguish the peculiarities of any climate by their joint results on the health and longevity of its subjects.—Bell's "Climatology."

LEMON CREAM PIE.—One teacupful of powdered sugar, one teaspoonful of butter, one egg, juice and grated rind of one lemon, one teacupful of boiling water, one tablespoonful of cornstarch, dissolved in cold water; stir the cornstarch into the hot water; add the butter and sugar, well beaten together; when cold, add the lemon and beaten egg. Bake in open tart without top crust.

CHEAP CAKE.—I have a cheap cake recipe which I will give you: Take two eggs, two cups sugar, one-half a cup of sweet milk, three cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder; any kind of flavoring you like. It is good. I have tried it many times.

TO WASH RED FLANNEL.—Mix two tablespoonfuls of flour in a quart of cold water and boil ten minutes; add warm suds and wash the flannel gently; rinse it in three warm waters. The brightest scarlet will never lose its color if treated thus.

Asthma.

A young man taken down with asthma was very much frightened, and went to the best physician in the place and stated his symptoms, and in great suspense awaited the response. After several questions, the answer was: "Long life and ill health. Your disease is asthma." The first clause of the physician's answer comforted the young man, who feared death was near. But the second clause, given after waiting a little while, depressed his spirits to nearly as low a point as he had reached when he entered the doctor's office. This consultation was held before the discovery of our Compound Oxygen. By its use multitudes of sufferers from asthma have been cured. A monograph giving reports of cases of asthma, and our brochure, "Compound Oxygen—Its Mode of Action and Results," of two hundred pages, can be had free on application either in person or at our office. Address Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Why You Feel

So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect, with stagnant water and defective sewerage, as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and fluids of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

"The Life of the Body."

Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indescribable symptoms?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "head and shoulders" above every other Alterative and Blood Medicine. As proof, read these reliable testimonies:

G. C. Brock, of Lowell, Mass., says: "For the past 25 years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of all the diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."

Eugene L. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general builder-up of the system, I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Humors, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best

Spring and Family Medicine to use. "It beats all," says Mr. Cutler, of Cutler Brothers & Co., Boston, "how Ayer's Sarsaparilla

does sell." Prepared by

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

MERRITT—Rev. Harvey M. Merritt, of Durant, Holmes county, Miss., died July 31, 1887. It was my good fortune to form the acquaintance of this man of God, in 1857, as a member of the Quarterly Conference of Valden circuit, North Mississippi Conference. That year he was licensed to exhort, and, being a man full of zeal, he did faithful work for the cause of Christ. A few years later he was licensed to preach. As a local preacher he was earnest and faithful, ready at all times to do his duty as a servant of God.

Bro. Merritt was a Methodist in fact, as he believed the doctrines taught by this church to be the doctrines of the Bible. I think it was from him I first heard the expression, "If the Methodists are not right, we have got the wrong book." He was always "ready to give a reason for the hope formed within him." He never aspired to be a "big preacher," only so far as greatness was the outcome of humility and usefulness. In these he excelled many who were more fluent and attractive in the pulpit. He was a good singer, and loved the old songs of Zion, by which so many have been sung out of darkness into spiritual life. His prayers were fervent, and sometimes powerful, at the throne of grace. An earnest, fervent prayer was about the last act of this life with him. Being at a church service, he was called upon to lead the closing prayer. Then, with his family, on their way home, he, suddenly fell from the conveyance and instantly died—perhaps, with apoplexy, having passed immediately from the church to heaven.

Bro. Merritt was born in Williamson county, Tenn., April 12, 1812, and when about eighteen years old he attended a meeting held in Nashville, Tenn., where he sought and found the pearl of great price, and ever after this was steadfast and faithful unto the end. He was twice married, first, to Miss M. A. Townsend, a lady every way qualified to make home to him the dearest place on earth. It was at all times pleasant to be an inmate of that home, as many wayworn preachers can testify; for his home was a preacher's home, and done enjoyed the visit more than Bro. and Sister Merritt. But in 1873 death visited that lovely home, and took the angel of the house and left our brother sore and bleeding at heart. But in all this sorrow he leaned upon God for comfort, who sustained him, so that he was enabled to say, "Thy will of God be done." In 1876 he found another companion, and was married to Mrs. A. P. Landtair, who now survives him and mourns her loss. Bro. Merritt was not permitted to give the parting benediction to those he loved, but his life looms up before us in faithfulness to God that inspires our brightest hopes for him eternally saved.

JACKSON—Resolutions on the death of Rev. J. D. Jackson, of Opelousas, La., by the third Quarterly Conference of Opelousas and Bellevue charge, Opelousas district, Louisiana Annual Conference, held at Bellevue, La., August 27, 1887.

Whereas, By an inscrutable decree of Providence, our beloved pastor, Rev. J. D. Jackson, has been taken from a life of usefulness and zeal in God's service; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, while we bow in submission to the will of him who has withdrawn our friend in the morning of his days from the field of his labor, and clearly recognize his gain in exchanging the toil and pain of life's battle for the blessed and well-earned peace of eternity, yet our sense of personal loss compels an expression of profound sorrow for the untimely death of this ardent laborer in the vineyards of the Lord.

Resolved, That the cares and responsibilities which devolved upon him in the church have been met with promptitude, conscientiousness and the spirit of self-sacrifice. In his daily walk in life, there was a gentleness, a sweetness, a quick sympathy in the trials and troubles of his people which made him beloved by all, and are now held in dear remembrance. His pure and good life was a constant interpreter of the gospel he taught.

Resolved, That the warmest sympathies of this congregation are extended to the bereaved widow and family of the deceased, and that the New Orleans Christian Advocate will be requested to publish these resolutions.

MRS. M. M. HAYES, for Com.

GOZA—J. G. Goza was born May 16, 1840, in Claiborne county, Miss., and was married to Mary E. Austin, August 23, 1866, and died May 15, 1887. Bro. Goza joined the Methodist Church while a boy, and remained faithful until death. He went into the war, where he lost his right arm, which caused him to labor under many disadvantages in life. The writer was intimately associated with him for two years, having been his pastor, but never heard him complain of his lot in life. He leaves a devoted wife and nine children to mourn his departure. His wife and all of his children, except the smallest ones, are members of the church of his choice. Bro. Goza was an obedient son, a brave soldier, a loving husband, a kind father and a faithful member of the church. His funeral was preached by the writer from 1 Thessalonians iv. 14, and his mortal remains were deposited in the cemetery at Sarepta, there to await the resurrection of the just. May God bring with him his wife and children in the first resurrection!

VIRGIL D. SKIPPER.

COOK—Judge Henry F. Cook, who died August 23, 1887, nearly seventy years of age, has been a citizen of Vicksburg from his youth. He was a son of Foster Cook, who lived and died in the Open Woods of Warren county. His name and place are mentioned by Rev. John G. Jones in his History of Methodism. An undergraduate of the University of Virginia, he studied law, and when ready to practice the Mexican War required soldiers; this young lawyer volunteered to be one of a company from Vicksburg in the well-known First Regiment of Mississippi Volunteers, under Col. Jefferson Davis. Being first lieutenant, he was in command of his company in several battles, and his name received flattering notice in the official reports to the War Department. After the war he was elected probate judge of his native country, and served acceptably for several terms, declining a re-election to engage in the practice of his profession, which was for several years quite lucrative.

He had been in failing health when the yellow fever of 1878 afflicted his large family, taking off promising children. In sorrow and sickness he passed his remaining days, but never complaining. He would not cause others to feel, whose sympathies could not relieve him. Being of a Methodist family, his associates were with preachers and members of that church, in which he became a Christian and died, giving assurance by words, and at last by signs, satisfactory to those interested that "all was well." He was happily married, in 1853, to Miss Eliza B. Irwin, daughter of Col. John L. Irwin. She survives with four daughters and one son—all grown.

GRIMES—Sister Sarah M. Grimes (born Ellis), in Pitts county, N. C., September 2, 1806; died on Red River, Avoyelles parish, July 21, 1887. After her marriage she was converted under the ministry of Bro. Parish; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, during the ministry of Bro. Henry C. White, in which church she remained until called to her home on high. She loved her church and supported its institutions. She was the pastor's true friend, always giving her pastor to know that she was in sympathy with him. The hearts of many preachers have been cheered, comforted, and strengthened by being associated with this noble woman. She loved to attend upon all the ordinances of the church, and until the last year or two, through feebleness and sickness, her seat was scarcely ever vacant. Sister Grimes leaves an aged husband, three children and several grandchildren to mourn her loss. Just before she died, she said, "Meet me in heaven." She was a faithful wife and a devoted mother. "Her children rise up and called her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

GEORGE JACKSON.

What a Dance.

I suffered with fever, hot head and foul breath,
With stomach disordered—was sick unto death.
Chose it a week—surely I was a dunce—
Then I took a few "Pellets"—they cured me at once.

What a dance, indeed, to neglect such a remedy and suffer a week, when quick relief could have been found in Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets.

We have received a circular indicating that a movement is on foot to have all the Annual Conferences instruct their delegates to the next General Conference "to ascertain beforehand that every person for whom they shall cast a ballot as Bishop is not (and for a satisfactory period has not been) addicted to the use of tobacco." And a memorial is to be presented to the General Conference, which we hope may be adopted without a dissenting vote, that it "will declare the tobacco habit to be an impediment to consecration to the office of a Bishop." We believe that the use of tobacco has been so placed under ban in our church that its days are numbered. And we doubt whether one known to be addicted to its use could be elected a Bishop. It may be a question whether anyone known to use any stimulant or narcotic of any kind should be elected to any General Conference office.—Central Christian Advocate.

May to Bell.

Dear Bell: I'll write you a short letter
To say I'm wonderfully better;
How much that means you ought to know,
Who saw me just one month ago—
Thin, nervous, fretful, white as chalk,
Almost too weak to breathe or talk;
Head throbbing, as if all for breaking,
A weary, ever-present aching.
But now life seems a different thing:
I feel as glad as bird on wing!
I say, and fear no contradiction,
That Pierce's Favorite Prescription
Is grand! Why, I'd have died without it!
Methinks there's no mistake about it.
It's driven all my ills away!
Just come and see! Yours ever, May.

Paris has a "dime club," as it were, that is a more sensible establishment than some far more expensive concerns. By paying half a franc—ten cents—one can wash his hands, have his boots blacked, his coat brushed, write letters, read all the leading continental and English newspapers, consult a reference library, and use a telephone. A dime club would be a good thing for any city.—Our Monthly.

W. O. Tuggle, LaGrange, Ga., writing about Harlys Prophylactic Fluid, says: "It is a priceless jewel as a disinfectant and deodorizer. My wife states for the benefit of young mothers that it is a valuable adjunct to the nursery." It is equally so to parents traveling with children. "Not only is the Fluid invaluable as a deodorizer, but a few drops added to the water in bathing will remove all eruptions from the skin, change, etc., and greatly refresh and soothe.

"Toil, Thrift, Temperance."

These are well said to be three T's which should be engraved on tablets of brass and placed prominently before the members of the Anti-Poverty Society, if they desire to better their condition in this life. As wealth can be accumulated by labor, men who toil honestly and earnestly are in the only path to independence. Thrift means that they shall not squander their money on nonessentials, so that no matter how small may be their earnings, they will save a little, and thus gradually accumulate a handsome surplus. But to toil and thrift they must also add temperance. It is a recognized fact that the people of the United States spend annually $750,000,000 for drink, in the form of whisky, beer and wine. Of this vast sum it is estimated that the laboringmen expend $700,000,000, and to that must be added at least $50,000,000 for tobacco. So long as the laboringmen continue to spend such vast sums for the gratification of those appetites, they must expect to be short-handed. Most of them attribute their poverty to the monopolists and capitalists; whereas it is the ogre of intemperance which devours their weekly wages and frequently their little homes. It is a curious feature that the economic orators who are the most popular with the workingmen scarcely ever allude to the three T's as essential to make life more successful to the laborer. Even George, Metlynn, Schilling and Grottkau, never press upon their hearers the fact that the corroding cancer of intemperance is keeping their followers poor and abject. They seem to be afraid to touch this subject, because it contravenes the sensual tastes of man. No possible legislation or division of lands can drive poverty out of the world. But toil, thrift and temperance, in this land of freedom, will do more than all things else to banish poverty from the household. An influential Catholic priest in this city has frequently remarked that in his parish the only cause of destitution and suffering in the families of workingmen is intemperance. He could not find an impoverished family in which it was not discoverable that nearly all the earnings were devoted to whisky, beer and tobacco. The observations of this priest are confirmed by clergymen of every denomination throughout the United States, and by the criminal judges who have cognizance of breaches of the peace caused by drunkenness and disorderly conduct. When workingmen bind themselves together to carry out the three T's no anti-poverty society will be needed throughout our broad land. And we might add that the three T's are essential to an honorable success in any of life's professions or pursuits.—Milwaukee Wisconsin

If you have catarrh, use the surest remedy—Dr. Sage's.

Rev. Sam Jones said in his address at Chautauqua: "Nine high license preachers in America out of every ten are high license because nine-tenths of their members are high license members. No preacher can voluntarily, without constraint, be a high license preacher, until he can reconcile Jesus Christ, his risen Lord, and whisky. I say before any man can put a price on this liquid damnation and say, 'You may sell it for that,' he's got to reconcile Jesus Christ and this fearful traffic. Sometimes a man is not afraid of his members, but sometimes a fellow gets where he is afraid he will hurt his party. * * * I owe my allegiance to Jesus Christ. I will be true to him if the inquisition shall run again, and I am tied at the stake to burn. I would rather laugh in the flames like Cranmer and Ridley, and go home to God a true man, than to walk this earth lashed about by party interest and made to vote with an interest that debauches and damns this country, and breaks the heart of every true wife and mother."—Central Christian Advocate.

IMPERFECT digestion and assimilation produce disordered conditions of the system which grow and are confirmed by neglect. Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier by its tonic properties cures indigestion and gives tone to the stomach.

What the Scripture forbids, avoid; what it affirms, believe; what it commands, do; what it reproves, amend. As many as walk by this rule, peace on them and on the Israel of God.—Thomas Adams.

If you find indications of Malaria in your system, take at once Dr. J. H. McLean's Chills and Fever Cure. It will agreeably and effectually eradicate the poison from your system. 50 cents per bottle, warranted.

Privileges—Responsibilities. The privileges of Christian discipleship we know in part; the responsibilities of discipleship not made so prominent as they might be. "Ye are the salt of the earth," said Christ to his disciples; but if the savor [illegible], it is worthless; if the virtues of discipleship leave the disciple, he becomes like worldly people and is worthless. If an apostle is not like Peter, he is like Judas. If Christian ministers are not like Timothy, they are like Demas. If Christian people are not the salt of the earth and the light of the world, they are not only useless, but positively injurious to the progress of Christianity. Business is appointed of God. "Six days thou shalt labor." But when business is pursued only for selfish aggrandizement, then covetousness takes possession of the heart, and worldliness. As our moderation is to be known in all things, so moderation in business, in work, in amusements, lest what is innocent in itself bring us into temptation which we can not resist. Fire is a good servant, but a terrible master. Work is a good servant, but a terrible master. Wealth is a good servant, but such a hard master. We must be masters of wealth, or health, or work; nay, we must be masters of the world, lest evil come upon us.—Southern Churchman.

A quiet life often makes itself felt in better ways than one that the world sees and applauds; and some of the noblest are never known till they end, leaving a void in many hearts.

Dear Sir: I have used your Antidote for Malaria for over a quarter of a century and have found it to be in every respect all that you claim for it. It not only cures chills and fever of every kind, but it is the best medicine I ever knew to build up the system when broken down from any cause.

No inward illumination, no inward quickening and transformation of the human heart, will result from the unassisted operations of the human intellect. But the real Word of God is the sword of the Spirit, and he will wield it with that mighty energy with which he is able to subdue all things unto himself. Only the catholic faith, only the doctrines of the Trinity, the incarnation, the apostasy, and the redemption, will be effectually applied by the Holy Ghost. All other truth—all that is merely poetry, or philosophy, or art, or science—is outside of the circle of his operation.—Dr. Shedd.

If a man does not preach eloquent sermons, he need not despair of usefulness. The greater part of the dissemination of Christianity has been done by men not eloquent. There would be fewer ministerial failures, clerical hypochondriacs and ecclesiastical tramps if all those whose missions it is to proclaim the truth were as anxious to hear what God says to them before preaching as some are to hear what men say of them afterwards. Spurgeon reveals to us the secret of his usefulness. He says: "As for myself, I am a very small vessel, but then I empty out my stores. All that I know I tell. I preach all that I have on hand upon my heart; therefore, the people get more from me than they do from far superior men. As the most of us are of average or inferior ability, let us always do our best. Preach all you know every time. Do not imagine that you ought to reserve a little for the next occasion. You may be dead before the next sermon is due."—Southern Churchman.

THE PRICE OF A DRINK.

BY JOSEPHINE POLLARD.

"Five cents a glass!" Does anyone think
That that is really the price of a drink?
"Five cents a glass," I heard you say,
"Why, that isn't very much to pay."
Almost, indeed, 'tis a very small sum
You are passing over 'twixt finger and thumb;
And if that were all that you gave away,
It wouldn't be very much to pay.

The price of a drink! Let him decide
Who has lost his courage and lost his pride,
And lies a groveling heap of clay
Not far removed from a beast to-day.

The price of a drink! Let that one tell
Who sleeps to-night in a murderer's cell,
And feels within him the fires of hell.
Honor and virtue, love and truth,
All the glory and pride of youth,
Hopes of manhood, the wreath of fame,
High endeavor and noble aim—
These are the treasures thrown away
At the price of a drink, from day to day.

"Five cents a glass!" How Satan laughed,
As over the bar the young man quaffed
The heated liquor, for the demon knew
The terrible work that drink would do!
And before morning the victim lay
With his life-blood swiftly ebbing away;
And that was the price he paid, alas!
For the pleasure of taking a social glass.

The price of a drink! If you want to know
What some are willing to pay for it, go
Through that wretched tenement over there,
With dingy windows and broken stair,
Where foul disease, like a vampire, crawls
With outstretched wings o'er the mouldy walls.

There poverty dwells with her hungry brood,
Wild-eyed as demons for lack of food;
There shame, in a corner, crouches low;
There violence deals its cruel blow;
The innocent ones are thus accursed
To pay the price of another's thirst.

"Five cents a glass?" Oh, if that were all,
The sacrifice would, indeed, be small!
But the money's worth is the least amount
We pay; and whoever will keep account
Will learn the terrible waste and blight
That follows the ruinous appetite.
"Five cents a glass?" Does anyone think
That is really the price of a drink?

—Harper's Bazar.

Our Missionary Debt.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

The imperative demand of the Master to "go into all the world," carrying the gospel of peace "to every creature," admits of no excuse, and leaves room for no apology. The obligation is upon each and every member of the great household of faith, resting alike on the rich and the poor, the clergy and the laity, the male and female. Differences about modes of doing the work, the men by whose presence the work is to be done, and the places where the means are to be expended, may be of importance, but are not to be permitted to operate as hinderances. However much men may differ, the work must go on.

For a number of years we have watched the operations of our missionary system with a feeling expressed neither by hope nor fear. Year after year we have seen reports of grand successes—the gathering in of souls from the darkness of death to the light of life; but therewith we have seen also a rapidly increasing debt, growing from year to year, and from quadrennium to quadrennium, until now we find ourselves confronted by a debt which, after placing the credits arising from the "week of self-denial and prayer for the cause of missions," falls but little, if any, below one hundred thousand dollars.

Touching the spirit and purpose in which the debt was made, it is much better for us that it resulted from a great zeal for the work than from wicked management or mismanagement. But, touching the effect, there is not so much difference. The fact of the debt has enveloped the administration in doubt, and people will doubt as long as there is room for doubt. To an enterprise of this kind, doubt is disastrous; and as long as this debt hangs over the church, the people will have these doubts of the methods of the Board.

Zeal should never override judgment. The commonest plow-boy would laugh at the folly of a farmer who, having more horses than he could feed, would persist in buying more horses and putting them on his already overstocked farm.

The capacity of the church, at least in its will-power, has been tested year after year, and just so much has been found to result from the most eloquent appeals often made by our strongest men. This sum, varying under circumstances, has proven inadequate to the work already inaugurated, and yet from year to year the work has been increased, the expense account enlarged, and new obligations resting on this precarious basis entered into.

At the time of the General Conference of 1882, we had a large debt hanging over us, and, with no other resources than those under which this debt grew upon us, new men were sent out and new liabilities incurred. If, under the high-pressure methods of our church, carrying a propelling force which we can not hope materially to increase, we find an accumulated debt steadily growing upon us, what may we hope for but bankruptcy, while constantly increasing the demand for money? It may be submitted that when we find ourselves unable to carry twenty-two missionaries, it is unsafe to attempt to carry twenty-seven. But this is exactly the case with the Board of Missions.

The question is not as to whether we are doing too much (we are not doing the half we ought to do), but whether we are not trying to do more than we have the church educated up to. That all our missionaries should be in the field, and others—many others—sent to reinforce them, is a proposition nobody will deny; but that the Board should go beyond its means in the disbursement of its actual or probable assets is a very different question.

When one of our members contracts a debt without a probability of paying it, he is chargeable with violating one of the General Rules, and the average member thinks this principle applies to all our Boards as well. It is evident that when a party contracts a debt beyond their ability to pay, somebody must suffer loss. To borrow money does not mend the matter, for this simply transfers the debt—it does not pay it—and increases it by the amount of interest annually accruing. For the Board of Missions to borrow money is to direct the Lord's money into the hands of bankers, and not to the hearts and heads of heathens.

Let us suppose the Board to send out twenty missionaries at a yearly cost of $500 each. The sum necessary to defray the expenses of these missionaries—$10,000—must be borrowed at a yearly interest of (say) five per cent., which is one-twentieth of the whole amount. What is the result? Nineteen missionaries are sent to the heathens, and our missionary is sent to the banker! But suppose only two are to be sent, what then? In ten years the banker will have absorbed the services of one of them for two years!

It is a principle in commerce, as unerring as the law of gravitation, that any institution or person, expending more than the income, must go into bankruptcy. With twenty-four men in the field in 1884, and tens of thousands of dollars in debt, the Board has, without an increase of assets, sent out still other men, and that, too, after trying every possible means from year to year to increase the revenues. Doubtless this course is predicated of the fact that ours is a growing church, and the idea that our operations in foreign fields should keep step with our growth. But it must be remembered that our growth is of two kinds, viz: numerical and financial; and the development along these lines is not in mathematical proportion. Our increase in numbers is regular, and somewhat uniform. Our numerical gains can be pretty accurately calculated a year in advance. We know the number of our children, and, in the light of the comparative statistics of a hundred years, we know pretty accurately what number of them will come into the church. Such is not the case as to our financial growth. While these accessions swell the number, they do not swell the value on a commercial basis. Those who come from without our families, come from among our friends and supporters, who have helped almost, if not quite, as much before becoming members as after. To this rule there are exceptions, but most pastors know the truth of the affirmation.

There is, however, a somewhat correspondent financial growth, but it is much more remote—in the by and by. As families grow up and fortunes are made, we gain strength on this line. It may be doubted if the increase of 75,000 members last year gave us an additional commercial strength equal to ten cents per member, for the simple reason that in our collections they were mostly, if not entirely, represented before. Our church is a great family. As the children are born, they increase the numbers of the household, but do not bring in any financial strength until, having grown up, they gather commercial values by their own exertions.

The idea that the commercial strength of our church increases in mathematical proportion to the increase of its members is fallacious, and if this be the ground for the constantly increasing demand for money, the sooner it is abandoned the better. The cry of "debt," in connection with our missionary work, is getting to be painfully familiar. The effort should go before the debt. Let the plea be for the heathen, not for the debt. The truth is, the welfare of the heathen is lost sight of behind the cry of debt; and in the practical effect of the effort, the honor of the church, and not the civilization of the heathen, is the object to be attained.

Faith is a good thing—wonderful in its achievements; but it can not do the work which the Master has relegated to muscles and brains. It must have an object, and assumption as to the will or ability of the church to pay does not furnish such an object as faith will lay hold upon. Because the church did so much last year, it does not follow that it will do so much more this year, and will do still more next year.

Those whose assets are not increased should be careful not to increase their liabilities; or, if they do, they should do it with something more tangible upon which to depend than a mere trust that the means will come up somehow to meet the emergency. This burden is on the church, and the church must lift it off; but she can not be forced up to her duty so well by the coercion of debt as by appeals to her moral sensibility. To the unsophisticated such a course takes the matter out of the sphere of Christian duty, and transfers it to the realm of business. In the one case the heathen appears as starving for the bread of life, and duty says, "Send it." In the other case the banker presents his check, and business says, "Pay it." It is easy to say: "It is all the same—the check was drawn for the bread of life." And it is easy to see this is true, minus the interest. It seems wise to keep men in readiness to go. But it seems just as wise to wait till the money comes in before they be sent out.

This plan of pledging the church beforehand, especially since we have seen failure written on it year after year, does not seem wise nor safe. There need be no suspension of our missionary operation if we can ever catch up. If the appointments were made strictly on the basis of uniform receipts, the assessment might be just whatever the Board desired to raise; and whatever excess came in, would be so much "balance in the treasury" for immediate use. With all deference to the Board and its eminent advisers, we fail to see any economy in this systematic method of debt making. Political economy suggests that the liabilities be kept clearly on the inside of the assets. For practical purposes, the only assets of our Board of Missions are its assessments, which are never paid in full, and still donations are made nearly, or quite, up to the full assessments—above the usual receipts.

From the Treasurer's books it is easy to see what amount has been paid each year—not the amount asked for—and find there a basis for comparison, keeping safely on the inside, but never assuming that the church has grown so much, and can do so much more. If it were certain that the church had grown as supposed, it is not certain that the spirit of liberality has spread to a corresponding extent. My idea is about this: Ask what you want—give what you've got. This is safe; but to promise what you ask for, or any proportion of it over and above what you have been receiving, is to take the risk of promising more than you can perform.

I have penned these lines, Mr. Editor, not in ignorance of the fact that some will mistake my motives, attributing various and unworthy motives, instead of the correct one, viz: To protest against this system of debt making. Three times during my connection with the ministry of our church, I have seen the body ecclesiastic wounded by three arrows of debt. Let the people pay more, and the Board promise less, so that when this debt is out of the way, we will never have another.

RESTON, Louisiana.

Rev. J. D. Jackson—In Memoriam.

BY REV. M. C. MANLY.

The subject of this notice was born at Clinton, La., March 15, 1861; was happily converted May 28, 1879, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Olive Branch, East Feliciana circuit, Mississippi Conference. He immediately commenced holding prayer meetings in the community, which were attended with success and profit.

He was strongly impressed from the moment of his surrender to the blessed Savior of his call to preach the gospel to dying humanity, and was licensed to preach at Manassa, East Feliciana, September 12, 1880, by Rev. J. A. Godfrey, presiding elder of the Woodville district, Mississippi Conference.

He was married, March 16, 1882, to Miss Tanie L. Reames.

He served the church efficiently and acceptably, in the capacity of a local preacher, four years; was employed by the presiding elder to supply the Livingston mission, which post he held in 1882 and 1883. In 1884 he was on the Grosse Tete and False River circuit, Louisiana Conference, in connection with Rev. F. G. Hocutt.

He was recommended by the Grosse Tete Quarterly Conference to the Louisiana Annual Conference, and was received into the Conference at Minden, January 11, 1885.

He was appointed, in connection with the writer, as junior preacher to Vermilion and Rayne work, which was subsequently divided by the presiding elder, Rev. C. Keener, and he was assigned to Vermilion and Kimball's Chapel. In 1886 and 1887 he was appointed to the Opelousas charge, where he finished his course, July 25, 1887.

As a preacher, Bro. Jackson was earnest and impressive, aiming always at the heart of his auditors, and expecting immediate effects to attend the faithful preaching of the gospel. He never entered the pulpit without fervently entreating the presence of the Holy Spirit, both in his illuminating and sanctifying power, believing every human effort would prove ineffectual and abortive, however earnest and orthodox, if destitute of supernatural influence and agency. Nor was his impression a mere sentimentalism or theoretical acknowledgment, but a strong conviction which laid firm hold upon the consciousness, mastering all the intuitions of the soul, and mobilizing every faculty of the psychical and every function of the psychological manhood, in what he conceived to be his duty as a Christian, or his obligation as a minister of Christ. This fact gave him the appearance to superficial thinkers and casual observers the air of intellectual importance and ministerial superiority. But a more thorough acquaintance and intimate association not only dissipated the appearance, but actually revealed a simplicity of character and humility of spirit that gave a charm of unsophistication to his life, which made him pleasant as a companion and attractive as a man.

Our Bro. Jackson had the courage of his convictions, and in private and public hesitated not in their asseveration, which in some cases drew upon him the allegation—mistaken zeal. But none of these, however stressed by friends and emphasized by antagonists, changed his course, or moved him from the simple purpose of what, in his conception, was right. Hence, among the true and good he had many sincere friends and admirers.

While among the apologists of worldly-mindedness and advocates of vice, his motives were impugned and his methods severely criticised; and although not indifferent to unfair animadversion, or insensible to unjust vituperation, he never gave way to invective or yielded to the temptation of questionable retaliation. In the judgment of the writer he was much above mediocrity, both in regard to intellectual ability, ministerial gifts and qualifications. He was a close student, not only of books, but of men; hence his judgment concerning men was rarely at fault, or seldom ever amounted to a mistake. His confidence was scarcely ever misplaced, and from credulity the realization of distress and discomfiture was of rare occurrence. His knowledge of human nature enabled him to speak cautiously relative to matters and questions outside his immediate vocation, or, if so, he touched them at a distance, because they involved duality of signification. For this reason the necessity of correcting erroneous impressions and removing of mendacious statements was of unfrequent eventuality.

As a preacher, his style was spiritual rather than logical, concrete rather than abstract, sufficiently doctrinal for correctness in belief, but closely preceptive and severely practical. He preferred unorthodoxy in hermeneutics to a desideratum of Bible practice and scriptural holiness. His pulpit ministrations were effective in the conviction of sinners, fruitful in the conversion of penitents, and efficient in the edification of believers.

Bro. Jackson possessed in great measure the gifts of an evangelist, and for this reason his ministerial brethren made a large demand on his pulpit ministrations during protracted meetings and revival occasions. Willing to work, he perhaps overtaxed his physical energies; but, if so, it was considered by him as providential, since he did not seek those calls, but simply responded to them, and, therefore, if disease was induced and death hurried, he avoids censure in this. He thought that the openings of Providence and leadings of the Holy Spirit were followed. Speaking from a human standpoint, had he lived he would have attained eminence in the ministry, preference among his brethren, and distinction in the councils of the church.

As a Christian gentleman, he commanded the respect of the community, and deserved the esteem and confidence of his brethren. These were not withheld, but affectionately and in simplicity tendered. While he firmly maintained his opinions and insisted stoutly for the correctness of his postulates, he was charitable to those who differed, and courteous to all who antagonized him in argumentation.

He was an agreeable companion, a pleasant associate, which made his intercourse delightful, and gave to his Christian fellowship a spiritual refinement, personal solidarity, a facetiousness and, to individual contact, a religious power and evangelizing influence which made his pastoral visits among his people an occasion of social enjoyment, moral potency and intellectual improvement.

He was talkative, but not garrulous. Considerate of the claims of others, he was far from being a monopolist in conversation. While delighting in converse, respectful listener was equally manifest.

As a husband, he was kind, affectionate, "giving honor unto the wife as the weaker vessel, as being heirs together of the grace of life, that their prayers be not hindered."

As a father, he earnestly endeavored and consciously labored with scrupulous fidelity to observe and enforce the injunction of the apostle: "Provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." To this end family devotion was not a formal ceremony, but instinct with spiritual life and evangelic worship.

As a friend, he was true, generous and faithful, never allowing freedom of intercourse to degenerate into coarseness of familiarity, which rarely fails to interrupt individual friendship.

Our brother was a strong advocate of temperance, an unflinching opposer of the use of inebriating potations, a firm and heroic defender of the doctrine of national prohibition.

But, alas! he has been taken from us, and in the flesh we shall see his face no more. But we sorrow not as those who have no hope of a joyful resurrection and blissful immortality, since those who sleep in Jesus, God has promised to bring with him when he shall come to be glorified in his saints.

The last interview I had with him was on the cars. He was flushed with gospel victory. His ministerial sword was still warm with recent fight. The jubilant shout of revival triumph hung upon his lips, that broke in joyful and adoring gratitude from a soul opulent in Christian experience and rich in gracious attainments.

Sunday, previous to his triumphant exit on Monday, he said to his weeping wife, "This is the last night I shall spend with my family." On Sister Jackson interrogating him concerning his future prospects, he said, with his last gasping breath, "There"—meaning in heaven.

Thus, when the chariot descended, he was ready; and, through the trackless ether, on flying wheel and burning axle, he sped away, leaving behind earth, sun and constellation, for the Golden City; and, entering the gates of solid pearl, his fiery wheel and flaming steed stood still within walls of jasper, garnished with all manner of precious stones, while redeemed spirits came, joined by the angelic host, welcoming him to celestial companionship forever.

THE LOSS OF EARTH.

BY KATE PUTNAM OSGOOD.

Death, is it death?
The shadow fetterless, still upon the
The one same end of all things yet be?
After the glory of life, the sudden gloom
After the strife, the inexorable doom
The frozen breathe?

Nay, rather see
Where the new grave lies sudden to the rain,
How the bare earth quickens to a youth again;
Waiting the wonder-season's lavish dower
Young rosebuds creep, a wealth of grass and flower
Eye long to?

When death has passed
Into the land of silence and of cloud,
The leafless land, where rain no bird is loud,
Dare fingers yet with song and blossom file,
Lo! step for step go ever death and life—
But life is lost?

POWER TO FORGIVE SINS.

Matthew ix. 1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT: "The Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins."—Matthew ix. 6.

INTRODUCTORY.

Matthew's gospel is exact and is fuller than the others on most particulars, but it does not always record things in the same order in which they happened. It is believed that the healing of the paralytic immediately followed the cure of the leper. (Chapter viii. 1-4.) These two miracles were performed in or near the same city—Capernaum. On account of these and other miracles, which the Savior wrought there, and on account of the gracious words which he spake there, and, perhaps, more especially because it was regarded as his home, Capernaum was regarded as being privileged far beyond other cities. The Master indicates this when he declares: "And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shalt be brought down to hell." Luke says that there were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by on this occasion. They had, doubtless, been attracted by the fame that had gone out about him on account of his miracles and wondrous words. They were actuated, not because of their interest in him, nor so much by their curiosity, but rather by a malignant purpose to entangle him in his talk, if possible, and thus to prevent the spread of his popularity, which was fast overshadowing theirs.

POWER TO FORGIVE.

Verse 1. "And he entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into his own city." Doubtless the same boat which had conveyed Christ and his disciples over. So frequent were their crossings over the Sea of Gennesaret that in all probability they kept this vessel for their habitual use. Capernaum was called "his own city," because he had spent most of his life there; but Bethlehem was the place of his birth.

2. "And behold." These words seem to connect the following with the foregoing without determining at what precise time it occurred. They also call attention to what is to follow, marking its importance. "They brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed." Mark and Luke are more circumstantial, and set forth the zeal and earnestness of those who brought the sick man. There were four of them, each having hold of a corner of the Oriental rug on which he was lying. They could not get to the Master because of the crowd, and they opened up the roof and let him down before the company. What an inspiration is here for zeal and earnestness in bringing sinners to the Savior! "Jesus, seeing, their faith." "Their" refers, doubtless, to the party of five, including the paralytic. No doubt he had faith, or he would not have permitted himself thus to be borne, and neither would the Savior have healed him. The faith of others may be largely influential in bringing blessings upon an individual, but it can accomplish nothing without his co-operation. "Said unto the sick of the palsy." A paralytic deprived of motion in parts of the body; the limbs shriveled and wasted; a disease incurable except by miraculous power. "Thy sins be forgiven thee." The Jews believed that such diseases were generally the result of sins, and, therefore, that the pardon of sin must precede the cure.

3. "Certain of the scribes said within themselves." The same party who had been sent to spy out his actions began mentally to condemn him, thinking that he had arrayed himself against the law. "This man blasphemeth." It was considered blasphemy for anyone but God to forgive sins, and, remembering that the Levitical code condemned the blasphemer to be stoned, doubtless they were eager to charge him and to excite the rabble to the work of death.

4. "Jesus, knowing their thoughts." For fear that the bystanders were not yet recovered from the influence which his fame had upon them, they did not express what was passing within. But Jesus could read their thoughts as easily as hear their words; hence he said: "Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts?" The literal meaning of blasphemy is to speak evil. In its acceptation among the Jews it meant to cast reproach upon sacred things, or to usurp the prerogative of God. Jesus asked a reason of them why they should indulge such slighting thoughts of him, or why they had not already learned that he had a right to forgive sins. His reading of their thoughts was a convincing evidence of his divinity, and ought to have made them recognize his claims.

5. "For whether is easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk?" To the divine power one was just as easy as the other. Neither could be done without the exercise of Omnipotence, and this could command a universe into existence as easily as create an atom.

POWER TO HEAL.

Verse 6. "But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins." Does not this show a condescension upon the part of the Savior? He was willing to accommodate himself to their way of thinking, in order to overcome their difficulties and to elicit their faith and obedience. He asserted his divinity, and, as in their own estimation, the forgiveness of sins was an evidence of divinity, he was about to give them an exhibition of it. "Then saith he to the sick of the palsy, Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house." This command would simply have been mocking the poor unfortunate if it had not been accompanied by divine energy. He might justly have said: "Why, Master, this is just what I have been trying to do for years, but have not been able;" but his own faith, laying hold of the divine words, caused him to make the effort to arise, and, in arising, he was healed. In working miracles Christ usually gave some part to the beneficiary to perform, not that it was necessary, but to secure his co-operation and appreciation.

7. "And he arose, and departed to his house." Convincing proof of his cure. The Master gave them three evidences of his divinity: First, he forgave the sins of the paralytic; second, he discerned their secret thoughts; third, he restored the diseased to perfect soundness.

8. "But when the multitude saw it, they marveled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men." They trembled with fear, and were transported with wonder. They seemed not to know of Christ's divinity; hence their amazement that a mere man should have had such authority over the souls and bodies of men. They doubtless gave joyous exclamations of their appreciation of the goodness and mercy of God as expressed in his power on earth to forgive sins.

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

1. Christians ought to bring their unconverted friends to Christ to have their sins forgiven, and they ought not to be discouraged by unpropitious circumstances; but they ought even to imitate the zeal of the friends of the paralytic.

2. If faith exists, it will show itself by corresponding works. These friends did not rely upon their faith alone, but they used works, earnest works, to bring the man in the presence of the Savior.

3. Faith, shown to be genuine by the works that follow, will surely avail to bring every needed blessing. Through it "Christ is able to save them unto the uttermost that come unto God by him."

From Poplarville, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: My husband has just closed a meeting at Poplarville, which resulted in much good. Eight conversions, four accessions to the church, and many old soldiers made to rejoice in the hope and glory of God. Pray for us, that we may hold out faithful, and, at last, be received home in glory.

Church Suppers.

Having failed to publish the article sent you some two months ago, in reply to Bro. Owen, I think, as a matter of justice to me, you should give publicity to the following brief answer to charges which he made:

Bro. Owen says I have "championed the cause of innovation upon the financial system and policy of the church." If he had examined the Discipline, he would have saved himself the trouble of writing that ponderous sentence. The Discipline says, in raising preacher's salary: "The stewards shall, unless otherwise ordered by the Church Conference, adopt the assessment plan." This is the nearest approach in the Discipline to an established system and policy for raising money. For raising money to build churches and parsonages no direction is given. There is among us the practice of getting money by personal appeal, subscriptions, etc.; and so there is among the ladies of having church suppers. How could I be, then, the champion of innovation on an "established system?" I think I am as loyal as Bro. Owen, or any other man. As the remainder of his article was a mere restatement of answered argument, I am willing to let it go. We all know raffling is wrong; but an honest, decent church supper he will not soon show to be wrong.

Yours, D. M. COGDELL.

From the Work.

REVIVAL AT BLACK HAWK, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: It was my good fortune to visit the historic town of Black Hawk, Miss., a few weeks ago, and witness one of the most powerful revivals I have attended for years. By request of Rev. J. F. Evans, the untiring pastor, I send you an account of this wonderful work of grace.

Bro. Evans has labored four years on the Black Hawk circuit, and many a time his heart has sunk within him as he thought of the sad condition of the church, the hatred, envy and malice that was so conspicuous in the actions of many of his church members; but God had prepared for him a Mount of Transfiguration, where he could go up and see the Lord in all his glory.

The meeting at Black Hawk was certainly the very Mount of Transfiguration to Bro. Evans and many of his faithful people. Rev. R. A. Barroughs spent the first week of the meeting preaching and aiding the pastor in visiting the delinquent members. He and Bro. Evans had the meeting under good headway when my husband and I arrived the beginning of the second week. We remained nearly a week, working and visiting the people; and the result was about seventy-five or more conversions, and fifty-two additions to the church, twenty-five new family altars erected, old strifes laid down, enemies made friends, and the people and pastor happy.

Bro. Evans inaugurated an itinerant prayer meeting, which some outsider called the "Salvation Army." He and some of his members and the visiting preacher would go from house to house all over the country for miles around, and pray with every family, and get every member of the family to pray a few words. Several were converted at these special-prayer services.

I have never seen a community more powerfully stirred than the Black Hawk community during the meeting there. Eternity alone will reveal the great good done during this great revival.

OMIL LEWIS.

STONEWALL CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: On August 20 I began a meeting at old Concord Church, which continued for five days, in which I was ably assisted by Bros. B. S. Rayner and L. J. Jones. Three elements were conspicuous in the preaching—energy, earnestness and power. The Holy Ghost was present. The old church, which had so long "slumbered and slept," had its lethargic foundation shaken. Many of the members renewed their covenants with God, promising to have family prayer and to start anew in all church work. There were eighteen conversions and accessions to the church. May the good work go on!

God has graciously blessed us elsewhere, of which we will write hereafter.

J. R. ZACHRY, P. C.

EAST BATON ROUGE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord has manifested himself to us in two more glorious revivals—Blackwater and Davis Chapel.

Bro. J. M. Whitehead, a local preacher, formerly of Meridian, Miss., but now of Greenville, Ala., came "over into Macedonia," and assisted us in preaching the Word.

The meeting commenced on Sunday, August 15. The attendance was good from the first; and the whole church came up to the work with a zeal rarely equaled. Sinners crowded the altar, asking for the prayers of God's people, in numbers ranging from twenty to fifty, at each service, with a depth of conviction in some instances that I have never seen surpassed. The interest continued to increase to the end; and at the last service, on Sunday night, nearly every unconverted man, woman and child in the house knelt for prayer. The congregation continued to increase day by day until the house was not sufficient to hold them. Even at night some had to remain on the outside because there was not seating-room in the house; many of these coming as far as ten miles to hear the gospel of the blessed Son of God.

All that I have said of Blackwater is equally true of Davis Chapel. It was a real feast of the soul, a season of refreshing, when men were converted to God, backsliders reclaimed, and God's people strengthened and revived and made to shout the praises of God. God never gave to the church truer and more devoted men and women than those two churches. They are warm, earnest, zealous workers in the vineyard of the Lord. They are praying men and women, and bear the cross bravely before men with meekness, but mighty in faith, and strong in the power of the Holy Spirit.

There were twenty-eight accessions to the church, several of whom are men advanced in life, who, after having drank deeply of the pleasure of sin, say they come now to drink of that water which can slake the thirst and not leave the sting of death. There were also quite a number of bright conversions, the illumination of whose happy faces still reflect, and will continue to reflect, a halo of glorious light along the pathway of men seeking to tread the strait and narrow road that leads to the celestial city. The shout that went up from the camp, in response to the Holy Spirit that came down, awakened a spirit in the hearts of the children of God that will not cease to reverberate while the "stars shall clap their hands and the angels of God sing together for joy."

On Sunday night, August 22, our dear Bro. Faunt LeRoy, of Baton Rouge, came out to Davis Chapel, preached us a powerful and Holy-Ghost sermon, and baptized the new members who had not been baptized before.

Bro. Whitehead made many friends in East Baton Rouge, and carries away with him to his distant home the prayers of a grateful and united people. To God be all the glory for past blessing! GEO. D. ANDERS.

BROOKSTOWN, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Closed a fine meeting at Brookstown last night. God was with us from the first day. Bro. Anders, of the Mississippi Conference, was with me, and preached with the power and demonstration of the Spirit. Meeting continued one week. Results: Forty conversions, and nineteen accessions to the church. The whole neighborhood is about converted. God be praised!

T. K. FAUNT LEROY.

HIGHLAND, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The Lord is blessing us greatly in these ends of the earth. I have received one hundred and five into the church on the Pleasant Ridge circuit, North Mississippi Conference. Other brethren have received a much larger number on their charges. Hundreds have been converted; and "salvation is rolling on." "What hath God wrought?"

M. E. TUMLIN.

HILLSBORO CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We have held some protracted meetings, and have received twenty-five members. There were a goodly number of conversions.

The charge has improved in many respects. The six local preachers on the work have helped faithfully.

Fraternally,

C. M'DONALD.

MORTON, MISS., Sept. 24, 1887.

ADAMS CHURCH.

MR. EDITOR: I have recently returned from a visit over on the Illinois Central railroad, during which time I attended a protracted meeting at Adams Church; and must say that I never before was in as great a revival. There were sixty conversions, forty accessions to the church; and at times it seemed to me that the heavens had opened out upon us. Scores were shouting aloud the praises of God, and spreading abroad the news of salvation. Even the little boys and girls were talking and praying with penitents like little preachers, and, after shouting in a heavenly tone, saying, "I am not ashamed of Jesus who shed his precious blood, and died on the cross to redeem me from all sin." Nearly all, of every age, in that community are devout Christians, or religiously inclined; and if a vain, reckless sinner happens to come in contact with them, they begin at once to work for the salvation of his or her soul. Those young people know but little about living a sinful life. Their parents have always kept them under religious influence, and in the way of everlasting truth and righteousness.

Bro. Burton, their preacher in charge, is a great revivalist, and, I think, a noble and good young man.

They have a fine Sabbath-school at that church, and preaching by their pastor twice a month; public prayer meeting, ladies' prayer meeting, young men's and little boys' prayer meetings held weekly, respectively. And, in addition to those meetings, the ladies have organized a Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and a Woman's Missionary Society, also. So, Mr. Editor, after three weeks' stay with such people, I was enabled to return home with my faith increased and my hopes strengthened in the power and love of God.

MRS. J. N. TUCKER.

POPLARVILLE, MISS., Sept. 20, 1887.

ST. HELENA CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: Since my last note I have held four protracted meetings with good results: thirty-eight accessions on profession of faith, and quite a number of children baptized; churches frequently filled to the utmost capacity, and, in some instances, numbers outside. Hard hearts and men of unusual indifference have been moved to tears of repentance under the preaching of God's wondrous love to run unfortunate race.

Some money on self-denial is on hand, which will be reported; also some for J. W. Lambuth's call has been sent up. Not much has been done here on self-denial; but for many of the poor, it should be said, they have not. Many to-day can not pay their supply bill. Some one has forced a self-denial already, or they have taken up too much. Come with me to the homes of the poor, and see wherein self-denial should take place. You will refer to tobacco; so have it. But every other necessity must surrender to this unfortunate habit, even wife's shoes and children's education. Oh! for a reformation here. Not much whisky money here. If the writer could follow up each member, when about to spend money, I could make many suggestions. But this is impossible. A circuit can not be canvassed in a week, and hardly in a year, on all the demands now made, unless we do nothing else. As money begins to circulate, I will do my best for every collection I am charged with. We are in a very hopeful and encouraging condition, if the people could ever get out of the debt of other years.

The cotton crop of this parish, it is thought, will be fearfully short. God's strong arm to save is wonderful in his providences. We will still trust him.

J. W. ELLISON.

STARKVILLE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I have gone through with all of my meetings, which resulted in thirty-three conversions and forty accessions, and more to follow. I do not think I ever saw a work more wrought upon in my life. At most points they are very much enthused on the subject of religion. We have an increase of prayer meetings from one to seven. Family altars have increased from fourteen to twenty-four or twenty-five. The Lord has blessed us most wonderfully on Starkville circuit. To him be all the glory!

B. P. FULLILOVE, P. C.

SEPTEMBER 24, 1887.

EBENEZER CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Our meeting at Egypt continued one week. Rev. G. W. Bachman, our Conference colporteur, and Rev. T. W. Dye were with us, and did the preaching to the satisfaction of the people; the latter of whom preached several excellent doctrinal sermons on such subjects as "The Extent of the Atonement," "Baptism," "Justification by Faith," "Possibility of Apostacy," etc. And the results were that many existing denominational prejudices and animosities were removed; peace and harmony prevailed, and Methodism duly sustained by the Word of God. One addition to our church; and I anticipate greater results in the near future.

Sister Word organized a Woman's Christian Temperance Union there some three months ago, in which the good ladies of that vicinity have been taking an active part; and the result is that one saloon has quit the sale of intoxicating liquors. There is but one more left to confront the cries, prayers and efforts of good mothers, wives, sisters, saints and angels. I do not believe it will be there long, for where woman and God work, the world and the devil have to stand back. He is talking now of quitting.

Bro. Dye gave a stirring lecture during the meeting, on "Intemperance," which melted a great many hearts to tears; at the conclusion of which nearly all in the house gave their hands that they were for temperance. May God bless them!

This closes all of my protracted meetings on this charge. The other ministers who have helped me during the summer were Revs. H. R. Tucker, Amos Kendall, our much-loved presiding elder, and Bro. Sam Bass, local preacher of my charge.

To God be all the glory!

W. D. BASS, P. C.

COUSHATTA, LA.

MR. EDITOR: Our camp meeting at Davis' Springs, Coushatta circuit, was quite a success. Services commenced Friday night, September 2. Bro. Trippet preached. On Saturday Bros. Scott, Davies, Henderson and our presiding elder, Bro. Cassity, arrived, so we felt pretty well equipped for battle with those field-officers to take part. So we proceeded in good earnest, having a good membership and three local preachers and one superannuate, also, to stand by us and join in where needed. The work went on. Preaching, splendid; in fact, said by many to be the best that they had ever had at that place. Of course, conversions soon followed. Power was on the preachers and people. Grove prayer meetings became quite interesting, and, as we heard the shouts going up from thence, we thought of Dr. A. L. P. Green in his experience years ago, when, on one occasion, he heard the shouts and songs ascending from the grove, it seemed as if he had been in a trance and heard the angels singing.

Services were continued from day to day, and night to night, until Sunday night, September 11.

There were eight accessions, and between twenty-five and thirty conversions. Church much revived.

Thanks to the brother ministers for their good work among us. To God be all the praise!

Yours in Christ,

R. A. DAVIS, P. C.

WATER VALLEY, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The Water Valley Camp Meeting was held September 9-14.

Christians were revived, and twelve or fifteen sinners were converted, and three united with the church.

Revs. Dr. Wheat, George H. Hodge, T. G. Freeman, Hudgins and Ferrall have our thanks for faithful service rendered on the occasion. J. S. OAKLEY.

EBENEZER, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed a series of meetings on our work with fine results. The Lord was with us in power. The church wonderfully quickened: sinners convicted, and penitents were converted. Quite a number added to the church. Thank God for these and other good results too numerous to name!

Yours, W. A. DOLLAR.

VOSSBURG, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: Vossburg circuit is doing finely. Some good revivals, and a good quarterly meeting last Sabbath, Bro. Norsworthy preaching three good sermons.

Yours fraternally,

D. C. LANGFORD.

Our Contributors.

"Regeneration."

MR. EDITOR: In your paper, of September 15, under the above caption, I find an article from Bro. J. W. Ellison, in which I note the following strange declarations:

1. "I also stated that regeneration was the work of the Spirit of God, reserved to the morning of the resurrection."

2. "Who does not recognize in his daily experience sin, as a warring element in him."

3. Referring to the morning of the resurrection, he says, "Then sin will be destroyed in us."

4. "Who does not feel sin as a fearful incubus firmly fixed and fastened to us while in this life?"

5. "Every experience of life teaches us that we are not regenerated."

6. "Sin is a part of our being. * * * and we must remain under the power of sin until our Deliverer comes."

7. "Perfectionists and holiness people would do well to consider their use of words and professions."

These to me are strange declarations. I wonder, according to this theory, what will become of Bro. Ellison's dead or unregenerated soul from death to the resurrection of the body? Will he tell us?

Now, Mr. Editor, will you allow me space to say that I think all this confusion of thought with Bro. Ellison, and many other good men, grows out of a failure to observe that God has provided and revealed two resurrections, or regenerations—one of the soul, and the other of the body. It is clear to the mind of every Bible reader that man in his entirety—both soul and body—fell under the curse of sin. Then, therefore, every plan or system of redemption that did not provide for the revival, regeneration, or resurrection, to life both of soul and body would be very imperfect. But God, in his grace and wisdom, has not overlooked any part of man's want, but provided for both. Hence: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection," etc.

But what is the first resurrection? It is God, by his Spirit, quickening, or renewing, the dead souls of men to a state of life. It is the same as regeneration. It is to be made, morally, a new creature; it is to be vitally united to Christ, the source of life; it is to be made partaker of the divine nature: it is to be born again, etc. Scripture abounds with this doctrine: "You hath he quickened (i. e., made alive) who were dead in trespasses and sins." "If you be risen with Christ, then walk in newness of life." "And hath raised us up together," etc. "We know that we have passed from death unto life."

What is the second resurrection, or regeneration? It is God fashioning or conforming the bodies of men to the state, wants and capabilities of the soul at the last day.

In the great plan of redemption each of these resurrections, or regenerations, has its appointed time. The first—that of the soul—follows immediately upon the exercise of faith in the Son of God. As this is the point denied by Bro. Ellison, please indulge a few proof-texts: "He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life." "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." "He that heareth my words, and believeth on him that sent me, hath eternal life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life." There are many others of equal force. The second resurrection, or regeneration—that of the body—will take place at the last day. "Then shall have come the hour when all that are in their graves shall come forth," etc.

The first resurrection, or regeneration, is limited to those who believe in the Son of God: the second will be universal. The same divine power that raises the dead soul to life at the exercise of faith will at the last day animate the dead bodies of all men. The first regeneration—that of the soul—is by far the most important, for it conditions the second. Hence: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, for the second death shall have no power over him;" and, "If the Spirit of him that raised up Christ from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies." Again: "For our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior the Lord Jesus, who shall change our vile bodies, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body."

Now, Bro. Ellison, like Paul, feels something in his nature opposing his righteous life. But this is not an unregenerated soul, nor sin fastened to our nature, as he says; but it is the carnal, or unregenerated, body opposing the pure and regenerated soul. Hence the conflict and warfare of the Christian life. Hence Paul says: "I fight, not to restrain an unregenerated soul, but to keep under my (unregenerated) body." Hence he says: "While my inner man is renewed, my outward man perisheth."

Yes, Bro. Ellison, it is true that our regenerated souls, which have a constant bearing upward toward God and heaven, are much hindered and borne down by our unregenerated bodies, and we, like Paul, are often disposed to cry out, "O, who shall deliver from the body of this death?" (this dead body.) Yet if, like him, we constantly fight to keep our bodies under, and bring them into subjection to the renewed soul, after awhile, as Paul tells us in the same chapter, "the creature (i. e., the body itself) shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the marvelous liberty of the sons of God." For, having passed in the first resurrection, we are happy and holy.

When our dear Lord comes then he shall change—i. e., regenerate—our vile bodies, that they may be fashioned like unto his glorious, or glorified, body. And what a great change that will be! Here and now we bear the image of the earthy: but there and then we will bear the image of the heavenly. It is sown, or interred, in corruption, it shall be raised in incorruption: it is sown in weakness, but shall be raised in glory: it is sown a natural body, it shall be raised a spiritual body. Then there shall be perfect harmony and agreement between the regenerated soul and regenerated body, and both, reunited, shall stand in their paradisiacal perfection, reflecting the perfect image of God. Hence God the Father and God the Son, seeing the family favor, will recognize and own us as son and brother, and say, "Enter thou of thy Father;" and the body, as soul, being delivered from all that is material and carnal, will, therefore, be released from all laws which govern matter and will, therefore, be capable of serving God in any part of his universe. Happy state! Thanks be to God who giveth us such a glorious victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!

Can a Christian Live without Committing Sin?

MR. EDITOR: The Holy Bible, properly translated and construed, never contradicts itself. It is a beautifully harmonious whole. And yet there are those among us professing Christianity who so construe certain passages of Scripture as to make them flatly contradict numerous other passages as plainly written as they can be. Their main object seems to be not to bring their experience up to the standard of scriptural holiness of heart and life, but to bring the standard down to their very imperfect experience. Instead of striving to cleanse themselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, that they may perfect holiness in the fear of God, they prefer to adopt the opinion that no adult human being can live in this world without committing sin; and they are very fond of supporting their theory by quoting detached portions of Scripture, such as: "For there is no man that sinneth not." "For there is not a just man upon earth that doeth good, and sinneth not." "For in many things we offend in all." "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." And such persons are very fond of making certain quotations from the seventh chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, where Paul was evidently personating a thoroughly awakened sinner previous to his justification by faith in Christ Jesus, and not the experience of a truly converted man. If anyone wishes to understand the seventh chapter of Romans, we advise him to read it in connection with "Clark's Commentary."

In regard to the above quotations, which refer to the universality of sin among adults, I think we have a fair explanation in I John i, 10: "If we say that we have not sinned, we make him a liar, and his Word is not in us." Perhaps no adult human being can truthfully say that they have never sinned; but this does not imply that they must necessarily continue to sin. Such a construction would positively contradict a large portion of the Bible. The great object of the mission of Jesus on earth was to "save his people from their sins." I was conversing, some months ago, with an old member of our church on the subject of being saved from all sin in this life in order to a scriptural preparation for heaven, when he, with apparent self-complacency, replied "that he did not pretend to live without sin; that he committed sin every day of his life." To this I said, "If you speak the truth, you are 'of the devil' every day of your life, for the apostle says, 'He that committeth sin is of the devil; for the devil sinneth from the beginning.'"

I fear that too many among us are deceiving themselves in the same way. But I wish to say, in conclusion, that it is the privilege of all Christians to be saved from all sin, both of omission and commission—both of the heart and of the lip. I can only make a few quotations, but they shall be to the point. I first quote from I John iii: "And ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins. * * * Whosoever abideth in him sinneth not: whosoever sinneth hath not seen him, neither known him. * * * Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin: for his seed remaineth in him: and he can not sin, because he is born of God."

This language is plain and of easy comprehension. A man must lose the power of a new birth and backslide before he can relapse into sin. I make a few quotations from Romans vi. In the preceding chapter the apostle discusses justification by faith, and its attendant privileges and blessings, and in this he calls our attention to the utter destruction of sin in all its forms and degrees. "What shall we say then? Shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound? God forbid! How shall we, that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." "Crucifixion" means death; "destroyed" means annihilated—swept away: so that if the old man is crucified, and the body of sin is destroyed, it looks like a complete salvation from all sin. "For he that is dead is freed from sin. * * * Likewise reckon ye also yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. * * * For sin shall not have dominion over you. * * * Being then made free from sin, ye became servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness." I would advise all who are born of God to read the whole of this chapter often, that they may see their glorious privilege of being saved from sin—yes; all sin—for sin is the greatest evil in the universe of God.

Here and There.

MR. EDITOR: As I am at home to-day, resting and preparing for another trip, I will sketch a few items that may be of interest to some, at least, of the readers of the ADVOCATE.

During the summer months it has been my privilege to attend several district, camp and protracted meetings, on which occasions I have enjoyed the communion of saints, and have witnessed many conversions and accessions to the church. While the revival wave has not been as high and sweeping as we have seen at other times, yet it is manifest that much good has been done for the establishment of the church and the furtherance of the gospel. Many souls have been born into the kingdom of grace, and many that were already in this state have been quickened with new energy and zeal in Christian life and work.

The second Sunday in September, and the week following, I spent, according to previous promise, with Bro. Bass, pastor of Ebenezer circuit, and his people at Egypt. Bro. Dye, of Aberdeen station, was with us, and did some excellent and profitable preaching. Although but one person joined the church, the meeting resulted in great good to the church and people of that community.

On the third Sunday I went to Buena Vista, and found Bro. Tucker, the pastor, in the midst of a gracious revival, which had resulted, when I left on Thursday morning, in 33 conversions. This is a growing village, being the seat of a flourishing normal college, under the management of Prof. Dickey and brother. Our people have no house of worship here, but steps have been taken to have one by the first of next year. So mote it be.

On my arrival at home I found a lively meeting in progress under the leadership of our beloved Bro. Bowen. There have been several conversions to date, and we trust there will be many more.

The church in this town has sustained a great loss in the death of Bro. John C. Lucas, one of its most valued members. He had attained great distinction as a Sunday-school superintendent, which office he had held for fifteen years. There has been a great deal of sickness through our country, this season, from which several of our preachers and their families have not been free. Bros. Worsham, Oats and Leech have been very sick. Bro. J. A. Leech's wife is now quite low with fever. Bro. Rainey's family has suffered much and long affliction. Bro. J. M. Barnes' son, Charles, died last week. These all have the sympathies and prayers of their brethren. Nor do we forget our editor in his afflictions.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which molds the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

Review of the Modern Fathers.

A Consideration of the Theories of Modern Methodist Writers, and of the Historic and Scriptural Doctrines of the Methodists.

BY REV. JNO. M. CROW, A. M., Louisville Conference.

Dr. Fitzgerald says: "This Review of the Modern Fathers is clearly the product of a mind that has wrestled manfully with the questions discussed. He has something to say, and says it in his own way. The glow of earnestness glids and warms every page. He gives a reason for all his positions, and dogmatizes delightfully. He criticises his seniors modestly and respectfully. Transparent love of truth characterizes the book. He fights in the open field and uses the weapons of honorable warfare."

The author prints in cheap form for the more general circulation. 143 pages. Price, only 25 cts.

Briefs.

The total membership of the English Wesleyan body is given at 537,000, with nearly 47,000 on trial. The ministers number 2,867, including probationers and supernumeraries. One hundred ministers are now engaged as home missionaries.

If the reader has been passing over Dr. Andrews' Sunday-school Lessons without reading them, he has missed some of the best things that appear in this paper. The Doctor is giving earnest and prayerful thought to his studies on this line: and they will amply and richly repay the reader, and furnish him thoroughly for his Sunday-school work.

We endorse and appropriate the following from the Southern Watchman:

Few papers have larger number of correspondents than this, who give life to it, and variety as well. We are glad to have their communications; but let them consider a newspaper is not a book, nor a review, nor a pamphlet; has to be filled with a variety of articles, therefore let them be short, otherwise variety ceases. It is an open secret: the editor knows it well; long articles are not read; hence be short. What is a long article? Anything over a column; therefore, let us all say our say within a column. Happy is the man who can be short in a newspaper.

The following is the statistical report of the St. Louis Conference:

The statistical secretary reported 182 local preachers, 17,705 members, 763 infant baptisms, 1,258 adult baptisms, Sunday-schools, 182; teachers, 1,408; scholars, 11,080; churches, 170⅓; value of churches, $478,595; parsonages, 31; value of parsonages, $38,436.

Raised for church extension, $947 65; for foreign missions, $3,867 37; for domestic missions, $1,853 50.

This shows an increase in everything except adult baptisms.

Speaking of the effect of Mr. Moody's preaching in England, and the results of the organization and work of the Salvation Army, the London Methodist Times says:

The reflex action upon the churches has been immense. The pulpit has been converted afresh. The style of preaching has wholly changed during the last ten years. Ornate and elaborate services are not listened to with the admiration they once commanded. There has been a demand on all sides for plain, direct and practical evangelical preaching. When we consider all this, we are bold to say that evangelical life was never so vigorous in England as it is to day.

THE TENNESSEE ELECTION.—Again have the prohibitionists been defeated at the ballot-box. The election in Tennessee, September 29, went against them by quite a majority. The vote was much larger than usual, showing that the subject has strong hold upon the people. The temperance women did valiant service; and to their efforts is attributed the large vote. The cause, though temporarily defeated, is "marching on." The recent elections have demonstrated that no cause ever grew as fast in public favor as prohibition is growing to-day. A few more months of such growth will drive the antis to despair.

The Honest Unbeliever—The Bible.

BY BISHOP J. C. KEENER.

"I don't believe the Bible."

"Well, what of that? Is this [illegible] book you disbelieve? But let me ask, Can you say so without uneasiness of mind? You can disbelieve "Gibbon's Rome" or "Taine's French Revolution" without the least disturbance. Why is it that it troubles you to disbelieve the Scripture? Has not the Bible a marvelous air of truth about it? There is no book so thoroughly and honestly human; none that so unsparingly analyzes man; none that so speaks with authority. It does not timidly fight for position. It declares itself for you, though it warns you, and terribly denounces the evil that is in you, of which you are, or are not, conscious.

Where do you suppose it came from? It has been on hand a long time. Your father and grandfather and all your ancestors have at one time looked upon this book with the same wonder, doubt and fear that you now feel. It goes back beyond the beginning of England, of Rome, of Assyria, of Egypt. It was translated by order of Ptolemy, more than two hundred years before Christ, into the Greek language. We have both the translation in Greek and the original in Hebrew. It, therefore, was not made by any later person. Where do you suppose a book so vastly superior to Homer, as is the Book of Job, written in Hebrew, came from? Authors of such books are not very plenty. Job is as old as the five Books of Moses, and these far older than Homer. Who do you suppose wrote it? Though written so long, long ago, the reading is as full of every-day common sense and as well suited for our daily guidance as if composed on yesterday. No other book has the quality of being suited to all time and to all persons equally. Why don't people get tired of it? Indeed, many become more interested in it as life advances; some read nothing else.

One reason is: It is the only book that professes to tell a good many things which we desire to know, such as: Who made the world, and how; (2) Who made man, and how; (3) Why man was made; (4) What connection there is between us and our Maker; (5) How he feels towards us—what his will is in respect to our living; (6) What is to be the end of our life—do we still live when we die, or do we decay like a tree? (7) Where do we go, if anywhere? (8) Where did the idea of good and bad come from? (9) Are there any other intelligencies besides men. Where do they live, and how are they affected towards us; Who made them; Shall we ever see them, or shall we see our dead friends again, or shall we ever see the One who made us? If only a part of all this can be answered in the Bible, it may well be read, for no other book attempts as much.

"I have heard all this before, yet I find in my mind a strange inclination not to read this book, and a still stranger wish that it may not be true. It is the only book about which I have feeling. It seems to me a personality; and I view it as I would a person against whom I have been long prejudiced. In fact, there is a disposition to question it at every point; to oppose it, of course, modestly and with such reason as I can find, and to welcome all persons and writers who doubt it in whole or in part. I read books against the Bible with more pleasure and secret satisfaction than I would any argument in its favor. I seem to fear that it is true, and to wish that it may be false. This, too, in the face of all my teaching, and in opposition to the views of those whom, personally, I respect. And yet I find it impossible to be neutral in the matter. Why should a mere book disturb me at all? is the question I can not satisfactorily answer. This is a strange book that equally troubles you, if you believe it and if you disbelieve it. It must address some part of man that no other book reaches. As I am troubled all over by it, it must reach the very deepest part of my conscious self.

"The book appears to be my friend. It presents itself as a counselor, as a light in a dark place, to show me over a causeway that otherwise I could not pass. It promises me a pathway that constantly shines and brightens, and offers, as the result of its precepts, an eternal life of joy at the right hand of him who made me.

"Yet, beyond all this, it introduces me to the most perfect and attractive Person the mind could imagine. He is set forth as the One who came from Heaven and returned to Heaven; and who, by his very nature, unites my manhood with the Godhead. He came to discover and to save.

"He is full of action and of speech, yet never does anything excepting such as a divine Person should, and never utters a word that is in the slightest degree out of keeping with infinite Wisdom—so far as I can judge. He never repents of anything he has thought, or is, or says. Certainly the only perfect man, if this be so. Full of life, raising the dead, healing the sick, yet he himself dies!—dies of his own will; and, dying, presently lives again!

"There is in this Man of Nazareth an authority and an attraction more persuasive and convincing than all else I find in the book. How strangely accurate is its reproduction of this wonderful Man! If he never lived, who could have imagined such perfection of manhood—who could have invented such words, such thoughts of God, such knowledge of men? where every word that fell from him, however casual, is a permanent contribution to truth. If he did live, he is the instructor and the friend I most of all need.

"So is my heart tortured with the revelation of this book. 'Dismiss it!' I could easier dismiss the day after it has risen. I can not; my very soul seems to fasten on it and to assimilate it as a hungry man would fasten upon bread. The presence of the divine Man, if he be present, and this book almost makes you feel that he is, pierces my soul as an arrow. I feel myself, strangely enough, ready to cry out, 'I am a sinful person.' Just his character of truth, of purity, of gentleness and moderation, of sympathy and friendliness melts me down in spite of myself. He seems to show me what I ought to be; and so he does show me what I am. And it is this disclosure of my inner nature, my deformed spirit, that oppresses me to the earth. Why the mere existence of another should have such an effect on me, I know not.

"I sometimes think that it is this war I have with my wretched self that inspires my unbelief; no, not my unbelief, but a desire to disbelieve the book and all that it brings to my knowledge. Had I never seen it, would I have been so wretched? Would it have been better for me that it had not been? But it was here when I came! I might as well suppose that I had not been born under the stars. No, I must accept it, at least, as a fact—a fact that is not affected by me, but I by it.

"I will imagine that it is not; that my unbelief is the truth. Will that satisfy me, will it? How strange is this! I really believe that without this book I should be yet more wretched than I am with it. It may be that, much as I have desired to know that it is false, there is, after all, in me a latent wish that some of it—yes, some of it—may be true. There is hope in some of it. To blot out all that it reveals of the Man of Nazareth, would be to intensify the darkness of death, and to lessen the hope of the spirit.

"Strangely enough, he addresses my unbelief, and invites me to believe—to believe in him personally. That I think I could do—in him, if not in all his sayings. Yes, in him, for I could desire to be like him. Surely, he is my true manhood. I can have no higher ideal. My heart will have no other, even though my mind might seek for another. O that I could believe!"

O thou Honest Unbeliever, pray for faith; ask for it, as you would ask for bread, and God the Spirit will answer you.

We Have No Educational Policy.

BY REV. T. C. WIER.

The above caption is the substance of a remark by Bishop Galloway, I believe, in the late discussion of our "church schools." Though at first a startling declaration, it is nevertheless true. We have an educational sentiment in the church, and we appreciate the importance of education. We have our Boards of Education in the Annual Conferences. We formulate and read stereotyped reports on education, and adopt resolutions commending our high schools and colleges; and there our connectional work ends. We devise no efficient scheme; we formulate no system; we have no connectional school—no schools based upon any plans suggested and required by the General Conference—no schools with which the whole church claims connectional interest.

The Vanderbilt University is a Methodist school, the pride, indeed, of Southern Methodism; but it is under the patronage of only a few of the Annual Conferences. The same unconnectional status appertains to Emory College, Randolph-Macon, Southern University, Central College, and to all our high schools and colleges. They are "church schools," but not connectional, because, as a church, we have no educational policy or system. A few public-spirited individuals, in particular localities, interest themselves, or an Annual Conference here and there, and a high school or college is projected. And in this spasmodic, struggling sort of way much, indeed, has been accomplished, and is still being done for education, under the auspices of the church. How much more might be accomplished if the resources and energies of the church were concentrated and directed by some wisely planned educational policy!

Again, our efforts in behalf of education have been mainly in the direction of colleges and high schools, while we have strangely ignored or overlooked the primary or common school. We are much concerned and make efforts for the education of the larger youth, but we neglect the elementary training of the little children. In this particular our educational plans and work are sadly deficient, and the attitude of the church surprisingly inconsistent.—We deem it unwise and unsafe to commit the mental culture of our larger sons and daughters to State institutions, and yet we turn over the whole responsibility of the education of our children of more tender age to the public school—a State institution! Lord Brougham said that a child learned more during its first six years than in all after life: and yet we place the children of the Church, at this susceptible and impressible age, into the hands of the State, to be taught in the public school!

We seem to take it for granted that nothing can be done by the church in the way of providing for the elementary education of our children. We yield to the apparently inevitable, and accept the public school as the best we can do; and the State, without religion or the Bible, becomes foster-mother in the mental training of our little children. We say, without the Bible, because no provision is made for its use; and in many instances strong influence is brought to bear against the use of the Bible in the public school.

Of the public schools Dr. Hunnicutt, in the ADVOCATE, uses this language: "They are very unsatisfactory," and "largely delusive as to results." I freely endorse this sentiment, and say further that I would be glad to see the whole thing thrown into solution, not to say dissolution, that it might crystallize and come out in better shape. It is a cheap, dollar-store system. The price is cheap, and the article procured is cheap. It is a sort of stereotyped, cast-iron affair, in which there is little to stimulate the best efforts or to develop the highest talents of the teacher. The task is definitely marked out, and the pay will be so much—nothing more. The teacher's aim and work will be according to the task assigned and the wages promised—nothing more. We have no complaint against the teacher, but we find much fault with the system. True, it is better than nothing. But it does not satisfy the demand for thorough, liberal education under the influence of the Christian religion.

According to the late report of the commissioner of education, there are in our country 365 colleges and universities. Of these, 278 are denominational, under the control of the different churches. Of the eighty-seven remaining non-sectarian schools, more than half are presided over by ministers of the gospel. Hence it appears that the higher education of our country is largely controlled by the church. Why may not the church obtain a controlling influence also over the primary and common-school education of the country, and thus bring the elementary training of our children under the influence of Christianity?

We send missionaries and contribute large sums of money to educate the children of pagan lands, and thus bring them under the saving power of the gospel; but we make no effort, as a church, to educate the little children of our own Christian land!

We need an educational policy which shall render our efforts less spasmodic and local, and secure better system and larger success—a policy that shall embrace the primary and common school as well as the college and high school. Why should we not aim, as far as practicable, to establish an elementary school in every pastoral charge in America as well as in China or Mexico or Japan—Let elementary schools be established in every Methodist community, in connection with the training-schools, recommended by some of the late correspondents of the ADVOCATE, and it will tend greatly to stimulate the present a-tonic educational sentiment of our people, and to supply a larger patronage to our colleges and universities.

SEPTEMBER 21, 1887.

QUEER PRACTICE.—Mr. X. Y. Z. is a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. He permits his subscription to run out. In a month or so his attention is called to it. He does not notice it. After several more months, during which the paper continues to go to him, he is again notified that he is in arrears. He does not notice it. The matter goes on in this way for several more months, and finally his name is erased and the paper stops. Now, lo and behold! in about two weeks comes a letter with two dollars, and the request, "Please send the paper to Mrs. X. Y. Z." Queer, isn't it?

Notes.

So far five ladies have been elected reserve delegates to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to meet in New York City, next May!

The American Board recently held a farewell meeting in Boston for fifty-eight missionaries. One to Spain, nine to India, thirteen to Turkey, sixteen to Japan, nineteen to China. It is gratifying to know that some churches have the missionary spirit.

A physician, Dr. Simpson, of Edinburgh, in the late Medical Congress, held in Washington City, distributed a pamphlet with this title: "Christ and the Beginning of Christianity, by a Physician of the First Century." The pamphlet was simply the Gospel of Luke and the Acts of the Apostles. The writings of the "beloved physician" still have a charm for very many of the disciples of Æsculapius.

If you have carefully read Bishop Keener's article, in another column, then you are prepared to appreciate the following from Sir William Gladstone:

"If I am asked, what is the remedy for the deeper sorrows of the human heart—what a man should chiefly look to in his progress through life, as the power that is to sustain him under trials and enable him manfully to confront his afflictions, I must point him to something which, in a well-known hymn, is called, "The old, old story," told of in an old, old book, and taught with an old, old teaching, which is the greatest and best gift ever given to mankind.

Three million women in the United States work for money. Of these, 600,000 are agricultural laborers, mainly in the cotton fields of the South; 640,000 are employed in manufactories, while 530,000 in the laundries of the country insist that the "Chinese must go;" 280,000 are milliners, and 200,000 find employment as dressmakers; 60,000 earn their bread in the tailor shops, and 690,000 are saleswomen, teachers, telegraph operators, type-writers, book-keepers, type-setters and nurses. There are 2,500 female physicians.

We are rejoiced to see that a better education for our ministers is a subject that is forcing its way to the front. The Southwestern Methodist has the following:

The St. Louis Conference is taking higher ground as regards the qualifications required in the young men who enter the ministry. This is an important step. The demand is upon us for a better educated ministry. While consecration is of the first importance, still, as the Bishop forcibly remarked, there must be something to consecrate. Consecrated ignorance is not an offering acceptable to the Lord where the paths of knowledge are open on every side and the church is calling for higher education in her ministers.

Recently there was held in Philadelphia a celebration of the Centenary of the Adoption of the Constitution. In view of that celebration, the following figures may not be uninteresting:

When the Constitution was framed there were thirteen States in the Union. Now there are thirty-eight. The population of the United States in 1790, when the first census was taken, was 3,929,214. It is now over 60,000,000. There were then about 1,500 Federal office holders in the country. There are now more than 100,000. The total net ordinary receipts of the United States in 1792 were $2,661,000. In 1886 there were $336,439,000. The total net ordinary expenditures in 1792 were $869,000. In 1886 there were $242,483,000.

Eight hundred and seventy thousand adults, converts from among the heathen, are now in communion with the Church of Christ, as the result of Protestant missionary labor. These, with their families and dependents, form Christian communities scattered over almost every portion of the habitable globe, numbering in the aggregate at least 2,800,000 souls. Two thousand five hundred of these converts are ordained ministers of the gospel, placed over Christian congregations; 27,000 are employed as evangelists to their heathen fellow-countrymen, and a large number are acting as voluntary agents in preaching and teaching in Sunday-schools, and engaged in other work of Christian activity.

This is the way some Bostonian Christians carried the gospel about during the summer. A letter to the Advance tells the story:

One of the features of Boston during the summer is the "gospel wagon," which is permitted to do its work unhindered by the police. An omnibus drawn by two horses, contains half a dozen men, one of whom plays a reed organ, two the cornet, while the others sing. The wagon starts from the building of the Young Men's Christian Association, goes here and there into destitute portions of the city. Stopping at favorable places, the occupants of the wagon distribute printed slips of hymns, and then sing and play. When an audience is gathered, a prayer is offered, the Bible is read, and some one speaks briefly for Christ. More than once stones have been thrown and a disturbance made, but the work has been faithfully sustained, and it is thought that on some Sabbaths at least 20,000 have heard the gospel from this chariot of salvation.

The Question Answered.

The religious papers and magazines have for several years been trying to answer the question: "How to reach the masses?" Preachers in conventions and Conferences have discussed it in all its phases. In regard to the propagation of the gospel, it is undoubtedly the question. In our judgment, the last St. Louis Christian Advocate has given the best answer that has yet been given. It says:

Field-preaching in the form of street-preaching in our cities is the only way to reach the masses. They will not come to us, we must go to them or our mission fails. It is so in heathen lands, conservatism will not touch China in a thousand years. Schools, fine church buildings, secular education, with a smattering of religious literature, regular Sabbath service—all these will but put a faint odor of Christianity in pagan lands; but no spiritual revolutions will mark the advance of religion till it is pressed with the zeal of Wesley—a zeal that cared nothing for propriety or order, a zeal that went on its fiery way and stood not on the order of its going, of which field-preaching was the expression and illustration.

We believe this to be the true answer, because we have seen it tried with success in this "ungodly city of Orleans."

During the spring and early summer, out-door meetings were held in various parts of the city by our pastors, and the results have been very gratifying; so much so that one of the oldest members of our church here—one who has lived here, perhaps, longer than anyone else—said, the other day, to our presiding elder: "Keep up the open-air meetings; they are doing great good." Those meetings were well attended, and a respectful hearing was invariably given; and the result, in nearly every place where the preaching was done, was the establishment of a Sunday-school.

The plan of the City Mission has been to select the place, and erect a temporary platform, secure an organ and organist, engage a company of singers, and invite the pastors to preach. There has been hearty co-operation on the part of all these parties. The singers have sung the gospel to the crowds that attended, and the preachers, having put away all fear of man, have proclaimed the truth, as it is in Jesus, to hundreds who otherwise would not hear it. The plan has been to preach, at least every night for a week, at each place. At some places the meetings have continued for two weeks; and, as a rule, the longer the preaching continued at any one place, the larger the crowd became.

In our judgment, an organization for this special purpose of open-air preaching is better, for the reason that no one preacher goes out by himself to preach in the streets. He goes out backed and sustained by all his brethren, lay and clerical; and that is an immense help to his courage. In this fact the preacher of today has the advantage of Mr. Wesley. He had to go out alone, and he said, frankly: "I do not love field-preaching."

In our plan each one is a helper to every other one; and when the preacher stands up to proclaim the truth to the assembled hundreds, he feels that he has the support of a strong organization which is made up of the best and most influential members of his church, and, feeling that, he preaches the Word with power. Hence we regard the experiment which our City Mission has made this year as a demonstration of the fact that the masses can be reached in this way; and we commend it to all our churches in the cities. Brethren, try it.

If you know "an honest doubter," show him Bishop Keener's article, on another page, and persuade him to read it.

Personals.

Dr. Donald Fraser, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Decatur, Ga., died recently on the train from Jacksonville, Fla. He was on his knees, with his head resting on the back of the seat in front of him, when he was discovered to be dead.

Simon Cameron, Jefferson Davis and Hannibal Hamlin are the oldest ex-senators now living. They were born, respectively, in 1799, 1808, 1809.

Bro. J. W. Medlock, pastor of our church in New Iberia, gave us a call during the past week. Bro. Medlock is well known to our readers by his scholarly articles in the ADVOCATE.

Archbishop Leray, of this city, died recently in France.

The secretary of the Texas State Fair, to be held at Dallas, October 20-November 5, has our thanks for programmes and tickets of admission.

Prince Bismarck has been twenty-five years Prime Minister of Prussia.

Emperor William of Germany and Emperor Dom Pedro of Brazil met recently at Baden-Baden.

There have been ten deaths among the members of the Virginia Conference since its last session. So says Dr. Edwards.

Rev. A. E. P. Albert, D. D., has succeeded to the editorship of the Southwestern Christian Advocate, made vacant by the death of Dr. M. W. Taylor.

Dr. Crooks having declined to accept the editorship of the Methodist Review, it is understood that Dr. Daniel Wise will take charge of it until the meeting of the General Conference in May next.

Justice Magruder, who was the organ of the Supreme Court of Illinois in the anarchists' case, is the son of Prof. W. H. N. Magruder, of Baton Rouge.

Many of our people have died during the summer, and our obituary drawer is overflowing. The friends of the deceased are reminded that obituaries "take their turn;" and, as we can only publish a limited number in each paper, it may be some time before some of them appear. Be patient, friends, and in the meantime get ready for your own obituary.

A note from Mrs. H. B. Schreiner, of Gratz, Penn., gives us the melancholy news of the death of Dr. Jacob Schreiner, at that place, on September 22, of a second stroke of paralysis. Dr. Schreiner was a prominent Methodist, and for several years was a delegate to the Louisiana Conference. He was sixty-three years old.

Turn to another column of this paper and read the publisher's offer in regard to the ADVOCATE and the Rand-McNally publications. This is one of the best offers that has yet been made to the subscribers of the ADVOCATE. The Atlas is one of the latest and best, and the Encyclopedia is comprehensive, a complete treasury of information which you ought to have, and the price is almost nothing in comparison with what you get.

Mississippi Notes.

The Young Men's Christian Association have thirty-one associations. Two are college, and three are colored associations.

Jackson is to have "the greatest fair ever held in Mississippi, October 17."

The Madison County Fair will be held in Canton, beginning October 25.

Whitworth College opened with fine prospects. There is an increased attendance of pupils. At the formal opening congratulatory addresses by distinguished Mississippians were made, and the session began with brightening future. President Fitzhugh and his coadjutors have the confidence of the church and community, and the school is one of the best.

Senatobia will have a stock show, October 11.

A bank, with $30,000 capital, is to begin operations soon in Brookhaven.

Some colored people are talking of starting a newspaper in Greenwood.

The Natchez Weekly Democrat says there is quite a demand for houses in Natchez, and invites men of means to invest their capital in that enterprise, assuring them that a liberal interest will be returned.

Gen. Will T. Martin, of Natchez, will accept the Democratic nomination for the office of State Senator.

In about two weeks Hazlehurst will have a compress.

Lung Troubles and Wasting

Diseases can be cured, if properly treated in time, as shown by the following statement from D. C. FREEMAN, Sydney: "Having been a great sufferer from pulmonary attacks, and gradually wasting away for the past two years, it affords me pleasure to testify that Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Lime and Soda has given me great relief, and I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering in a similar way to myself. In addition, I would say that it is very pleasant to take."

The College at Meridian.

The East Mississippi Female College opened much better than usual, with a larger number of boarders than at any time last year.

The girls have come from Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, and they appear to be a very superior collection of girls from good families, making a very select school where pure influences prevail. There is but one vacant room, and more pupils are expected—enough to fill up every available place for a boarding pupil.

The music department, in the skillful hands of Miss Addie Purnell, is the largest this institution has ever known. Good, solid work is done here.

The art and industrial departments are open, and in the hands of teachers of known ability and reputation. Every department is in fine organization, and the college has entered upon another successful year.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement to our agents for the securing of new subscribers from this date, we make the following offer:

For eight new subscribers with cash in full, one set of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary—four volumes—bound in half Morocco; or for six new subscribers the full set bound in extra fine English cloth, sprinkled edge.

Here is an opportunity to secure one of the best Commentaries ever published. Read the following testimonials:

Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn.

This Commentary has received the hearty commendation of a large number of the leading publishers, biblical scholars, preachers and Sunday-school workers of the country. It is thorough, modern, compact, condensed and cheap. Its immense popularity is deserved. It is specially adapted to the family. "It is the cream of the Commentaries collected by three eminent scholars." Nowhere have we seen more valuable matter packed in the same space—four large 12mo. volumes. Price, $8.00.

T. O. Summers, D. D., LL.D., late Dean of Theological Department of Vanderbilt University, Professor of Systematic Theology; and Book Editor of M. E. Church, South.

I have the Commentary and make good use of it. It is plain, evangelical, and is a cheap and good Commentary. The notes indicate sound learning and extensive research. We endorse their exegesis in general as scholarly, sound and edifying.

A. M. Shipp, D. D., late Professor of Exegetical Theology, Vanderbilt University.

I take pleasure in saying that the Commentary of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown is a valuable, critical practical, and explanatory exposition of the Old and New Testaments, and is regularly recommended by me to my classes in Exegetical Theology.

T. F. Dodd, D. D., Professor of Hebrew, Ecclesiastical History and English Literature, Vanderbilt University.

I consider the Commentary an excellent work. Of all the complete Commentaries on the Bible I prefer this for general use. It is the one to which I resort most frequently. Considering the brevity, the perspicuity, and sound judgment displayed in its elucidation of the Sacred Text, I would advise the reader to provide himself with this in preference to all others.

Bishop J. C. Granbery.

The comments are brief, clear, pointed, thinking, practical and judicious. Few and apt words are chosen to explain the Scriptures. While they are the fruits of scholarly research and criticism, they are so plain as to be easily understood by any reader of average intellect.

Andrew A. Lipscomb, D. D., LL.D., Emeritus Professor, Vanderbilt University.

I have examined this Commentary sufficiently to express my very decided conviction of its eminent merits. It displays just the kind and degree of biblical scholarship that we need in these times, and accordingly is admirably suited to the large and growing class of Scripture students. The clear statement of facts and rules, the vigorous conciseness, the comprehensive scope of the work, commend it to the confidence and appreciation of all who seek wisdom, strength and comfort in the Holy Bible. It consults the wants of the intellect and heart; it meets these wants, and does this so thoughtfully, so compactly, and so spiritually, that I am glad of an opportunity to call public attention to its rare excellence. It is excellent, very excellent.

R. M. Palmer, D. D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, New Orleans, La.

It may be considered as having established its claim to be recognized as among the standard Commentaries upon the Bible.

The express charges are not included in the above offer, and it must be understood that cash accompanies all orders. The subscribers secured on this offer will not be entitled to any of the club offers advertised in the ADVOCATE: but they can, by sending twenty-five cents more than advertised prices, less the two dollars paid to agents, secure the papers or magazines used in our club offers. It will be well for agents to so state to subscribers.

Now is the time to get in your best work. The offer, however, is good until December 1, next.

B. A. FAHNESTOCK'S VERMIFUGE
ESTABLISHED 1827. It is now nearly sixty years since this medicine was offered as a remedy for Worms, and from that time its reputation has steadily increased until at the present day it is almost universally acknowledged throughout nearly all parts of the world to be the sovereign remedy. Worm Confections, made more for the purpose of pleasing the palate than of overcoming the disease, have been manufactured all over the country; but their short lease of life is nearly exhausted, while B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge continues to grow in favor daily. Children often look pale and sickly from no other cause than worms, and spasms are most frequently the result of these hidden suppers and miners. When they are irritable and feverish, sometimes craving food and eating ravenously, again refusing wholesome diet, tossing restlessly in sleep, moaning and grinding the teeth, then be assured these symptoms are indications of worms.
Many a helpless child has been laid in the grave, when the disease which caused its death has been entirely misunderstood, and when worms have really been the cause. It has been proved beyond cavil that worms exist in the human system from earliest infancy. Therefore parents—especially mothers who are more constantly with their children, cannot be too observing of the first symptoms of worms, for so surely as they exist, they can be safely and speedily removed from the most delicate infant, by the timely use of B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge.
Physicians do not hesitate to recommend it and use it in their practice, and many of the most eminent of the profession, from all parts of the country, testify to its uniform success. In fact, it never fails. It has frequently been given to children as a safe purgative, not suspecting the cause of the illness, and large quantities of worms were discharged and immediate relief afforded. Great caution must be used by every purchaser to be his own judge in one sense, and to examine every bottle he buys of it. The simple name of FAHNESTOCK is not sufficient. He must look closely and carefully to see that the initials are B. A. FAHNESTOCK, and be satisfied with nothing else.

Gentlemen—I have used some of that most excellent remedy, B. A. Fahnestock's Vermifuge, and found it to have the desired effect. I think your vermifuge can not safely be dispensed with in any family.
Yours, &c., J. W. HUBBARD, M. D.
CAMBRIDGE, MD.
Having used the original "B. A. Fahnestock" Vermifuge in my practice for many years, I have no hesitancy in recommending it as a remedy which is safe, reliable and efficient in all cases where a Vermifuge is needed. THOS. H. HANDY, M. D.

MUSH-AND-MILK.

BY C. C. TRACY.

Oh, the flavor, sweet and rare,
Of the simple farmer fare,
Mush-and-milk, the wholesome diet
Fit the life so pure and quiet!

Clear the realm of fable show!
Get thee hence, Delmonico!
Duf, ye modern viands flat,
A la this and a la that!

Give me back the table bright
With its bowls so clean and white,
Iron spoons, in hands so manful,
Milk so luscious, by the panful!

Oh, the fields of golden maize!
Oh, the halcyon rustle days!
Nibblers pale, in rustling silk,
What know ye of mush-and-milk?

Once again, in foreign lands,
O'er my bowl, I clasp my hands,
Giving thanks that, as of yore,
Mush-and-milk I taste once more.

Oh, the rosy cheeks it gave!
Oh, the arms so strong and brave!
Mush-and-milk has raised the latest
Of the nations, and the greatest.

Countrymen, if ye are wise,
From the town turn off your eyes,
Vile with knavery, shame and brawl
And the stench of alcohol.

Off to the hearty life of old;
Off to the fields of green and gold;
Seek again the simple ways,
Mow the meadows, hoe the maize.

The editor greets "our little cousins" again, and presents them a letter from Aunt Loretta. The editor is glad to know that the little readers of the ADVOCATE take so much interest in his welfare, and he appreciates every kind thought and every good word spoken of him, and still prays that the ADVOCATE may continue to be a blessing to the "young folks." Now, let us see who will be the first to solve Aunt Loretta's puzzle.

My Dear Nieces and Nephews:
How many of you have worked to get that sum added up right? Well, it is pretty hard work for you. I have only heard of one that could work it out.

I think Joe Applethwait deserves much praise for his short sentence with all the alphabet in it. Mary L. Currie, I am glad I helped you a little. Your sentence had all the alphabet; but the editor's call was for the shortest sentence. Your word, with the vowels in alphabetical order, was correct. The orthography was not. The mistake might have been made by the typo.

I found a puzzle in a very old album, and send to see how many will find the answer. The answer was not in the album, so I had to put on my thinking cap and think it out. You must do the same, and that without the help of the older heads if you can. Here it is:

"Before a circle let appear
Twice twenty-five and five in rear.
One-fifth of eight just add, and thou
You'll find God's greatest gift to men."

I think that our editor, whom we hope is regaining his health at those delightful Hot Springs near Ashville, will be pleased to see some real bright little letters in "our corner." How many of you remember to ask God to bless him when you ask blessing for yourself and the loved ones at home? I hope you all can raise your hands at this question. If he knew that all the big and little readers of the ADVOCATE were praying for his recovery, it would do him more good than the warm bath. Now, do not forget it the next time you pray: and may God bless all my nieces and nephews!

AUNT LORETTA.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written to your valuable paper before, I will write. I am a little country girl, ten years old. My mamma takes your paper, and I like it very much. I have four sisters and one sweet little brother. I am not going to school now; but our school will begin in September. We have a very nice Sunday-school. I am in the Intermediate Quarterly. We were very sorry to lose our last year's preacher, Bro. Guice; but we have a very pleasant one now—Bro. Simmons. For fear my letter will be too long, I remain,
Your little friend,
BERTHA WILLIAMS.
SILVER CREEK, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen any letters from our little town, I thought that I would try and write one. We have a nice Sunday-school here. Mr. J. L. Scaler is our superintendent. We all like him very much. Our preacher this year is Rev. J. M. Beard. Everyone is very much pleased with him. Well, I will close for fear of the much-dreaded waste-basket. With many good wishes for your excellent paper, I am,
Your little friend,
SAM P. DUBOIS
MANSFIELD, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: We are four little girls. We are visiting at Grandma Wiggins'. Maggie lives here. We have been having such fine fun—swinging, playing croquet, and romping around dear old Woodbine Cottage. There is so much nice fruit, and everybody is so kind to us here; but Uncle Tip declares he is a "C. C. C." Guess what that is. You will not find it in the Bible. Dear Grandma Wiggins has been quite sick this week; she is better now. We are trying to keep the Sabbath, and thought we would write you a letter, for we all love you and read your good paper. Our mammas read it when they were children. Ellie May lives at Winona; Birdie and Mary Wesley live at Millville. We are all Sunday-school scholars. We love our teachers and learn our lessons every Sunday. We read the little folks' letters in the ADVOCATE. Dear little folks, if you want to have fine times, meet your cousins at grandma's. Our Bible question is: What little girl met a good man at the gate and ran with gladness to tell her friends?
Your little friends,
MAGGIE ALLEN,
ELLIE MAY HARTWELL,
BIRDIE PARKER,
MARY WESLEY PARKER.
SUMNER, Mississippi.

The Japanese.

The Japanese are not a large race, the women seldom being over four feet three inches in height. They have a fair complexion, but little darker than that of Europeans. There is one peculiar national garment in Japan, worn both by men and women, and called the kirimon. It is a sort of loose gown, longer and fuller for the women than the men, and kept in place by a sash or girdle about the waist. The sleeves are long and full, and so constructed as to serve the purpose of a pocket. The material is of cotton among the poor, and of silk among the rich. Beneath this garment the young girls wear a similar one of red silk crape, which is laid aside at marriage; and the wealthier classes wear an over-jacket reaching to the knees, and embroidered with the family arms. They wear no under-garment of linen or cotton, and it is rendered somewhat less necessary by the habit of bathing two or three times a day. The Japanese girls seem to consider the sash as a most important article of dress, and it is plain or elegant, according to the means of the family. It is wide enough to serve the purpose of a corset, and long enough to pass around the waist several times, and tie in loops or bows behind. At the death of her husband a woman fastens this sash, or obi, in front instead of behind.

The feet of the wealthy are clad in stockings and elegant lacquered clogs: while the poor wear straw sandals or go barefooted. The stockings are made with a slit between the great toe and the rest of it, to allow for the cord which binds on the sandal. These sandals are only worn in the street, being removed in the house. A fan and an umbrella are considered indispensable parts of a lady's dress.

The hair of a Japanese lady is always black and long, and is dressed by a professional hairdresser, with paste, oil, once in a few days. It is supposed to be a sufficient covering for the head, without either hat or bonnet. They sleep on mats, and have a wooden pillow to put under the neck to prevent the hair from becoming tumbled. Formerly, married women were required to shave their eyebrows and blacken their teeth; but the barbarous custom is fast disappearing before the progress of civilization.—Central Christian Advocate.

Household.

How Is this for Clean?

Hear what a traveler has to say about the cleanliness of the people of Holland:

Dutch cleanliness is famous, and deserves its fame. The Dutch are the only people who live as if cleanliness were not next to, but a part of, godliness. The traveler, on entering his room in an inn, finds the linen snow-white, the window-panes transparent as the air, the furniture shining as if newly varnished, and the floor so clean that a magnifying glass could not discover a speck of dust thereon. There is a basket for waste-paper, a tablet for scratching matches on, a dish for cigar-ashes, a box for cigar-stumps, a spittoon—every man is supposed to smoke—a boot-jack, and everything to remove a pretext for soiling anything.

Even his candlestick is of copper, and of the size of a dinner plate. It might sustain a torch, but holds instead a candle as large as a lady's small finger. No grease should be spilt from that candlestick.

The traveler stands on a bridge, and overlooks the vessels crowded in the canal. Each one is as clean as the room he has just left. The mast and decks are varnished, and shine like a recently scrubbed house floor. The cabin has its windows of clear, clean glass, each one with its white muslin curtains tied up with knots of rose-colored ribbon. Sailors, women and children are busy every spare moment, washing, sweeping, polishing every part.

De Amicis, an Italian, on visiting the kitchen of a house in Delft, could find but one word to express his feelings—"splendid." The walls were as white as untouched snow; the saucepans reflected like mirrors, and the mantel-pieces were ornamented with a muslin curtain, like the canopy of a bed.

The fireplace was covered with china tiles, that looked as if no fire had ever been lighted there. The shovels, tongs and poker, and the chains and hooks seemed made of polished steel.

A lady in a ball-dress might have gone into every hole and corner of that kitchen, and come forth without a smirch upon her whiteness.

Worth Trying.

A writer in the Herald of Health calls attention to the absurdity of using nothing but cambric for the backs of vests, while the fronts are of heavy material, and sometimes wadded, although the lungs are more exposed at the back.

The habit, of course, has grown from a belief that the outer coat is sufficient protection for the back, while the chest needs warmer covering, on account of the coat being open. But it seems a disproval of the reasoning that the first unpleasant sensations of chilliness are the so-called "creepers" running down the spine. Even when the warmest woolen material is selected for a suiting, the tailor, unless otherwise ordered, will invariably make the back of the vest of some thin flimsy material, like cambric or silk, though he may deem it advisable to pad the front with cotton wadding. There is no proper reason why the back of the vest should be made so insufficient. The front may be made uncomfortably thick, and still fail to protect the lungs unless the back is made equally thick and warm. In front they are protected about five times as much as in the back by clothing, ribs, flesh, muscle and fat. In the back the lungs come almost to the surface, and, therefore, need more protection. Many gentlemen who have had their vests made with good, warm backs after a winter's trial are quite enthusiastic over the change. They have passed through the entire winter and spring without once taking cold, which is the best evidence in support of the thick vest-back proposition that could be adduced.

The editor endorses what is said above. His wife induced him to make the trial last winter, and the result was entirely satisfactory.

The statements in this paper week after week about Shallenberger's Antidote for Malaria are not made solely to get your money; we would despise ourselves for doing any such thing. Please don't make that mistake. If you are a sufferer from Malaria, get the remedy at any cost or trouble, and you will know there is one honest proprietary medicine about which the truth only is told.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Reason Why
Ayer's Pills are so popular is, that while always reliable as a cathartic medicine, they never leave effects. This is because they are pure vegetable, and entirely free from calomel or any other dangerous drug. In all cases, therefore, whether the patient be old or young, they may be confidently administered.
In the Southern and Western States where derangements of the liver are general, Ayer's Pills have proved an inestimable blessing. D. W. Bains, New Berne, N. C., writes:
"I suffered a long time with stomach and liver troubles. I tried various remedies, but received no benefit until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. These pills benefited me at once. I took them regularly for a few months, and my health was completely restored."
Throughout New England, next to lung diseases, Stomach and Bowel Complaints are the most prevalent.

Dyspepsia
and Constipation are almost universal. Mr. Gallacher, a practical chemist, of Roxbury, Mass., who was long troubled with Dyspepsia, writes:
"A friend induced me to try Ayer's Pills, and, after taking one box without much benefit, I was disposed to quit them; but he urged perseverance, and before I had finished the second box, began to experience relief. I continued taking them, at intervals, until I had used eleven boxes. Suffice it to say that I am now a well man, and grateful to your chemistry, which outshines mine."
The head and stomach are always in sympathy; hence the cause of most of those distressing headaches, to which so many, especially women, are subject. Mrs. Harriet A. Marble, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., writes that for years she was a martyr to headache, and never found anything to give her more than temporary relief, until she began taking Ayer's Pills, since which she has been in the enjoyment of perfect health.

MURPHY—To the many friends of Mrs. LAURA J. MURPHY the announcement of her death at Birmingham was a most painful surprise. Blessed with a vigorous constitution, she gave promise of years of Christian service; but in the midst of her activities she was called to the inheritance of the saints.

Sister Murphy was the daughter of Col. T. and Mrs. E. T. McKnight, well known to New Orleans Methodism. She was born in 1835, and since 1845 has been a resident of this city. Early in life she consecrated herself to Christ, and for years has been a devoted member of Felicity Street Church. She was a lady of Christian culture, deeply interested in the progress of the church and strong in her personal allegiance to Christ. She was possessed of a most gracious and kindly heart, and won the love and confidence of a large circle. In her home she was the centre of attraction. Energetic, wise, aspiring, she gave the impress of her character to her children who, in the depth of their bereavement, call her blessed. While visiting in Birmingham she was smitten with that insidious disease, typhoid fever, and lingered for weeks, patient and resigned. She was entirely conscious of her condition, and spoke with joyful expectation of the life beyond. She sought to cheer the disconsolate loved ones who faithfully nursed her by saying that she was supremely happy and altogether submissive to the Father's will. She triumphed in Christ, rejoicing that her preparation had long since been made, and that the way was clear before her. "Meet me in heaven; be sure to meet me in heaven," were the loving messages she sent absent members of her family. Let us meet her there. S. H. W.

PORTER—Whereas, Our heavenly Father, in his wise providence, has called our beloved pastor, REV. JAMES PERRY PORTER, to his final reward and eternal rest; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we, the fourth Quarterly Conference of the Washington circuit, commend his bereaved mother, brothers and sisters to that Comforter who binds up the broken-hearted and heals the wounded spirits, we shall revere the memory of this godly man, cherish his self-sacrifice for our church, honor his conscientious walk and Christian life in our midst. His saintly, consistent piety rests upon our homes and lingers in our community as a benediction from "those who die in the Lord," who rest from their labors, whose works do follow them, and whose death is the opening of a wider sphere for their love and devotion to Christ.

Resolved, That, by the grace of God, we will emulate his example of truest loyalty to his Redeemer, of fidelity to his Christian obligations, and, with his singleness of purpose, we will toil and live to finally meet him, with the many friends gone before, in our Father's home. Long shall his stirring calls to duty resound in our ears, and we will heed those solemn warnings, fervent admonitions and spiritual exhortations which were pointed by the Holy Spirit as they fell from his lips.

Resolved, We thank God for having this man of God as our pastor, that we have known and loved him, whose heart was burdened with our families and church, constantly carrying us to the throne of grace, ever toiling and living among us a life which said, "Follow me as I have followed Christ." S. S. KEENER, P. E.

SHIRLEY—IN. N. J. SHIRLEY was born near Macon, Ga., March 9, 1819, and died near Adams Church, Lincoln county, Miss., September 11, 1887. He was married twice. The last wife still lives to mourn his departure. He spent his life as a member of the Methodist Church, and it was his highest joy to see the church prosper, and his Bible shows the marks of frequent use.

It was not my pleasure to know Bro. Shirley but for a short time. He seemed to be a man of deep thought and always easily approached on the subject of religion. He had enemies, but obeyed the injunction, "Overcome evil with good." Never was he known to refuse to do a favor for anyone, even his bitterest enemies. He was ever ready to administer to the suffering and dying. Death came in the form of paralysis and carried him to his eternal home. "God doeth all things well." So we can only pray that the bereaved wife and children may have grace to bear with patience their affliction, waiting the great day of judgment when the true value of all shall be made known. His works will follow him. M. L. BURTON.

COLEMAN—The subject of this notice, THOMAS COLEMAN, was born in Virginia, September 12, 1802, and departed this life September 8, 1887. His father was an old Revolutionary soldier, who served through the whole of that war, and afterward moved to Warren county, Ky., when Thomas was quite young. Bro. Coleman was happily married to Miss Eliza Douglas Cage, of Tennessee, on October 19, 1826; removed to Madison county, Miss., in the year 1831, where he resided until death called him home to be numbered with the glorified saints. He was, for forty years, a worthy member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, whose interest he endeavored to promote with tireless zeal. His daily life, radiant with the beauties of holiness, was a clear, explicit and eloquent testimony to the truth and power of the religion he professed.

He was a Christian man in the best sense. Many ministers, who shared his hospitality in other years, still bear his kindness in grateful remembrance. His surviving relatives, as well as the bereaved family, cherish a cheerful hope of a blissful reunion upon the immortal shore. He came to the close of life with his faith unshaken in his prospects of a glorious immortality.

Death to Bro. Coleman was, without doubt, an infinite gain. Heaven is his home, angels his company, and he now rests, sweetly rests, with the Crucified One, and dwells with saints in glory. We desire to bow submissively to the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort, while we present the offering of praise for his wonderful mercy in the solemn crisis of a painful separation; and look to the glorious day which shall unfold the mysteries of time and display the glories of a happy eternity. We have resigned to the Supreme Lord of life and death, our dear brother, in the hope of seeing him again in the lovelier form of a glorified resemblance to the Son of God. WIEL P. JONES.

What Did It?

It often happens that, when we have been doctoring for a new ailment, to our surprise some old complaint suddenly disappears, and we are at a loss to account for it. We can not say whether it was the medicine we had taken or whether it was the change produced in us by the effort nature made to cast off our disease, and by the aid of some medicine reaching the nerve centres and thus revitalizing the system. The following are two very remarkable cases, that seem almost too wonderful to be true:

The first is from Mrs. Sarah Fisher, of Fishertown, Indian Territory, dated January 21, 1886:

"I have completely recovered from erysipelas and rheumatism by the use of your Compound Oxygen Treatment. I threw away my crutches three months ago—and now can walk as well as anyone. We have a large store here, and do a great deal of business, and some days they get so pushed that I have to go in and help. The people are all surprised to see me looking so well, after being so low and crippled. I tell them Compound Oxygen did it for me."

The following statement is by a mother, who writes from Plainfield, New Jersey, about her child, who has not yet finished her growth:

"We have tried Compound Oxygen with good results, we think, in the case of our daughter. For four years the right limb was shorter than the other, and we had to have her wear a cork shoe. Within two weeks past we have found the limbs at the feet to be of the same length: have bought the ordinary shoes, and she walks as well and even better than during the latter part of her wearing the high shoes. Whether this is a direct result of the Compound Oxygen I can not say; but it certainly looks to be. Her general health is so much improved from the autumn, when she began the Treatment, I desire to continue it, and trust to see even greater results. I request you, therefore, to send at your earliest convenience a second course of your Home Treatment."

If you would like to know more of this wonderful remedial agent, write to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa. A treatise of nearly two hundred pages mailed free to all applicants.

The minister that is constantly on the look-out among current events for the topics of sensational sermons on the Sabbath, and uses his Bible mainly for texts on which to hang these sermons, is almost anything but a preacher of the gospel. He had better read his Bible more and study current events less. He will thereby better edify the church, and be the means of saving more souls.—Independent.

May to Bell.

Dear Bell: I'll write you a short letter
To say I'm wonderfully better;
How much that means you ought to know,
Who saw me just one month ago—
Thin, nervous, fretful, white as chalk,
Almost too weak to breathe or talk;
Head throbbing, as if fit for breaking,
A weary, ever-present aching.
But now life seems a different thing:
I feel as glad as bird on wing!
I say, and fear no contradiction,
That Pierce's Favorite Prescription
Is grand! Why, I'd have died without it!
Ma thinks there's no mistake about it.
It's driven all my ills away!
Just come and see! Yours ever, MAY.

Let not one say that he can not govern his passions, nor hinder them from breaking out and carrying him to action; for what he can do before a prince or a great man he can do alone, or in the presence of God, if he will.—Locke.

Personal.

Dear Bro. MEEK, Ed. "The Central Methodist," Callettsburg, Ky.

I see in the last "Central" that you want a sick headache remedy. I suffered from sick headache, almost from infancy, and tried every remedy I could get, but never found anything to do me good until I used Simmons Liver Regulator. I feel for anyone that suffers with that terrible disease, and I hope you will give it a trial.—C. S. MORRIS, Brownsville, W. Va.

Astronomy and Photography.

Can we wonder if astronomers should already boldly entertain the thought of making a complete survey of the heavens by means of photography? Admiral Mouchez has shown that in the course of ten years fully fifteen million of stars might be made to record their exact position and true relative brightness in a series of large photographic charts! Nothing done by man since astronomy was a science can be compared with such a work as this, which yet might be well accomplished in a decade of years. But even all this, wonderful as it is, seems less impressive than what has been done, and what astronomers are even now planning to do, in applying the photographic eye of science to analyzing the structure of remote suns. Already they have made the waves of light from many of the leading stars record their story on the tiny shore of photographic film, after journeying millions of millions of miles through space. But now a complete survey is to be made in this way: A giant eye is so constructed that not only will it gather, but it will sift the light from multitudes of stars at once, will be directed in succession toward different parts of the heavens. For an hour at each view will this monstrous eye, more wonderful by far than the ichthyosaurian eye with which we began, gaze analyzingly on many hundreds of stars at once, leaving on record at the close of its survey the photographic spectra of all these stars, by which the elements present in them, nay, the very condition in which these elements exist, will be written down in letters and words which (for the astronomer) there is no mistaking. Truly a wonderful era of astronomical research is now beginning. Probably the next half century will reveal more about the millions of millions of tenants of interstellar space than all the years which have elapsed since Hipparchus, noticing a new star, was led to form the first of all known star catalogues.—Cornhill Magazine.

LIFE ON THE MOON.—There is reason for thinking that the moon is not absolutely airless, and, while it has no visible bodies of water, its soil may, after all, not be entirely arid and desiccated. There are observations which hint at visible changes in certain spots that could possibly be caused by vegetation, and there are other observations which suggest the display of electric luminosity in a rarefied atmosphere covering the moon. To declare that no possible form of life can exist under the conditions prevailing upon the lunar surface, would be saying too much, for human intelligence can not set bounds to creative power. Yet, within the limits of life, such as we know them, it is probably safe to assert that the moon is a dead and deserted world. In other words, if a race of beings resembling ourselves, or resembling any of our contemporaries in terrestrial life, ever existed upon the moon, they must long since have perished. That such beings may have existed is possible, particularly if it is true, as generally believed, that the moon once had a comparatively dense atmosphere and water upon its surface, which have now, in the process of cooling of the lunar globe, been withdrawn into its interior. It certainly does not detract from the interest with which we study the rugged and beautiful scenery of the moon to reflect that if we could visit those ancient sea-bottoms, or explore those glittering mountains, we might, perchance, find there some remains or mementoes of a race that flourished, and perhaps was all gathered again to its fathers, before man appeared upon the earth.—Popular Science Monthly.

Happiness.

The foundation of all happiness is health. A man with an imperfect digestion may be a millionaire, may be the husband of an angel and the father of half a dozen cherubs, and yet be miserable if he be troubled with dyspepsia, or any of the disorders arising from imperfect digestion or a sluggish liver. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are the safest and surest remedy for these morbid conditions. Being purely vegetable, they are perfectly harmless.

The tongue shows to a physician the disease of the body; to a philosopher, the disease of the mind; to a Christian, the disease of the soul.

LADIES' who experience a sense of weakness and sometimes lameness of the back, should use Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier. It will supply the much-needed strength and overcome all weakening irregularities.

PRE-EMINENCE OF MORAL BEAUTY.—It was a most fitting prayer of David, "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us." True piety is the most beautiful thing in the world. It constitutes what another inspired writer denominates, "the beauties of holiness." Piety of heart and life—spiritual mindedness, humility, benevolence and love, will give beauty wherever they are developed, such as no human artist's hands can impart to material forms in connection with the most attractive places of worship, or in any other relationship. All who are thus adorned are therein representatives of God and Christ and heaven, and all that is godly and heavenly. This adornment has always commanded admiration, even from those destitute of such excellence. Thus ungodly Balaam was constrained to say, concerning God's ancient tabernacle worshipers, "How goodly are thy tents, O Jacob! and thy tabernacles, O Israel! As the valleys are they spread forth, as gardens by the river's side, as the trees of lign-aloes which the Lord hath planted, and as cedar trees beside the waters." "Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee." "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."—Watchman.

Mason & Hamlin Pianos.

Mason & Hamlin bid fair to become as famous for their upright pianos as they have long been for their world-renowned cabinet organs. The distinguishing feature about the Mason & Hamlin Upright is an important improvement in the method of holding the strings of the piano, which originated in their own factory. The strings are secured by metallic fastenings, instead of by the friction of pins set in wood, as has been the case, and the advantages resulting are numerous and highly important. Among them are the following: Wonderful beauty and musical quality of tone; far less liability of getting out of tune; greater reliability in trying climates; and greater solidity of construction and durability.

It is stated that the two hundredth edition of "Helen's Babies" is going through the press.

Another Extraordinary Offer.

After this date we will include in our club arrangement the New York Weekly World, the price of which, including all postage, will be three dollars. This amount will entitle the subscriber to one copy of the "World's History of the United States," post paid.

This history is on a new plan. It is the record of the events of our history in the order in which they happened. There are no moralizings, no opinions put forth, no criticisms offered in regard to anything. It is not a political record merely, but one of all sorts of facts that have contributed to make our history. Discoveries, inventions, financial and literary matters, are all noted. One merit of the work is, that it can not grow old. The date of an event, when once ascertained, is fixed for all time. The book has twenty-four very good illustrations. We regard it as a valuable book for every student.

Old and new subscribers are entitled to the premium. Subscribers who have already paid will receive the History and the Weekly World one year by sending one dollar. Cash to accompany all orders.

"COME."

"Come unto me when shadows darkly gather.
When the sad heart is weary and distressed,
Seeking for comfort of your heavenly Father;
Come unto me, and I will give you rest.

"Large are the mansions in thy Father's dwelling;
Glad are the homes that sorrows never blight;
Sweet are the harps in holy music swelling;
Safe are the fields that raise the heavenly hymn.

"There, like an Eden, blossoming in gladness,
Bloom the fair flowers the earth too rudely pressed.
Come unto me, all ye that droop in sadness;
Come unto me, and I will give you rest."

"Old Maids."

BY JOS. B. CUMMELL, D. D.

The communication of Mrs. Sadler, in the ADVOCATE, of a recent date, apologetic of those who are denominated "old maids," was with such judgment and taste as encourage the friends of that section or circle of the human family which has, in the past, been egregiously wronged. Mrs. Sadler speaks, incidentally, of scars yet remaining on her which witness to the severity of a teacher to whose cruelty she was subject in girlhood. A lady friend, writing from Alabama, some months ago, gave me an account of an experience she had when a little girl. She went to the spring, and a green snake slid across the path. She was frightened, and her loud scream brought the teacher in such haste as to cause him to appear less dignified than was his usual wont. The snake had disappeared, and the teacher was angered. He told the child that if she did not find the snake, he would whip her. "Imagine a little frightened, trembling child, searching about in the grass and weeds for the snake, apprehensive that she might tread on it—a little girl full of alarm between two monsters—the snake and the teacher!" Fortunately she found the snake, and was saved the humiliation and suffering that was threatened her. Comment is unnecessary. This was a typical case. The cruelties enacted by the teachers of the olden time sound now incredible—such has been the change touching the policies of governing, domestic, pedagogic and other. I am not thankful for a lick I ever received, and I regret ever inflicting one on a child, or student, or servant.

Mrs. Sadler's tribute to the Cary sisters is most tasteful and elegant. The savagery of our civilization is yielding gradually, and woman is coming to her proper place, in co-ordination with man, in all the industries, inquiries and ministrations. The reconditioning of government and society which will be consequent upon the culmination of this evolution ("evolution" is a better word here than "revolution") will cancel huge abuses, break up tyrannies, and abolish barbarities. The benefits to accrue will be reciprocal—men taking a softer mold, and women girded up to a more vigorous, executive, and aggressive agency.

I see that Dr. Deems is in favor of women being put on the same footing with men in the curriculum of college and university. The co-education of the sexes has vindicated itself as the best policy wherever tried. Paul didn't prohibit women prophesying, but wished them to do it modestly. As long hair is an adornment to woman, Paul, having good taste, desired to see her at her loveliest. Hence his advice in regard of the proprieties.

I remember some editorials of Dr. Thomas Bond, shortly before he died, in the Baltimore Episcopal Methodist, wherein he discovered a depth of sentiment and richness of soul in speaking of old maid acquaintances of his. I regret that I was not in the habit of clipping out and saving in a scrap book such articles then, as I now do. Yes, society is enriched greatly by such women as are not merely a mush of acquiescence; those who are poised and self-possessed, and who elect according to a wise discretion—cultivating such refrain as brings genuine dignity and grace, and seemies self-respect. Such as have, perforce of character, kept out of the trammels of mere consortment, which would not have been marriage in the highest sense of the term, have conserved society equally with those who have been wives and mothers in the very best sense.

Household Christianity.

BY REV. R. ABBEY.

Household religion is more spoken of and less understood than almost any other phase or feature of the entire Christian system. If one will look at the subject patiently, especially down among the lower strata, he will be surprised that so little attention is paid to the subject, either in the books or in the pulpit. It is exceedingly easy to give lessons in Christianity, and on the behavior of boys and girls, and to exhort them to seek God, to trust in the atonement of Jesus Christ, and join the church. It is an easy thing to recommend family prayers, to encourage Sunday-schools, to supply good juvenile reading, and encourage the reading of it. All this is very well; but it scarcely touches the subject on which I propose to offer a few observations. Indeed, it does not touch it at all.

The great remedial necessity for family religion, as well as all social and personal Christianity, lies away back of this. The lessons which we usually administer in the pulpit and in all pastoral Christianity, serve, as far as they go, to correct omissions and blunders committed before direct religious teaching is practical. There is a planting as well as a cultivation of practical religion. To cultivate without planting is as bad economy in propagating religion as in any of the other natural economies of life.

Most of the arts, sciences, mechanics and other industries of life can be, and oftentimes are, prosecuted without a timely and proper planting; but this is always done at ten or a hundred to one disadvantage. Just so of religion. It can be and is propagated without a first planting; but it is done at a disadvantage of a hundred to one. This is before our eyes every day; but the fool's law that we must do today exactly as we did yesterday in all things, reason or no reason, is also before our eyes. And so we keep on cultivating without planting. And so our labor yields one-tenth or one-hundredth the increase it would if it had first been tolerably well planted.

There are two ways to propagate corn: first, never mind the planting. Let the planting season pass. Then when the cultivating season comes on and necessity presses, a few stunted stalks can be picked up here and there, and corn can be made. The other way is to plant first. This illustration of our common mode of propagating Christianity is not a caricature; it is not even an exaggeration.

Christian planting, like any other kind of planting, must be done as a specialty, long before the most incipient cultivation is practicable. It is a very different thing from cultivation, and necessarily precedes it, not only in the order of sequence, but also in the order of time. To work advantageously, the planting must be finished before the first lesson in cultivation can begin.

Let the enquiry be made right here. What is the one, sole, vital principle of religion? What is Christianity in its one great, constitutional essence and being? Some would answer: It is to believe in God and in Jesus Christ, to trust and love God, to pray and worship God, to keep his commandments, to love the brethren and help to build up the church. No, it is not all nor any of these things. These are duties and privileges based upon and growing out of the fundamental principle.

The fundamental principle underlying and going before all Christian duties and all belief, is obedience.

Obedience does not imply belief in anything. It does not imply the performance of any duty. It does not imply religion. It is not necessarily praiseworthy or deserving of reward. It is mere unresisting docility. A dog may be as obedient as a human person. And yet this simple obedience is the one, sole, single pedestal or pillar on which alone all Bible religion rests.

An author of great repute has said: "The humble docility of little children is in the New Testament represented as a necessary preparative for the reception of the Christian faith." (Dr. Beattie.)

Wiser words, outside of inspiration, have not been spoken. Notice: "A necessary preparative for the reception of religion." There must be a preparative first of all. Planting first. It is no part of religion, and yet its continued practice is all of religion.

The people to whom we preach—we might about as well say, all—have long since passed by the docile season, or planting period, where no planting was done, and now all we can do is to try to straighten up and resuscitate as many wilted, sickly and unpromising plants as we can reach from the pulpit.

Look at results. Our church is foremost, and the sun has not looked down on a more efficient ministry than ours is to-day. We preach 15,000 sermons every week. Ten converts to a sermon would give only about 800,000 converts a year, and we fall short of that. The minutes are at my elbow; but I am ashamed to copy the figures here. The reason of our lack of success is apparent. Instead of planting in planting season, we suffer that vital period—the only period when planting can be done—to pass by unused; and then the dernier resort—the only thing now that can be done, is to hunt around and gather up a few unpromising plants and transplant them into an adult nursery, where maybe one-half of them will live and become mature Christians. We become accustomed to anything. A pastor writes that he is doing very well on his work. He has preached and held prayer meetings 150 times during the year; had a "revival" in August; thirteen were converted, and seven joined the church. Mercy! mercy! what a waste of power! A farmer with forty acres worked 160 days, and produced a peck of corn. Getting along very well! Is there no remedy for all this? May something be suggested next week?

Letter from North Georgia.

MR. EDITOR: Although I am in a Southern State, the great State of Georgia, I sometimes find myself thinking and speaking of Louisiana as the bright Sunny South, with its mild winters and beautiful flowers. While I am not in the North, yet when I first came into this mountainous region, the cold winds, the ice and snow, and the weird, ghostly appearance of the forests, made that impression on my mind. While the sky may be just as bright as with you, much of it is shut out by the hills and mountains surrounding us. We have no broad prairies as in the southwestern part of your State; no Teche coursing its way through a country beautified both by nature and art, reminding us of the elysian fields in the fables of mythology; no Father of Waters, whose coast is the attraction and delight of all tourists.

North Georgia is regarded, by most persons, as very favorable to good health and long life. I have a member who connects the past century with the present year, and many others who were born in the early part of the present century. They have lived through all the wars since the Revolution, and nearly through the whole period of our national existence. They have been witnesses of all the great political, religious, and educational movements of our country; and to-day many of them are strong and active, and are seemingly taking a new lease on life, especially in the interest of the church, and its grand and enlightening enterprises. While the longevity of many is remarkable, yet the deaths, in proportion to population, are numerous.

Our District Conference held its session at Dalton, in the last days of July. There were more than sixty members present. In numbers it looked like some Annual Conferences I have attended. Rev. W. F. Quillian, P. E., was in the chair, and is an excellent presiding officer. Printed blanks, with searching questions upon all subjects on which the pastors had to report, were furnished them before that body convened. It gave your correspondent more trouble to obtain the facts than it would to collect the statistics for an Annual Conference. All additional facts needed were drawn out by various questions. This district has 6,600 members, nearly half the membership of the Louisiana Conference. Dr. Hopkins, president of Emory College, was present, and made missionary addresses and preached edifying sermons, to the great delight of all present. The Woman's Missionary Society, for the district, held its anniversary on Saturday night. Among those societies which made reports were several which had been formed among the children. The mission work is thus being planted in the hearts of the young, which promises great results in the future. The Conference was one of pleasure and profit.

The revivals and camp meetings are about ended. Whilst many have been converted, yet very few places have been visited with great displays of divine power. Murray county has been the scene of great revivals for the last two months and a half. On the Spring Place circuit 400 persons have been converted; and, strange to say, only 130 have united with our church. Thus it will be seen, that whilst we are able to maintain our own ground and add to our own strength, we greatly add to the numbers of other churches. Could we gather all the fruits of our labor, we should number thousands in our fold who are not there. The efficiency of our ministry and means seem better adapted to this end than any others which have been tried. I attended the Spring Place Camp Meeting. There were seven tents and ten tenters. Instead of the old tabernacle, which was broken down by the snow last winter, an elegant and commodious one has been erected on a firmer foundation than the old one. The shedding around it was put up in sections, being suspended on hinges where it connects with the main building, so that it can be let down, thereby inclosing the whole tabernacle as a church. The congregations were large, and twenty or twenty-five persons were converted. The shouting at times seemed to be the ebullition of an uncontrollable power within. Having preached so long in that portion of your State where shouting is almost unknown, it seemed a little strange when I heard the people of God glorifying his name, as upon the day of Pentecost. But shouting is not religion. The presiding elder announced on Sunday that at eleven o'clock, on Tuesday, he would hold services for the old people, and invited all in the surrounding country to be present. A goodly number were there, and it was a precious season. I can recommend such a meeting to other districts and charges.

While I write of Spring Place circuit, and the camp meeting, I must write of my own labors. From the close of the District Conference until the third Sunday in September, I have protracted almost continuously, sometimes with help and sometimes without it. Whilst we had a few conversions, and some additions to the church, the results were not what we anticipated. There were many hindrances to contend with in the church and in sinners. These never gave way entirely; but for the measure of success which attended his servants' labors, we should glorify God's name.

On September 26 we had a vote on prohibition, resulting in 377 majority for it. Bribery, whisky and electioneering failed to the great joy of all right-minded, moral, and order-loving people. The vote for it is larger than it was two years ago. Local option prevails in all the counties in the State except fifteen, and, as to whether it will succeed in these, is only a question of time. By a State vote we could rout it from every county, and I am at a loss to know why it is not put before us in the form of an amendment to the Constitution. Whilst there are stupendous evils to be found everywhere, whisky making, selling, and drinking, may be placed among them as the greatest.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: I rejoice to see that so many are determined to help us by sending another missionary to Japan. We are anxiously looking for that help which we know will come. I trust all money collected for that purpose will be placed in the hands of the Board, and let them send us the man approved by them. This country is opening up in a wonderful manner, and the people are everywhere asking for teachers in the English language, and multitudes are asking to be taught the Bible. Surely the hand of the Lord is in this movement, and his blessed Spirit is turning the hearts of many to seek after the salvation of their souls. I am holding a place in the great city of Osaka, where I have already a Bible class; and last Sabbath week I was invited by one of the teachers in the school to go to his native village, five miles distant, to preach the gospel to some who had asked to hear it. I went with him, and was most kindly received by his father, mother, brothers and sisters, and entertained in their house in a most kind and hospitable manner. I was asked to remain there until the place was prepared. In a short time he returned, and said, "The church is now ready." I said to him, "Have you a church here?" He replied: "It is one we have prepared for you." When I reached the place I found they had opened up their school-room, prepared seats, and about fifty persons had assembled to hear preaching. A stand with flowers tastefully arranged upon it had been prepared, and a plate of small cakes also. These kind people listened to me for more than an hour, as I told them of the love of God, and of the great love and sacrifice of our blessed Savior. They asked me to return the next Sabbath; but I promised to go again in two weeks, and tell them once more of that Savior who died for them. The father of the young man said, "You must go and take dinner with me before leaving;" and they were as kind as they could be. I was told by them that I was the first missionary, native or foreign, who had ever visited their town, and I could scarcely believe it. It is a place of some fifteen thousand inhabitants, and only five miles from the centre of the great city of Osaka.

I feel sure the Lord is directing us in this work, and is opening up the way for us in a wonderful manner.

Mrs. L., Dr. and Mrs. Park go with me on next Sabbath to visit them, and we pray that the Lord may begin and carry on a gracious work in the hearts of these kind and hospitable people.

Your brother in Christ,

Winter is the special season for the mind's harvest. We should lay up during its long, dull evenings stores of intellectual wealth that will be a life-long source of happiness and usefulness, for all lives, even those of the most worthy, must have their season of gloom and adversity. We need fear no mental famine if the wasted hours of this season have been busy in garnering such stores of wealth as even the poorest and most infirm can claim if proper efforts are made for their possession.

(Presbyterian.)

We ought never to be afraid of God's providences when they seem to break up our lives and crush our hopes, and even to turn us away from our chosen paths of usefulness and service. God knows what he wants to do with us, how he can best use us, and where and in what lines of ministry he would have us serve. When he shuts one door it is because he has another standing open for our feet. When he breaks our lives to pieces it is because they will do more for his glory and the world's good broken and shattered than whole.

(Quiver.)

There is Scripture warrant for systematic charity. "Upon the first day of the week," says the apostle, "let everyone of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." It has been truly said that sometimes impulse is mere luxury; an eloquent sermon may elicit a generous contribution, but systematic charity, founded upon principle, may be of higher cost and richer worth. The habit of regular giving reminds us constantly of our indebtedness to God, and promotes self-denial and thrift; what we can not afford we learn to sacrifice, in order that we may have something to render to the Lord. "The tenth is not enough," says many a heart in secret, laying by thank-offerings, first fruits, and many a coin unseen save but by One. Let us not forsake a careful, cheerful system of charity, but never let it become mere routine work, for there must be times and seasons with every Christian when we cry, "It is not enough."

(Advance.)

Suppose it were possible to unroof all the homes of intemperance in the land, and make us look down into the appalling and never-half-told sorrows and shames, blight and woe within; to watch husbands as they reel from saloons and stagger back to their homes; to see the infinite agony in the mother's heart as her son is borne in from the haunts of inebriation and infamy. Suppose it were possible to uncover the saloons of the country, the gilded and the nasty alike, and for one horrid moment, make us all look in at all the devilish work of temptation, and education in ondrift and sin and vice and crime, there going on, continuously, day and night, and seven days in the week, the year round, as an organized and legally-protected business. What heart among us is there which could endure the sight? The fact is, it will not be a long time before there will be no possible watchword with a more rallying power in it for good citizens, in all parts of our country, than this of home protection.

(Standard.)

The church exists in the city for the sake of the city. It would go ill with these great metropolitan centres did not the Lord himself plant there great, flaming beacon lights to match the spiritual darkness about. Every city has its religious quota. If it be big for wickedness, it may be great for righteousness, also. The forces of evil are seen first, and the first reflection of the new-comer is upon the iniquity of the place. Presently he comes to learn that God has a loyal people there also, and that the city is not more conspicuous for its frivolity and its service of Satan than for its piety and its Christian devotedness and efficiency. Every city has its valiant soldiers of the cross. Not one is there, we dare say, that has not seen born and developed amid its turmoil and confusion some notable champion of the truth: a Wanamaker, a Nelson, a Bishop, a Moody. It is this stalwart and aggressive maintenance of the Christian life and service that holds in check the multiplied agencies of evil to which the thronged streets and alley-ways fall heir. It is God's providence. It is the watchful care of him who had compassion on the multitude and wept over the city.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND MORE.

BY KAPPA.

A cry has burst upon us, it strikes upon the ear
The cry of untold millions who dwell in darkness drear:
"Send us the gospel message, O send it at any cost,
Tell us of Christ, the Savior, or souls we are lost."
The men to preach are ready and waiting to be sent,
To bear the new glad tidings and teach them to repent:
But hear the answer coming, it meets us sad and sore,
We need of extra dollars two hundred thousand more.

Such is the scene before us, and we must not forget
A crisis is upon us. How can this claim be met?
This cry is ever ringing in accents clear and bold,
And witnesses abounding surround us like a cloud.
We must in solemn fervor first seek our Father's face,
And cry with earnest pleading before his throne of grace.
That we may wake to duty as wakened ne'er before,
And find those extra dollars, two hundred thousand more.

We hear the call from Burmah, the land that leads the van,
Where Judson, Wade and Boardman this glorious work began:
The Telugus are calling from shores of Hindostan,
And the vastly teeming millions of China and Japan;
The valley of the Congo has taken up the cry:
"Come tell us of the Savior, O tell us or we die."
These cries together blending now ring from shore to shore,
And bid us send those dollars, two hundred thousand more.

The call is waxing louder and rolls from sea to sea:
Ye Christian men and women, what shall the answer be?
From climes of the Atlantic this call is rising high,
And shores of the Pacific shall echo the reply:
Along lake shores it rumbles and o'er the prairies vast,
It speals among the mountains are like a trumpet's blast:
And from the throne in heaven 'tis sounding evermore,
Come send those extra dollars, two hundred thousand more.

THREE MIRACLES.

Matthew ix, 18-31.

GOLDEN TEXT: "According to your faith, be it unto you."—Matthew ix, 29.

INTRODUCTORY.

All the narrative of the life of Jesus about this period is full of deeds of mercy and teachings of the truth. The sight of distressed or erring humanity ever called forth from him efforts to relieve and enlighten. Seeing Matthew, as he sat at the receipt of custom, a promising laborer for his vineyard, he called him, and Matthew, responding, immediately entered upon his work. As a farewell, perhaps, to his former mode of life, and to his associates, Matthew made the Master a feast, to which were invited many publicans and sinners. The Pharisees, whose creed of caste claimed that it was contaminating to consort with such classes, asked of the disciples an explanation. The reply of Jesus exposed the folly of their question, and it also must have turned their thoughts within. They were made to see that it was to those very classes, which they thought beneath their association, that his mission was directed, and that they, themselves, had poor claim to be called the righteous. By the pertinent lessons of the fitness of things, as taught by the parable of the new wine in the new leathern bottles, and the new cloth in the new garment, Jesus explained why it was more becoming in the Pharisees and the disciples of John to fast, than for his own followers. From the feast in Matthew's house he was called to attend the dying or dead daughter of the ruler, and on his way he healed the diseased woman, and soon after restored the eyes of the blind men.

FAITH'S TOUCH HEALS DISEASE.

Verse 18. "While he spake these things." In the midst of his teachings, and perhaps interrupting them, urged by the excess of his grief, "there came a certain ruler, and worshiped him." Mark and Luke tell the name of the ruler—Jairus. Possibly this was one of the elders who came to spy out the conduct of Jesus, and, witnessing the cure of the centurion's servant, became convinced that Jesus had the power of healing. Mark and Luke say that he fell down at Jesus' feet. He prostrated himself in the humblest act of worship. "My daughter is even now dead: but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live." Mark says, "My little daughter," showing tender attachment; and Luke says, "One only daughter, about twelve years of age." His solicitude was all the greater because she was his only one. His faith had grown wonderfully, considering that it was only a short time since he had gone forth to expose the imposture of the Savior. But it is frequently thus that extremes follow each other; that great unbelief, when made to give way, is followed by strong faith.

19. "Jesus arose, and followed him." Never was an earnest application made to Jesus which was disregarded. "Whosoever cometh unto me, I will by no means cast out." "And so did his disciples." Mark and Luke add, "Much people followed him," and "thronged him." Very different motives animated them. Some by curiosity, some, maybe, by the desire to see his power to heal, brought in contact with a case too difficult, and some probably through sympathy with the ruler and interest in the Savior's mission.

20. "And behold, a woman which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years." Mark adds that "she had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse." Her case was a desperate one. Failing in her expectation of relief from all other sources, she now applies to the Great Physician. "Came behind him, and touched the hem of his garment." In her condition, according to the Levitical law, it was unlawful for her to come in contact with anyone; but her condition of extreme suffering knew no law, and her faith in Jesus assured her that all would be well. The hem of his garment, or "fringes in the borders of their garments," was necessary by the law of Moses as the sign that the person wearing it was holy unto the Lord.

21. "For she said within herself." She entertained the thought. "If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole." The delicacy and modesty of the woman are to be noticed as well as her faith. Both are but other forms of humility, and humility is a necessary precursor of faith.

22. "But Jesus turned him about, and when he saw her, he said, Daughter, be of good comfort: thy faith hath made thee whole." Mark and Luke say that when Jesus perceived that virtue, or healing power, had gone out of him, turned about and said, "Who touched me?" Peter seems to convey somewhat of a rebuke in his answer: "Master, the multitude throng thee, and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me?" He intimated that thousands may have touched him, and that it was unreasonable for him to ask, "Who touched me?" But Jesus had reference to only one touch—the touch of faith. So it is that thousands may come to the Savior with careless, formal offerings, and never arrest his attention. It is only the touch of faith which impresses him and secures saving power.

THE DEAD DAUGHTER.

Verse 23. "When Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw the minstrels and the people making a noise." After healing the woman, Jesus pursued his way to the ruler's house, to which he had started. As he entered, everything told of death. The minstrels, or hired mourners, were making loud lamentations.

24. "He said unto them, Give place: for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn." You minstrels and lamenters of the dead, get out of the way; your offices are premature! Jesus meant that he would soon awake the maid to life. She was surely dead, but he calls death a sleep in many places. He said that Lazarus slept. He also said in the same connection: "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth, and believeth in me, shall never die."

25. "But when the people were put forth." Two reasons, doubtless, caused this: first, they had proved themselves unworthy of witnessing so gracious a display of power: and, second, because Jesus ever sought to avoid publicity. Luke adds: "He suffered no man to go in, save Peter, James, and John, and the father and mother." An appreciative company is needful for successful Christian work. It is said of Nazareth, the sometime home of Jesus: "He did not many mighty works there, because of their unbelief." "Took her by the hand, and the maid arose." The other evangelists add that he addressed the maiden, bidding her rise. It is immaterial whether he used a word or an act. It was the divine power, irrespective of word or act, which restored the life.

27. "When Jesus departed thence"—out of the house of Jairus—"two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us." This appellation acknowledged the divinity of Christ: the Messiah was expected to be of the lineage of David. The blind asked for mercy, not restoration of sight, because the one included the other. They thought that sin had much to do with their blindness, and that if Christ showed mercy, the cure of their eyes would necessarily follow.

28. "When he was come into the house." Probably Peter's house at Capernaum, where he was in the habit of staying. Jesus preferred to have them in the house—that is, in private, for the same reasons given in the restoration of the maiden—that is, to avoid publicity and to escape the eyes of the irreverent throng. "Believe ye that I am able to do this?" Christ, of course, knew what was in them; but he asked this question to elicit their faith and to impress them with their part in their healing. "They said unto him, Yea, Lord." Their confession of faith brought forth the healing power.

29. "According to your faith, be it unto you." How this assertion places the restoration of the men in their own keeping! Omnipotence is in Christ; but unbelief fails to bring it forth. No wonder that the father of the child possessed of a devil, when he realized that his own faith was the hope of the cure, should have cried out, with tears: "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief!"

30. "Their eyes were opened." Their faith was not at fault. It laid hold upon the power of Christ, and brought relief to them. "See that no man know it." The Jews were disposed to heap earthly honors upon him, which he sought to prevent, because it would have impeded his ministry and hindered their own spiritual faith.

31. "They spread abroad his praise in all that country." It is impossible to prevent the news of a good deed from spreading. Though the blind men disobeyed the Master, yet the story of their healing brought others to the Great Physician.

TEACHINGS OF THE LESSON.

1. The ear of Jesus is ever open to the cry of the needy.

2. Jesus can cure the maladies of the body, and heal the sin-sick soul.

3. The treasures of Omnipotence can be opened only by the touch of faith.

Local Preachers' Conference.

Local Preachers' Conference of Mississippi met in Hazlehurst, September 23, 1887.

The president being absent, Rev. E. F. Mullins was called to the chair. A quorum being present, the Conference proceeded to business. On account of so few being present, it was resolved not to go into election of officers, but the present officers to hold over to the next meeting. At our last meeting a Committee of Three was appointed to prepare an address to the Conference.—Bro. A. B. Nicholson, one of that committee, proceeded to read an address which was calculated to awaken thoughts of vital interest to the church, and which was warmly received by the Conference; and, on motion, was ordered that it be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and that he be requested to be with us at our next meeting and again furnish an address to the Conference. Ordered that Bro. E. G. Cook also be requested to furnish an address at our next meeting. Ordered that our next meeting be held at Wesson, at such time as ordered by the president.

E. F. MULLINS, Sec.

ADDRESS BY REV. A. B. NICHOLSON.

DEAR BRETHREN: The time was, in the history of the Methodist Church, when the local ministry was its strong arm. The talent of the ministry principally lay in the local ranks, for by the time a preacher became eminent he either married and located (for marrying was equivalent to a location), from the fact that no man could support a family on sixty dollars a year or get his consent to give up a married life; therefore, most of the pastors were young and inexperienced. The local preachers were their instructors in theology and other duties as pastors. I once traveled a circuit in which our local preacher boarded myself and wife, and others, paid the larger part of what I received on the work, besides giving me free access to their libraries, and assisting in building up the work. They were the bulwark of the early Methodist Church, preaching the gospel where Christ was not named, laboring with all their talent and piety without any compensation from the church—the only class of men who work for nothing and find themselves. And in this, my brethren, I believe is one cause of the decline in the local ministry, for the law of reward for service rendered was violated, they being under no obligation to work for nothing. This we believe is one cause which has kept the salary of the Methodist ministry down to a minimum and contempt in the eyes of the intelligent world. But there is a marked change. As the wild buffalo of the West, being free and accessible to all, is preyed upon until it will soon be a thing of the past, so with the local ministry, being free, it has lost its prestige; and to-day the itinerant is the only recognized ministry, and he must be a pastor with a salary at the same time. The local preacher may be far his superior. We all see and know this to be true; therefore, we are assembled here to-day in Conference to counsel together and see if the old efficiency can be restored; or is it the will of God that it has met its divine purpose in the church and shall pass away? If so, no action of ours will bring it back. While we may mourn that we will see this Heaven-blessed institution no more in the church, we have much to praise God for that we ever had this element in our church. I believe it is passing away; its sun is going down. My reasons for saying so is, Will God call a man to preach, and no place for him to preach?

A local preacher, educated, refined, brought up under the most favorable conditions of life, a splendid theologian, good preacher, above reproach, said to me: "I am happy at the expectation of getting to heaven, and yet unhappy because I believe I am called to preach. I want to preach. Perhaps I ought to have been an itinerant, but that day is passed with me now. I once had wealth. The preachers and my friends thought I could do more good in the local ranks. I preached where Christ was not named, among a people where the itinerant could not go, as I was self-sustaining. But my circumstances have changed. I am no longer able to bear the expense necessary to carry me into the highways and hedges to preach the gospel of Christ. There is no place for me at home now—that is occupied by the pastor. Can't even hold a prayer meeting, or seldom called upon to pray in the public congregation; yet I want to preach. What shall I do?" If this be so, what can be done to restore its former prestige?

Now, I am told that in England the local preachers are a strong power in the Methodist Church; but while the itinerant has the oversight of the work in country or town, and attends to all official duties, makes reports to his Conference, the local preachers do much of the preaching, visit the sick, look after the poor, hold prayer and class meetings. I know from experience that a preacher will grow cold and indifferent when cut off from public exercise in the church: and that likely has caused much indifference on the part of our local preachers, and possibly caused some to backslide.

From the Work.

DOWNSVILLE CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: As you have visited and labored with the people of Downsville circuit, I will tell you something about the work. Bro. Galloway has labored faithfully for the cause of Christ—in fact, he has labored too hard for his physical strength; but God has blessed his labors. He has been holding revival meetings, and great good has been accomplished. The church has been greatly revived. At one church they have a good Sabbath-school, young men's prayer meeting, a ladies' itinerant, and a general prayer meeting; also a number of family altars erected. I do not know the exact number of accessions to the church; but a good number. The Savior said, "Feed my lambs." They have not been neglected.

J. T. REYNOLDS.

LAKE CHARLES, LA.

MR. EDITOR: As a matter of encouragement to others, and of information to your readers, accept this word from Lake Charles, specially as you have had no word from us in any shape this year.

The charge has moved on steadily and well all the year. There has been no revival overflow, but a steady growth. It is near half a hundred stronger than in the beginning. Health remarkably good. Not in twenty-five years have I had so little sickness or so few funerals in a work. The Sunday-school is doing a grand work. For the size of the charge, and in its spirit, it is the largest and the best Sunday-school I ever had. It is missionary in training and in spirit. The prayer meetings are well attended and deeply spiritual.

From this alone you can judge of the congregation. We have some "that are dead." Not to have, would be an exception. The house has been too small all the while. Frequently, specially at night, there is no room for the people.

Exclusive of ministerial support, we have raised over $350. Of this, $65 paid by the Sunday-school for missions and Children's Day. Altogether, for missions, in cash and subscriptions, by church and Sunday-school, a little over $150. This will doubtless be increased by Conference to $170. This seems a small amount. And yet, compared with other years, and to those who know how little financial strength we have, it is well: and we are willing to stand with the best. It is the first year in our history when the church undertook to pay an adequate salary. It is being paid this year. Parsonage improvement is going on. Another room will be added, and other needed work done.

The pastor, in connection with his son, is at the head of The Lake Charles Training-School. They are just now closing the first month with 100 interesting pupils; some from a distance, adjoining parishes and Texas. Next month will add some twenty-five pupils. They have purchased a block of near five acres in the center of the town, and built a large house of three rooms, affording room for 175 or 200 pupils. The grounds are being improved, and will be adorned with shade trees, ornamental shrubs and flowers, and is destined to be the "beauty spot" of the "City of the Lake."

Lake Charles is growing at a wonderful rate. In the last year, the average has been a completed house for each day. And there are now fifty or one hundred houses in process of erection; some of them elegant homes. The recently projected railroad from Kansas City to Lake Charles, backed by English gold and American pluck, will add wonderfully to our property. Real estate has advanced in the last few months one, two and three hundred per cent.

Those who know this "preacher in charge," and who know anything of the fishing in this region, can imagine how much he enjoys his privileges in this line. The parsonage can be readily supplied with fish for the day, and yet have the fisherman back home to a 7:30 breakfast. And all may know how content the preacher is in his field.

Respectfully,

JOEL T. DAVES.

BUENA VISTA, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We closed on last night a successful meeting in this place. We had thirty-five professions and twelve accessions to the Methodist Church, and several to the other churches. There will be other accessions. The revival took hold of the students of the Buena Vista Normal College, and many professed faith in Christ and joined their fellow-students who were religious in working for Christ. Altogether there have been 103 professions within the circuit this year. We have received forty-one on profession of faith. Our church ceiled and recovered, and a new church contracted for to be finished by the first of January. The parsonage furnished during the year. The collections ordered by the Annual Conference secured in full. With a faithful effort upon the part of the stewards, Buena Vista circuit will send up to Conference an encouraging report. We return thanks to Revs. Eugene Johnson, John Ritchie and G. W. Bachman, for help rendered in the meeting mentioned above.

To God be all the glory!

HESLEP R. TUCKER.

CORNERSVILLE, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: While others are furnishing your readers with some of the good things the Lord has been doing for them, I will give a short note from Cornersville. We have had a good time this year. We have had about thirty conversions; about twenty have joined the church; four Sunday-schools, five regular prayer meetings, one class meeting. The Holly Springs District Conference, at Cornersville, was a great blessing to us. The labors of Evangelist Collins and wife were a great blessing. The fruits of their labors can be gathered many days hence. His zeal for God, and the earnest effort to persuade the people to higher living, make the greatest good done in the church. Many conversions crown their work; but the success of his meetings can not be seen in the number of conversions. He leaves the church new converts and old alive for God, anxious to work in his vineyard. It has been demonstrated in this district that his converts stick. The reason is, he leaves them with a working church.

We need the light of religious literature here, perhaps, more than anything else just now. Oh! that I could remove that that gives the dark side of humanity from all Christian homes, and leave in its stead a clean sheet, such as the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the Nashville Advocate, or some wholesome reading that would turn on the light of the gospel of the Son of God, in telling what God is doing for the world; but I am about to get to moralizing.

We have had less rain in this section of the country (so the old citizens say) than was ever known. The crop prospect was better than for many years, until the last long dry spell. We had some very warm weather for September. Thermometer registering 102 degrees for several days, about the tenth of September. Water is very scarce; some are hauling for two miles. But I will desist.

J. H. SMITH.

HICKORY FLAT CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed our round of protracted meetings on the Hickory Flat circuit, North Mississippi Conference. We, by God's grace, have passed through seven protracted meetings, one at each appointment, on the circuit. We have spent about eight weeks in this delightful work for the blessed Master.

We have had a good revival of religion at each appointment. Some places the revivals have been more powerful than at others. Bro. and Sister Collins conducted one of the most powerful at Myrtle. Their tent was pitched in a beautiful pine grove, near our academy, in that little town; and for more than six days, night and day, we had the pure gospel preached by them, which proved to be sharper than any two-edged sword. According to our reckoning, there were thirty-three souls converted, twenty joined our church. Praise God! One was sanctified. A number of backsliders were reclaimed, and joined the church again. We bless the Lord for these faithful evangelists.

Bro. Collins, on Friday, sold a beautiful "crazy quilt" which the good sisters of our charge had partly finished and presented for the missionary cause. It brought $22 05. Then the people, by a vote, gave it to the preacher in charge.

We have had, in all, sixty-six conversions, thirty-five added to our church, ten infants baptized.

Have sent to Dr. Kelley $15, and have, in cash and subscription, more than our entire Conference assessments. Therefore, we hope to have our report at Conference more than full.

Bro. Bareroft, presiding elder, has attended all our Quarterly Conferences thus far, and discharged his duties faithfully. Praise the Lord for a happy year thus far! God bless you and our good old ADVOCATE!

Fraternally,

W. M. ADAMS.

WALNUT GROVE CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: I have received and forwarded $5—our mite given during the week of prayer and self-denial.

We have held six protracted meetings and one camp meeting this year. The church has been revived, sinners converted; two new prayer meetings organized, and several family altars erected. We have baptized twenty-two infants, and have received forty-six persons into the church up to date.

A Common-Sense View of Sanctification.

Sanctification is the greatest degree of grace which we can attain this side of heaven. It may seem strange that the greatest earthly blessing should ever become a source of annoyance to the church or of misfortune to anyone. There are those, however, who attach an undue importance or degree of purity and power to this grace, and they seek it in that light. They pray and agonize for something, which alone has a place in an excited imagination; then, in their extremity, claim a supernatural manifestation to attest the truth of their faith. Hence a number of these persons, at a camp meeting in this vicinity, not long since, in the capacity of a holiness meeting, demanded, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, that an invalid lady present should rise up and walk. The imagination of such persons seems to become so excited and bewildered that it results in enthusiasm, fanaticism and insanity. We know of living witnesses of this sort. I first studied this doctrine, nearly fifty years ago, in the theological department of a big circuit. Mr. Wesley's Works was my guide-book. I was greatly comforted by his analogy between the natural and spiritual man. It was on this wise: The natural man, though an infant, is perfect in kind, yet imperfect in degree. He has as many eyes, hands and feet as he ever would have, though he were to live a thousand years. Yet he is an infant, helpless and dependent; and to develop into a perfect man it requires time and the use of adequate means. So it is of the spiritual man. Paul denominates the new-born soul, "A babe in Christ." John speaks of the different developments in the spiritual life, "Little children, young men and fathers."

In order to mature it requires time and the use of adequate means. Paul said: "Grow in grace. Leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection. As new-born babes, desire the sincere milk of the Word, that ye may grow thereby." God's plan is to wait. Christ commanded the apostles to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; yet they were required to wait at Jerusalem for ten days. Christ waited thirty years in preparation for a three years' ministry. "The husbandman waiteth for this precious fruit of the earth with long patience." "Be ye also patient," is the injunction. But we are to wait in the use of the means of grace. We are to adopt a system of holy living, of meditation, prayer and in reading the Scriptures in order; in attending the services and ordinances of the church; of doing good by feeding the hungry, clothing the naked and in sending the gospel to the heathen. To carry out such system it will require decision of character, firmness and a heroic courage. It requires a moral hero to be a Christian. By these means we grow to the full stature of men and women in Christ.

This is what we understand by "sanctification:" It is not absolute perfection; none but God is perfect in this sense. It is not angelic perfection, nor is it Adamic perfection. It is not a perfection in knowledge or judgment; hence we are always liable to errors and mistakes in practice. Though these are not imputed as sins, because not willful, yet they are sources of regret and trouble. It does not exempt us from infirmities either of body or mind. We are mortal and subject to disease, pain, decay and death. It is only a question of time when our sight will grow dim; our hearing, dull; our memory, treacherous, and when our circulation will be retarded, and when we will be inducted into the imbecility of a second childhood—a season of great humiliation. It does not exempt us from temptations incident to this probation, and if we yield to them, we sin, apostatize and may be lost. It does not exempt from spiritual depression and trouble. Such is our care, anxiety and solicitude for others, for the church, and for our kindred according to the flesh, that we would fain say, like David, "O, that I had wings like a dove, then would I fly away and be at rest." Perpetual sunshine alone has a place in the imagination, while in the body.

Sanctification is to have an unwavering faith—faith that sweetly works by love and purifies the heart. It is to have a hope confirmed, which is as an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast. The storms, incidents to a voyage on the ocean of life, may rage and surge and howl their requiem; but the anchor, being cast, it holds, as with steady hand, till the storm subsides, and a clear sky, a calm sea and propitious breezes are restored, and the soul moves on towards the haven of rest. It is to have love perfected which casteth out all fear; love which crowns the other group of graces, rendering them uniform, symmetrical and beautiful; love that bears, suffers and endures all things; love that never fails. When prophecies fail, knowledge vanishes and tongues cease, amid the ruin and wreck of these faith, hope and love abide and abound, rendering the saints defiant of the world, the flesh and the devil, and even death; so that, when reduced to a last extremity, they can say, like David and Job, "Though I walk through the valley of death, I will fear no evil;" or, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

Legality of Prohibition.

Why is the saloon a "privilege," while to manufacture and sell ardent spirits on one's premises, from fruit and grain produced on his own soil, is an "inalienable right?" What makes the difference? Is it the legislative act, or the clause in a State or Federal Constitution? If the question be so determined, then in this country it has been settled by the highest State and Federal tribunals that to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicants for common use does not violate the fundamental law of the land or the rights of citizens.

Chief Justice Taney says: "If any State deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens, and calculated to produce idleness, vice or debauchery, I see nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent it from regulating or restraining the traffic, or prohibiting it altogether, if it think proper." To the same effect are the rulings of Justice McLean, and others. Chief Justice Harrington, of Delaware, says, as I take from a quoted passage: "We have seen no adjudged case which denies the power of the State, in the exercise of its sovereignty, to regulate the traffic in liquor for restraint as well as for revenue, and, as a police measure, to restrict or prohibit the sale of liquor as injurious to public morals or dangerous to public peace. The subjection of private property, in the mode of its enjoyment, to the public good, and its subordination to general rights liable to be injured by its unrestricted use, is a principle lying at the foundation of government. It is a condition of the social state; the price of its enjoyment; entering into the very structure of organized society; existing by necessity of its preservation, and recognized by the Constitution in the terms of its reservation."

In accordance with these judicial utterances, and in confirmation of them, several of the States have taken legislative action on the question of prohibiting, by constitutional amendment, the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits as drink. To entertain such a question, and provide for the adoption or rejection of such amendment by vote of the people, is a sovereign act of the State, carrying with it the inseparable right of absolute control over the subject matter. If also the State can grant local option to counties, it can, with equal authority, prohibit from its entire territory. Prohibition of the saloon is not a measure against legitimate trade, but against vital and multiform injuries to justice, to "domestic tranquillity," to "the general welfare," to private virtue, to public morals, to the pursuits of business, to the integrity of home, to a right training of the young, and to virtuous social intercourse.

But will it be said that the saloon alone is the home and nurse of these fearful evils? The private wine-press or distillery or brewery will breed the same deadly evils. If the saloon be removed, and these be allowed to stay as an "inalienable right" to citizens, the "inalienable right" will quickly uncover on its own private homestead this whole bad brood of evils to common and personal interests. The logic which will destroy these evils by prohibiting the saloon, but protects them under cover of an inviolable private residence, flies in the face of good morals; is specious, trivial and false.

There are inalienable rights. Government can not destroy them, as it does not create them. They are from God, in the very relations men sustain to him, and to one another under him. It is not one of these to make and sell what blasts with its deadly breath every human interest and good. If government is for "the punishment of evil-doers and the praise of them that do well," then the whisky evils must go—by act of government as well as by moral suasion and Christian principle.

"Prohibition" is the single word which announces the legitimate doctrine and the true line of action against the rum power, whether vaunting itself with malicious delight in saloons garnished with enticing attractions for the tempted, or dealing its destructive mischief from behind the entrenchments of assumed personal rights and personal liberty on the soil of a private home. It is not to invade and violate that home, but to protect it—as the divinely given organic unit of both Church and State, as the nursery of industry and virtue—against the most remorseless destroyer of its integrity and happiness.

What Money Can Do.

Sitting in my study, I can hear from across the street the music of the saw and hammer, and I can see the plane and the paint-brush going; the outcome being the putting in thorough repair of a large building, in which is to be taught, very soon, a high school for the colored people.

I have just been musing on the matter. There came up before me visions of large classes of children eagerly pursuing knowledge; those same children, in a few years, with characters trained by Christian teaching, taking their places in the walks of life and the functions which such educated factors will perform in our civilization in time to come. Here is seed surely being sown. Every nail driven is a pledge of good results to follow. There is nothing shoddy about this business. There is amplitude of space, fidelity of workmanship, taste in ornament, and the furniture is to be abreast of the times. If anyone doubts that this institution will tell favorably upon the destiny of the negro race hereabouts, he has not read the signs as I have been reading them.

But whence this opportunity to the negroes? Left to their own resources, they might have toiled for many years before reaching such a result as this. Many times over they might have made the money and spent it for naught, which could have achieved the result of such an institution, because money can do nothing without a wise hand to direct it. To say that the negroes, in any average community, would spend ten thousand dollars within a few years for equipping an institution of learning in their midst, would be giving them credit for a much higher state of Christian civilization than they are entitled to. Thus by the stroke of one man's pen—the Christian benefactor who devotes this money—this colored community is actually set forward, we do not know how many years, in their march of civilization.

It deserves mention for the lesson it teaches us. There are many great causes of humanity which might be immensely helped forward if more men of wealth could be induced to invest their money in them. Large classes of our population are struggling against poverty, ignorance, vice, and all their accompanying miseries, and will continue so to struggle because the means of their deliverance is not at hand. It is not because there is not enough enlightenment, enough virtue and devotion to unselfish duty, but because this moral capital is not made available by the use of money in its behalf. George Muller's great orphanage work in England was not accomplished without money, whatever may be said in praise of his faith. Men of wealth have a great opportunity of signalizing the power of faith in them by their liberal gifts, and a responsibility that is commensurate with their opportunity. With their money they may unlock the treasures of knowledge and bring untold blessings to those who can never procure these without such help; or they may withhold more than is meet, hoard selfish wealth, and leave the world not less happy, but more miserable for their having lived in it.

From Rev. John Mathews, Pastor of M. E. Church, South, at Montgomery, Ala.

"Darbys Prophylactic Fluid is the only medicine kept in my family. We can use it for almost everything—burns, bruises, cuts, stings, ear-ache, tooth-ache, sour stomach, etc., etc. My children when hurt or bruised, always call at once for Darbys Fluid. We can not get along well without it. It is so valuable for its prompt relief of pain from all kinds of injuries, and also is a powerful Antiseptic and Disinfectant."

Some one in a large city church, the story goes, is said to have complained that his pastor was a good preacher, but an indifferent pastor. The same minister, with a smaller charge, had before been called a good pastor. The pastor's full calling list, with the record of miscellaneous work that taxed him day by day, was shown to the man, and he then and there changed his mind about some things. "I believe," he said, "that no one shepherd can care for more than four hundred sheep. When a church has more than four hundred members it ought to colonize or get an assistant pastor."—Standard.

Tutt's Pills

REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Habitual Costiveness

Causes derangement of the entire system, and begets diseases that are hazardous to life. Persons of a costive habit are subject to Headache, Defective Memory, Gloomy Forebodings, Nervousness, Fevers, Drowsiness, Irritable Temper and other symptoms, which unfits the sufferer for business or agreeable associations. Regular habit of body alone can correct these evils, and nothing succeeds so well in achieving this condition as Tutt's Pills. By their use not only is the system renovated, but in consequence of the harmonious changes thus created, there pervades a feeling of satisfaction; the mental faculties perform their functions with vivacity, and there is an exhilaration of mind, freedom of thought, and perfect heart's ease that bespeaks the full enjoyment of health.

SECRET OF BEAUTY

Is health. The secret of health is the power to digest a proper quantity of food. This can never be done when the liver does not act its part. It is the driving wheel in the mechanism of man, and when it is out of order, the whole system becomes deranged, and Fever, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Bilious Colic and General Debility ensue. To restore the functions of the Liver and impart that beauty which always attends a healthy constitution, Dr. Tutt's Liver Pills are recommended. They are not a cure-all, but are designed solely for the disordered Liver and the diseases which it produces.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1887.

It is with exceeding pain that we record the death of Rev. William Murrah, a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference. He died in Columbus, last Sabbath. We have no particulars. Bro. Murrah was a man beloved and honored by all who knew him. He had been preaching the gospel for over sixty years. We trust that a suitable memoir will be prepared for this paper, Bro. Murrah having been one of its original projectors.

Briefs.

"The law of the Lord is perfect: converting the soul."

Our Lord will accept no compromise with evil in any of its forms or degrees. "If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee."

We see it stated in one of our exchanges that a London paper has the following: "In our judgment, at least ninty-nine hundredths of the infidelity of this country is nothing more than attempts to satisfy certain idiosyncracies of envious people." The oftener we read that sentence, the more we are inclined to believe that it is true in this country also.

Prof. Barnard, formerly of Vanderbilt, now of Lick Observatory, California, says that the great telescope of which he now has charge brings him practically within thirty miles of the moon. With such an instrument, there is no telling what new wonders the celebrated comet-finder will discover in the heavens. We shall listen to hear unexpected and marvelous things.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has decided that the ordinance of the Boston city government, forbidding preaching on the Common without a license, is "legal and invades no man's religious liberty." In regard to this matter, "ungodly New Orleans" is better than "cultured Boston," for the authorities here have not refused to give permits to preach in the open squares whenever the request has been made in the proper manner!

The revival spirit has developed graciously at various points in this district. During the week past, there have been held protracted services in Baton Rouge, Donaldsonville and Algiers. The Word of the Lord has been preached faithfully, and sinners have been converted and saints edified. On the twenty-third of this month Rev. Sam Small will begin a week's meeting at Morean Street Church, and Bro. Kimball is expecting a gracious season. See his notice of the meeting in another column.

A writer in the Nashville Advocate, speaking of some acts of the Texas Conference, has this: "The wisdom of our Board of Missions, last Conference, is proving itself to be good. They decided to stop small appropriations, and make an appropriation that would justify the Bishop in putting strong men on our missions." Our experience in the home mission business demonstrates the fact that a small appropriation and a weak man always stop the growth of a mission into a self-sustaining work. In mission work, the most unfortunate combination is the combination of those two kinds of weakness. Strong men, backed by a liberal supply of money, is the way to success in missions as well as in other matters.

Soul-Food.

A correspondent writes: "I hope your trip has completely restored your health, and that you are ready to give us some editorials which will feed our souls from week to week." For all the sympathy and good wishes of our friends we are profoundly grateful, and constantly pray for a heart to appreciate and profit by such expressions of good-will. As to the restored health, the editor did not receive the benefit he expected; but he has settled down into the quiet determination to do the best he can, "whether sick or well," until the relief comes. It may come in a way not expected.

The second wish of our correspondent, that we may be able to feed the souls of our readers, opens up a most important topic. Sure enough, there is such a thing somewhere as soul-food! The spiritual nature needs food convenient for it. It is so constructed that it can not exist and perform its proper functions without being fed with the right kind of food. And yet this plain truth is not apprehended by a great many people. They live for years seemingly with no idea that God has provided abundant food for the nourishment of their spiritual natures. They appear to be utterly unconscious of the fact that they are spiritual beings. The consequence follows that their souls must be dwarfed and exceedingly weak. If such souls could be seen with the natural eye, doubtless they would present some such appearance as a starved physical nature presents.

As God's providence makes provision that every man who works shall have food for the physical nature, he also provides soul-food for those who make effort to obtain it. The same law holds in both the spiritual and natural realm in regard to this matter, and is announced with Scripture authority to be: "If any man work not, neither shall he eat." We think that some Christian people fail to appreciate this great fact. God does not—shall we say, can not—tolerate laziness anywhere. He has provided food in the sun and earth and seeds—enough for the growth and sustenance of all the millions that can be placed upon this globe. It is man's part, by labor, to develop and mature them into food; and if he fails, he eats not. In the redemption scheme, there are facts and doctrines and precepts, in which is concentrated food for the growth and sustenance of every being who has been redeemed. It is man's part, by study and work, to develop them and use them that he may be nourished up into the perfection of a spiritual manhood; and if he fails, that manhood can never be reached. This Scripture fact is not appreciated by many who call themselves Christians, and, hence, they are not "strong in faith," and their Christianity is weak and effeminate.

Very early in the history of redemption the Lord announced to the world what this soul-food is and where it is to be found. Through the mouth of Moses the announcement was made: "Man shall not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God shall man live." The same teaching runs through the New Testament. "The sower soweth Word," contains the idea that in the Word is food for the soul, just as in the seed is the germ of food for the body. "The words that I speak unto you, they are life," means that in "my words lie hidden the germs and potencies of spiritual life." Paul speaks of "holding forth the Word of Life"—that is, the Word that gives and nourishes the spiritual being. He also speaks of one being "nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine." The writer to the Hebrews has this expression: "Tasted of the good Word of God." Peter speaks of the "sincere milk of the Word." Thus the idea runs through the Bible from beginning to end that the spiritual nature needs food: and that food has been provided, and it is nothing else than The Word of God.

Soul-Feeding.

While it is true that there is abundant provision in the Word of God for the nourishment of the soul, and that this Word is in possession of hundreds and thousands of people, it does not follow that all these possessors of the Word are fed and nourished by the food which that Word supplies. There is quite a difference between food in the store-room and food in the stomach. A man may have a pantry full of good and edible things, and yet go hungry, and finally starve. So there is quite a difference between the Word of God on the center-table and the Word of God in the heart. Physiology teaches that food does not nourish the body until, through the process of digestion, it has passed into the blood. Food that is not digested had better be somewhere else than in the stomach. It is harmful rather than helpful. The analogy holds in regard to food for the soul. The Word of God, which is the Bread of Life, must pass through the intellect into the heart, and from that center send its streams of spiritual health to every part of the soul, before spiritual nourishment and growth can be hoped for. Feeding the soul, then, is as important a matter to the spiritual nature as taking food is to the physical nature. And yet, in spite of this plain fact, there are hundreds and hundreds of professing Christians who do not pay the spiritual store-house one visit a week on an average. Such a habit in regard to the body would soon reduce it to a skeleton painful to see, and every power of the nature would be so weakened that work would be out of question, and living become a grievous burden. The analogy holds again. Souls that are not fed not only can not grow and become strong, but they dwindle and weaken, and die of inanition. Soul-food and soul-feeding are necessary to spiritual life.

Now, life is something more than mere existence; and spiritual life is very far from being a negative thing. The word, in its truest meaning, carries with it the idea of expenditure of force. In a true life there is an incessant outlay of power. The muscular waste in the work to obtain daily bread renders the daily bread an absolute necessity to keep the waste from killing. The first end of food, then, is to repair the ravages which this incessant outlay makes upon tissue and muscle and bone, and to supply the physical machinery with new material for the development of new force. The analogy here holds in every particular. Spiritual life is an incessant and earnest struggle. It is work and battle from one end to the other. Nehemiah's workmen, building the walls of Jerusalem with one hand, and holding their weapons of war in the other, are types of the true spiritual life. Spiritual work wears away the spirit, just as manual labor wears the body. As bread is necessary to repair the waste of the body, the Word of God, which is the Bread of Life, is necessary to repair the waste that is continually going on in a true spiritual life, and to supply the spiritual machinery with new material for the development of new force. An earnest worker in any department of labor must be well fed, or he soon ceases to be an earnest worker. Hence, as a rule, we find that the earnest workers in the Lord's vineyard are the most diligent students of his Word. And when we find one who has ceased to be an earnest worker, if we look into the case, we shall find that he first ceased to feed his soul with the Word of God.

Looking at these plain facts, the desire of our correspondent to be fed from "week to week" is a most laudable one; and we do our best each week to present to our readers the nourishing truths of "the glorious gospel of the blessed God."

"The History of Methodism in Mississippi."

The first volume of this work is before me, and has been read with interest and pleasure. Clearness and simplicity are qualities of style essential in every good writer, and especially in a writer of history. These the author exhibits in admirable degree. The reader may doubt what the tenth rule for the government of the Mississippi Conference means, but the author of the book is not the author of that rule.

The charity of the writer is conspicuous throughout the book; censuring but seldom, and then sparingly, and commending often and freely. It seems to be a chief object with him to award due honor to all who bore any worthy part in laying the foundations of the church in Mississippi. Yet his candor is not concealed, as when he openly disapproves of the supernumerary and superannuated relations, of the manner of a certain brother's withdrawing from the church, and of the substitution of the benediction for a prayer at the closing of Conference session.

If the author's evident aim at impartiality falls below perfection in the estimation of any, let this be attributed rather to the nature of the case than to the purpose of his mind. Perfect impartiality is not attainable by one who writes largely from memory of men and their acts. The lack of perfect knowledge and the nature of human affections alike prevent it.

An especially commendable feature of this history is the extensive notices given to the laity of the church—both male and female. Christianity is usually in the family before it is in the church, the church being properly composed of Christian families. The preachers organized pious households into churches.

After reading these pages, Mississippians may realize, as they could never do before, that they are traveling home to God not only in the same faith their fathers had, but many of them along the same roads and paths over which their fathers traveled in their pilgrimages from earth to the heavenly land. The itinerant preachers of to-day are traversing regions every foot of which has been consecrated by the toils, the sufferings, the prayers and the deaths of their fathers in the ministry. That Christian soldier's heart must be cold indeed who can read of the perils and triumphs of those early days without having his soul fired with new zeal in the war against sin and Satan.

Traveling preachers! This book expounds the phrase, and reveals the fact that it contains the history of Methodism in two words. What travelers the early Methodist preachers were! John Wesley set them the example by embracing all England in his circuit. They did not hesitate to apply the plan to the boundless continent of America. Take a dozen of those pioneer preachers who came at the opening of this country to plant Methodism in the Natchez country, coming, as they did, from South Carolina, North Carolina, Baltimore, Kentucky, Tennessee and Ohio to circuits as far south as New Orleans, and below, and they must have traveled altogether more than a hundred thousand miles in twenty years, and that, too, on horseback, through savage tribes, over roadless wilds and bridgeless streams, in the days when steamboats were little used, when railroads were yet in the brains of their inventors, and buggies a luxury of the future. We must needs be worthy, and do well not to degenerate.

The printer has done his work well, there being scarcely a typographical error in the volume. Let our people get this book, and read it. It will do them good to know what sort of people our forefathers in Mississippi were. The lighter trials of our ministers now must appear as nothing when compared with the sufferings and hardships of those early days. W. L. G. B.

Centenary College.

We would announce, for the encouragement of the friends of Centenary College, and for the information of the public generally, that this institution has opened with a fair average number of students. We have a teaching force altogether adequate to meet the demands of the class-room in all departments. We have here a fine set of boys—studious, attentive to their work, in full harmony with the faculty, and with the religious element among them, large and pronounced. If parents will send us their sons, we think that we can safely promise that "we will do them good." May we not have a hundred students this session?
